ONE MAN IS DEAD AND THREE ARE INJURED IN TROLLEY-AUTO CRASH

Speeding Machine Sweeps From "Dead Man's Curve" in Peachtree Road Straight Into Street Car's Path

GEORGE M. MURPHY DIES BURIED UNDER WRECKAGE

Three Other Occupants of Car Are Picked Up Unconscious By Trolly Crew and Taken to Hospital

A flying automobile crashed into a trolley car on Peachtree road Saturday night.

One autoist, George M. Murphey, aged forty years, of 347 West Third street, owner and driver of the car, is dead, and its three other occupants, August W. Wofford, of 199 Hampton street, J. A. Christopher, of 19 Curran street, and L. J. Hearn, of 4 Lee avenue, are slightly injured.

The accident occurred about 9:30 o'clock at a point on the Peachtree road about 100 yards north of the famous "Dead Man's Curve," the scene of so many automobile fatalities.

An incoming Buckhead car, Motorman George Jones, and Conductor Samuel Gunter, was slowly approaching the beginning of the double track, when the automobile rounded the curve. Evidently the driver was blinded by the glare of the trolley's searchlight for he ran his machine, a light Ford, almost directly into the heavy street car.

There was a crash heard for blocks around. The machine was transformed into a tangled mass of splintered wood and twisted machinery and under this wreckage Murphey was pinned. He died of a fracture of the skull at the Atlanta hospital a half hour later without regaining consciousness.

The other three occupants of the car were thrown out and were picked up unconscious by the passengers on the trolley and occupants of passing machines, which rushed to the rescue.

STARTED TO JUMP.

Wofford, who is a bricklayer, was sitting on the front seat with Murphey. When the trolley loomed up in front he says that he started to jump and remembers nothing else. Wofford is at the Atlanta hospital, suffering with bad lacerations, but no bones are thought to be broken. Wofford got in the machine at the corner of Hampton and Peachtree streets at the request of Murphey, he says, and several times tried to get out, because the car was being run so rapidly.

Christopher and Hearn were in the rear seat, talking, they said, and didn't know that an accident was impending until the crash came. Christopher suffered a broken collar bone and other injuries. Hearn was battered and bruised, but was able to leave the hospital.

Mr. Murphey operated a shoe shop at 347 Marietta street, while Hearn has a wood and coal yard across the street.

The death ride started from this point, is said, and the two men picked Christopher up down town, and later called Wofford into the car.

The accident was investigated by Assistant Chief Matthewson, Lieutenant Chandler and Officer Mobley, of the county police, but no arrests are likely, it is said.

Mr. Murphey is survived by a wife and three little children — who didn't learn of the accident until late Saturday night. His body is at Greenberg & Bond company's establishment.

JAPANESE AMBASSADOR WOULD RENEW TREATY

Viscount Chinda Asks That Renewal Period Cover Five Years

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Viscount Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, has advised Secretary Bryan that Japan is willing to renew for another period of five years, her arbitration treaty with the United States, which expires by limitation August 24.

Secretary Bryan, making the announcement today, said he expected the senate would ratify the new arbitration treaties already signed with Great Britain and other countries, despite the opposition against them. No date for signing the Japanese renewal has been determined.

The senatorial opposition originally was voiced by Senator Chamberlain, who insisted that in renewing a treaty with Great Britain specific exceptions should be made to remove the Panama canal tolls controversy from the field of arbitration. The question of arbitrating with Japan the issue of the California alien land law also has been a subject of discussion among senators opposed to renewing that arbitration treaty.

President Wilson has had frequent conferences over the arbitration treaties with senators. Members of the foreign relations committee have been frequent callers at Secretary Bryan's office.

Mr. Bryan today would not say upon what representation he based his expectation that the arbitration treaties would receive senatorial approval.

CANDLER DECLARES TAX RATE OF CITY SHOULD BE RAISED

With This Should Go Reduction of Assessments, to Relieve Atlanta Taxpayers of Heavy State Tax Burden

ALDERMAN SAYS CITY MUST FACE SITUATION

Revenue Sufficient Only for Current Operation, and Improvements Cannot Go Forward Without More Money

In an interview on the city's financial situation, given to The Journal yesterday afternoon, Alderman John S. Candler declares that the city faces a troublesome situation and that the way to meet it is by raising the tax rate.

In advocating a raise in the rate, however, he says there should be a reduction in the assessments in order to relieve the taxpayers of the unjust burden of state taxes which they now pay.

His method of raising the rate is by means of a special school tax, and in this connection he favors a reorganization of the board of education on the basis proposed by the Candler-Hopkins charter, town's reducing the membership of the board from twelve down to five or seven, electing the members from the city at large instead of from wards, and fixing high qualifications for eligibility to serve on the board.

Alderman Candler says the city is now wasting much money because of a lack of money to make certain city institutions remunerative. He says every department in the city government is hampered by lack of funds. He says half the people are suffering for lack of proper streets, etc., he says the city with its present income can hardly expect to do more than keep its departments running and its property in repair.

The interview touches on the situation generally, and coming from Alderman Candler, one of the ablest men in council and a recognized leader in that body, it will doubtless be read with a great deal of interest.

WHAT HE SAYS.

It follows:

"I am not a pessimist nor an alarmist, but on the other hand I believe that we live in the best city in the country. I want it to continue its past progress in every direction that tends to the health, happiness and highest welfare of our people.

"I think that at this time we are facing a crisis, yet one that is capable of being met without calling a halt in the past progressive policies of the city.

"Atlanta is still young, is not even half grown, and I for one do not think we should do anything to stunt its growth or retard its onward march.

RAISE IN TAX RATE.

With many good reasons, I think I could justify a raise in the city tax rate as one remedy for our present condition. With this raise in the rate, however, there should go hand in hand a reduction in assessments. Under present conditions, the burden of supporting the state government is on less than a dozen counties of the state. Approximately that number of counties get less money from the state treasury than they pay into it. The counties that pay more to the state than they get from its treasury are those in which the property is assessed by impartial assessors at something like one-half of the market value. In the other one hundred and thirty-six some taxpayers give in their property at the same fair proportion of market value, but far more give in for taxation at far less than half. In order that the few counties that are paying more than their just proportion of state taxes should be put on an equal footing with those which are paying less, either the assessments of the latter must be raised, or the voluntary contributions of the latter must be in some way raised. I think the former would be easier of accomplishment than the latter. We can not think of reduction of city assessments at this time, however, under the conditions which confront us, without a corresponding raise of city tax rate. If the city rate was raised, the state assessment could be reduced, and this would result in a like reduction of county and state contribution.

SPECIAL SCHOOL TAX.

"If the raising of the rate in Atlanta is to be accomplished, I can see but one way in which personally I could have any hope for success, and that would be to amend the charter of Atlanta on the line suggested in our proposed charter, that providing for a truly and thoroughly representative board of education with fixed high qualifications, to be selected from the city at large, to consist of not less than five nor more than seven men of the highest character obtainable, and then give into the absolute control of such a board our schools and the funds necessary to run them and the power to govern them. I believe that with

FRANK A. HOOPER TO AID STATE IN FRANK TRIAL

Former Solicitor at Americus Engaged to Assist Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey

That the trial of Leo M. Frank will be a legal battle as brilliant as any ever fought in Atlanta is assured by Solicitor Dorsey's announcement that Frank A. Hooper, Atlanta lawyer and former solicitor general of the southwestern superior court circuit, has been retained to assist the prosecution.

With the case of the state in the hands of Solicitor Dorsey and Mr. Hooper and the defense resting with Luther Z. Rosser and Herbert Haas the contest is certain to be replete with the unexpected.

Frank A. Hooper, who is Solicitor Dorsey's choice to help the fight of the state, is distinguished as a state's solicitor of twelve years experience. No lawyer at the Atlanta bar has seen a similar service as a prosecuting attorney. For this period he acted as solicitor to the southwestern superior court circuit at Americus. Following his term as prosecutor he practiced law in Americus being recently identified with such criminal trials as the Childers trial in Americus and the Cain trial in Cordele. In each of these cases in which the accused was acquitted Hooper appeared for the defense.

He came to Atlanta four years ago as an associate of the late Governor J. M. Terrell.

Pitted against Solicitor Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will be Luther Z. Rosser sometimes known among his confreres as "the best all-around lawyer in Atlanta." Herbert Haas, a young but experienced attorney, and possibly others.

The report has been persistent in Atlanta for a week that another prominent Atlanta attorney known as a brilliant criminal lawyer is to be associated with the defense. While this report has not been verified there are those who are confident that the defense will be augmented by his weight before Frank faces a jury in the stuffy little Thrower building court room.

In making his announcement that Mr. Hooper was to assist in the Frank prosecution Solicitor Dorsey said that while Mr. Hooper had been his choice, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coleman, parents of the slain girl, had been consulted, and they directed him to employ such counsel as he deemed fit. The solicitor asserted that the Colemans had approved the employment of Mr. Hooper.

"SEPTEMBER MORN" TO SHIVER AND WAIT OFFICERS' DECREE

"Nothing Wrong Legally," Says Recorder Broyles, After Viewing Lissome Lass in Whitehall Street Store Window

September Morn has been saved. The young lady in all her loveliness who caused such a furore in Chicago and New York, and who set the police department of Atlanta by the ears Saturday afternoon, is not to be barred from showing her nymphlike form in Cole's book store window—at least, not for a day or two, anyway.

No less a person than a judge, Atlanta's own city recorder, has been the indirect means of saving Miss September from the fate which overtook the well remembered "gal in the fountain" a few years ago.

In the nick of time, just as an officer was pausing on the threshold of the book store with a copy of charges against H. S. Cole in his pocket and a firm determination to raid the window in his mind, the wise counsel and artistic point of view of the judge stopped him.

Following his visit to the book store Saturday morning and his exit with one of the numerous September Morns safely tucked away under his arm, Assistant Chief Jett visited Willis M. Everett, censor of motion pictures.

FIRST EXPERT ADVICE.

Mr. Everett told the chief that September Morn was "high art," right enough, but perhaps a little bit too low to be exposed to the public gaze.

Satisfied that the painting was somewhat au fait, the chief's next move was to discover whether City Ordinance 1763, which prohibits the exhibition of "indecent" pictures or statues in public places, would apply to this maidonna of the sea.

He took down the big dictionary from the shelf at headquarters and thumbed the pages.

"Obscene," muttered the chief to himself. "Offensive to chastity or modesty. Hmm-m-m!"

He looked up "indecent." The chief scratched his head, considering the while the vision his mind's eye conjured up of that shrinking, delicate figure, before Frank faces a jury in the stuffy little Thrower building court room.

In making his announcement that Mr. Hooper was to assist in the Frank prosecution Solicitor Dorsey said that while Mr. Hooper had been his choice, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coleman, parents of the slain girl, had been consulted, and they directed him to employ such counsel as he deemed fit. The solicitor asserted that the Colemans had approved the employment of Mr. Hooper.

DENY THERE'S DISCORD BETWEEN GA. SENATORS

Sensational Reports of Break Over Patronage Distribution Discredited

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The situation with reference to federal patronage in Georgia is far less aggravating and a crisis far more remote than some of the sensational newspaper stories from Washington would seem to indicate.

There is reason to believe that there will be no break between Senators Bacon and Smith, and that A. O. Blalock will be nominated for internal revenue collector, as previously forecasted in these dispatches.

It is confidently believed that Senator Bacon will not continue to object to Mr. Blalock, and it is known that Senator Smith will continue to cooperate with his colleague in an attempt to secure a desirable government post for Calvin M. Hitch, of Atlanta.

The internal revenue collectorship at Atlanta, it is pointed out, is no more "state-wide" patronage than is the custom collectorship at Savannah, the control of which has been claimed by Senator Bacon.

Under the proposed reorganization of the customs service the district of Georgia will be consolidated and headquarters established at Savannah just as internal revenue headquarters are

GENTRY, FOUND BY JOURNAL, SAYS NOTES WILL SHOW ENOUGH TO JUSTIFY WHAT WAS SWORN TO

"Upon Reading My Notes Before the Court It Will Be Proven That There Is Enough of It There to Justify What Was Written and Sworn to by Me as Being Practically the Gist of What Was Said," Says Young Stenographer of Dictograph Records Transcribed by Him

"I WAS ALLOWED TO READ PROOF OF WHAT WAS PUBLISHED ABOUT FELDER CONFERENCE," HE SAYS

"As Far as What The Journal Published, Will Say, as Far as I Can Remember, What They Printed Were the Facts in a General Way, and the Changes Were Immaterial." Located by The Jounaal's Washington Correspondent, Gentry Talks Freely.

By Ralph Smith

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 14.—Living under an assumed name and holding a lucrative position as an expert stenographer, George M. Gentry, of Atlanta, who made the famous dictograph notes, was located in Washington today by The Journal correspondent. He has been here since May 27. He left Atlanta via the Southern railway on the evening of May 26, following the Felder exposure. He claims to have seen no one from Atlanta other than E. O. Miles, and The Journal correspondent, though he is in communication with the members of his immediate family.

Gentry's real identity is unknown to his employers, and at his request his present address and the place of his employment are withheld by the correspondent. Their publication, he believes, might cause him unnecessary annoyance.

"I left Atlanta because I feared that I might be arrested for perjury," he said.

Gentry today voluntarily made an affidavit, elaborating and elucidating the statements contained in the affidavit he recently gave to E. O. Miles. This affidavit, made today, was sworn to and subscribed before Isaac Heidenheimer, of 1226 Pennsylvania avenue, notary public, for the District of Columbia. It was witnessed by Senator William Hughes, of New Jersey and Congressman Frank Doremus, of Michigan.

The original and a carbon copy are in the possession of The Journal correspondent, and Gentry himself has a copy. The affidavit was written by Gentry, without suggestion or dictation from anyone.

"Unfortunately I did not go into enough detail in my previous affidavit, hence the necessity of making a further one," swore Gentry today.

Continuing the affidavit says, "I neglected to mention in same (the Miles affidavit) that I was allowed to read a proof of what The Journal published, in connection with the Felder conference. This conference was transcribed first and printed in Friday's issue of the Journal. The other conferences, all of which were held Wednesday afternoon and evening, preceding the date of publication, were not published until after the Federal conference was published. I made one or two changes in the proof of the Felder conference, this being the only proof I was allowed to see. As I remember in one instance, I had written the word "intrude" and my notes contained the word "intruding."

Further affiant this I do not remember of any change that I made in same, with the exception of ordinary corrections, such as marking mis spelled words, adding periods and commas, and striking them out."

Gentry swore today that he received absolutely nothing for writing his previous affidavit and that he did not receive one penny for writing the affidavit today.

WHY HE GOT FRIGHTENED.

"I allowed myself to become so frightened because I thought that according to law, if one change was made from what I had in my notes, I had committed perjury and was liable, and as I had myself made several changes during the transcribing of the notes, I felt rather guilty. However, Mr. Febuary assured me that I was writing what had been said and so I accordingly swore that what I had written was what I had heard. I discovered later that what I had sworn that what I had written was a true and correct transcription of my notes. I did not realize at the time of signing the affidavit that I had sworn any such thing or I would have not signed the affidavit. The affidavit that I signed in connection with the transcription of my notes, was dictated to me and I signed it before a notary public without reading same in detail. I simply glanced over same to ascertain as to the correctness of the typewriting.

THE JOURNAL'S STORY CORRECT.

"As far as what The Journal published is being correct, will say with the exception cited, as far as I can remember, what they printed were the facts in a general way, and the changes were immaterial with the exception of how they might be considered in law, about which I know very little.

"I have already stated under oath that I did not hear the names of Chief Heavers or Chief Lanford mentioned in the Woodward conference I desire to modify this to the extent that I did not hear their namer mentioned by Mayor Woodward. They may have been mentioned by other parties in the room. In fact, as I remember it, they were.

"In conclusion will say upon the reading of my notes berore the court it will be proven that there is enough of it there to justify what was written and sworn to by me as being practically the gist of what was said.

"The Journal's position in the matter as far as I know is fair, and I believe, although I do not make the positive assertion, that what they published was given to them by Colyar, Febuary and myself.

Gentry declared in his affidavit that when it was found necessary or advisable for him to return to Atlanta he will return, and will read his original notes before the court. He says that they will not be read before any private individual or body, and he desires that what he reads shall be taken down and compared with what he wrote.

TELLS WHERE HE HAS BEEN.

In reference to leaving Atlanta, Gentry says in his affidavit:

"I will start by giving an account of my movements since the memorable dictograph affair. I have already set fourth my reason for leaving Atlanta, in my affidavit published on June 11, 1913, as aforesaid. My original intention was to go to Baltimore, but upon my arrival at washington, I did not go any farther, feeling that this city was large enough to get lost in. The day after my arrival here, Wednesday, I went to work as a stenographer, but not under the name of Gentry. My reason for assuming another name was to avoid the attendant annoyance that would follow the knowledge that I was in Washington. I can be reached through Mr. Ralph Smith, The Journal's correspondent here, whenever it is necessary, both my business and residence address."

While Gentry makes no reference to the matter in his affidavit, the original note book is now in the possession of a well known Atlanta attorney, whose name is known to The Journal correspondent.

SPEER SENDS GEORGIAN TO ATLANTA PRISON

Thomas Mims Given Four Years for Sending Threatening Letter to Mother

MACON, Ga., June 14.—Thomas H. Mims, of Elko, Ga., was today sentenced by Judge Emory Speer in the United States court to serve four years in the Atlanta federal prison for sending a threatening letter to his mother. Mims demanded a sum of money and the demand was accompanied by a threat. His mother placed the letter in the hands of the postal authorities and Mims' arrest and conviction followed.

GEORGIA DENTISTS TO MEET IN ATLANTA NEXT

COLUMBUS, Ga., June 14.—Atlanta was selected as the next meeting place of the Georgia State Dental society at the closing session here this morning.

POSTMASTER CONVICTED OF EMBEZZLING $838

Henry S. Jackson, of Williamson, Sentenced to Serve Thirty Days in Jail

MACON, Ga., June 14.—Henry S. Jackson, former postmaster at Williamson, in Pike county, must serve thirty days in jail or pay a fine of $838 for embezzling a sum of that amount.

The jury in his case in the United States court yesterday afternoon found him guilty, but recommended him to the mercy of the court.

In passing sentence today, Judge Speer expressed a deep sympathy for the defendant. He followed the statute in imposing a fine to the amount of the sum embezzled, but when Mr. Jackson said he was unable to pay the fine, having sold his home in order to reimburse the government, Judge Speer then gave a minimum sentence of thirty days in jail.

"I am sorry for you," he told Mr. Jackson.

ELEVEN LOSE LIVES IN CAVE-IN ON NEW SUBWAY

Five Hundred Laborers Summoned to Dig Out Men Entombed Underground

NEW YORK, June 14.—Eleven lives are believed to have been lost in a disastrous cave-in 80 feet underground on the new subway construction at Fifty-sixth street and Lexington avenue this evening, when 13 men of a crew of 32 drillers and laborers were entombed.

At 10:30 o'clock six bodies had been recovered and five were reported still buried under many tons of rock and earth. Two injured men were rescued, but one of them probably will die.

Five hundred laborers were quickly assembled at the scene in an effort to dig out the buried men. According to the police and fire authorities, it may be hours before some of the bodies are reached. There appears to be no hope that any of the men have escaped death.

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the cave-in was due to a blast or the collapse of timbering. There are two levels to the subway construction at this point, the upper one for local trains and the lower one for express trains. It was the ceiling of the latter tunnel which caved in. A policeman who gave the first alarm following the accident stated that he heard a loud blast and it was at once succeeded by the cries of wounded and dying.

Robert Ridgeway, engineer in charge of the public service commission, after an investigation, announced that the cave-in was directly traceable to a blast. The rock at this point is faulty, he said, and the shoring timbers gave away for a distance of 20 to 25 feet.

Firemen early on the scene discovered that a rock weighing several tons had fallen on some of the buried men. It could not be moved by the means at hand and probably will have to be blasted before the bodies underneath it can be recovered. Three priests descended into the tunnel in excavation buckets to administer the last rites of the church if any of the men were rescued still alive.

Most of the dead whose bodies have been recovered were foreigners and their identification awaits the tallying of the numbered brass checks found in their clothing.

DENY THERE'S DISCORD BETWEEN GA. SENATORS

located at Atlanta. If Senator Smith's right to control the internal revenue collectorship should be seriously questioned, because it is "state-wide" patronage, it is believed possible that he would then claim a share in the Savannah collectorship, on the same ground.

He might object to the nomination of David C. Barrow, Senator Bacon's choice, and submit the name of some person more acceptable to himself.

But, as indicated, there is small chance that the matter will take that course, and the nomination of Mr. Blalock is confidently expected to be made by the president in due course of time.

If the Blalock nomination goes through, there will remain then only one piece of senatorial patronage to be finally and definitely settled. That will be the district attorneyship for southern Georgia.

The contest for this place will continue to be an open fight. This statement is predicated upon the assumption that A. Pratt Adams will not be nominated for the office. That Mr. Adams will not be nominated is regarded by many as more than an assumption. The issue will be not decided for some months yet, as Alex Akerman, of Macon, has been requested by the attorney general to hold on until the first of the year.

Robert M. Hitch and Fred Saussy, of Savannah, are applicants for the district attorneyship. So are Robert L. Berner, of Macon, John F. West, of Thomson, and J. Thomas Hill, of Cordele. Mr. Saussy, who is a Princeton graduate, has the indorsement of National Chairman William F. McCombs. It is not known what weight, if any, this indorsement will carry.

In view of the fact that his position has been considered senatorial patronage, and subject to the control of Senator Bacon, the names of none of the applicants have been pressed at the department of justice, pending definite action of Mr. Bacon's purpose to recommend Mr. Adams.

If the senator stands pat on Mr. Adams and the department declines to name him, as is believed, the contract for the attorneyship may assume lively proportions. Several of the south Georgia congressmen may take a hand in the contest, urging the nomination of an applicant from among their constituents.

Of course, if Mr. Adams should withdraw his name and decline to allow Senator Bacon to present it, the whole matter might be adjusted through the recommendation of another man by the senator.

ALBANY IS PEER OF PROTECTED CRUISERS

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The Albany, Commander L. L. Bristol, is the peer of the protected cruisers of the navy in elementary gun practice, with a rating of 42.344, the navy department announced today. The Des Moines, Commander A. S. Long, with 15.575, and the Cincinnati, Commander J. V. Chase, with 11.582, came next in order of merit.

In the gunboat class, the Mayflower, Commander M. A. McCully, stood first with 53.998, the Villalobos, Lieutenant E. Durr, second with 38.60, and the Elcano, Lieutenant Commander Sinclair Cannon, with 27.30, was third.

this condition the power to levy a single tax for public schools within certain reasonable limitations would willingly be accorded by the taxpayers of the city. With the school system not dependent for support upon the funds now raised under the present rate, Atlanta could with ease take care of her other departments of government, every one of which is now suffering for lack of adequate and reasonable support.

MORE MONEY NEEDED.

"We are wasting much of our expenditure now, because of a lack of money to make much of our present investment remunerative. If, for instance, we now had $75,000 with which to build and equip a nurses' dormitory at Grady hospital, we could with the balance of the splendid plant increase our income as much as $125,000 per year, besides greatly increasing our nursing force and as a consequence the efficiency of the hospital, not to speak of the added comfort for the self sacrificing women who, greatly overworked, are giving their best years to the sick and suffering of our city. To do the best work, these ladies should be comfortably housed, and should have at least a place where during their necessary resting hours they could have reasonable privacy.

"At Battle Hill sanitarium, for the care and treatment of those infected with tuberculosis, for the lack of room we are turning away daily some who are greatly in need of treatment, which we should be in position to give. We have no recreation hall but one children's ward, and not near enough rooms to care for the needs of such an institution. We have nothing to attract the people whom we ought to attract in order to get the full benefit of the investment and the appropriation of funds which we are making. As an institution, we are merely marking time, and with present facilities, can but disappoint those who have worked so hard for its establishment, and have hoped so earnestly for its success.

MORE SCHOOLS NEEDED.

"It has recently been shown to the people the great need we have for better and more adequate school facilities. I think that every dollar of the last bond issue that was spent on Grady hospital and on building new school houses was well spent, and I think that our school system would be greatly benefited and that we would get far better returns for what we are spending if we could have not less than $500,000 for the erection of suitable buildings, suitably located for our high schools, and at least three new grammar schools, one for white children, and two for negroes.

"These two departments of our city government touch the whole city in its most tender and vital place. Care for the sick and the afflicted appeals to every one. The training of our chil*dren is our most vital problem.*

"We cannot stop there, however. I know but little of our sewerage questions, but I do know, as does every other person in the city, that good health is dependent on good sewerage, and no city with a high health record can make any other sort of good record. We all want good streets. With our present income, I do not see how we can expect to do more than keep in repair those that we have. We must all confess that at this time we are not doing this, and half the people of the city are suffering for a fair road upon which to reach their homes.

"I think every city in Georgia is interested in my proposal to amend our state constitution, so that two-thirds of the voters participating in a bond election may authorize the issuance of municipal bonds. Under the law as it now is, one dead man on the registration list is equal to two live ones at the polls. One voter qualified in every way but in interest in the welfare of the city, may stay away from the polls, and kill two votes of men who really care for its progress.

"We must carefully and prudently consider our needs and must patiently, considerately and conservatively find a way to meet our real necessities, and in no event must we permit this city to stand still or go backward in those things which tend to make its health good ,its life sound, and its growth continuous. With these, and its high moral atmosphere and good climatic conditions, we can foment in the world a city that is good to live in."

BIBB DAIRYMEN DIP CATTLE TO KILL TICKS

MACON, Ga., June 14.—The Bibb county dairy institute held a meeting yesterday at the chamber of commerce and decided to make a more thorough application of the cattle tick dip to their herds, while they have a government official to instruct in the work.

After every dairyman in this county selling milk in Macon has had his herd properly treated, they will take steps to have all cattle from the surrounding counties kept away from the local mar*ket, unless they* have been given the tick treatment. They also hope to stop the sale of shipped milk here if possible.

R. L. Knight, J. A. Young, T. E. Edwards and Edward Knight are the main officers of the institute.

Her body was found by her husband about 10 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Bush had been in ill health for some time. She was well known throughout this section. Her funeral will be held tomorrow morning.

MOTHER AND FATHER SEE CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH

Explosion of Oil Stove Starts Fire—Parents Hurt in Attempt to Rescue

(By Associated Press.)

SHAWANO, Wis., June 14.—Three children met death, their father, August Nebauer, was fatally burned and *the mother seriously hurt as the re*sult of a fire which destroyed the temporary home of the farmer twenty miles east of here today.

The parents were working in a field when a kerosene stove exploded, setting fire to the small house in which the children were sleeping.

*Before the father reached the burn*ing building two of the children were dead. He snatched the sixteen-months-old baby from its burning cradle, but the child died in his arms. The father's clothing became ignited. The mother rushed to the aid of her husband and she, too, was set on fire.

W. W. MARTIN FALLS FIVE FLOORS TO HIS DEATH

His Son Fails to Stop Father's Fall Down Elevator Shaft

Before the eyes of his son who had stepped from the elevator in front of him, William W. Martin, eighty-three years old, of Decherd, Tenn., was dashed to his death shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon when he fell down the shaft from the third floor of the Third National bank building to the sub-basement five floors below.

In the elevator at the time were his son, Theo W. Martin, his daughter and his son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Carter, and another son, E. H. Martin. The party boarded the elevator to go to the office of Mr. Carter, who is the general agent of the Atlanta & West Point railroad. When the car reached the third floor Theo W. Martin stepped out first and Mr. Carter followed him. The father stepped from behind the elevator man as the lift started upward, and one foot reached the floor. The other, in the car caused him to lose his balance and with the door open he was forced toward the opening. The bare fraction of a section before the human form disappeared, the son turned and was quick enough to grasp the coat of his father. The hold was not good, however, and in another instant the body shot downward and out of sight. Mr. Martin held on with grim determination for a few seconds, but as he stood there upon the brink, knowing all the while that a slip or false step meant certain death, the coat all that held his living father, began to slip from his fingers. And then there before his very eyes the body loosed from his frail grasp and dropped to the basement below.

SON RUSHES DOWNSTAIRS.

The son rushed down the stairs and into the lower basement where he found a number of negroes congregated there waiting for their pay. None had heard the sound of the falling body and insisted to Mr. Martin that there had been no noise whatever in the basement. A light was procured, and there in a pool of water was found the lifeless form of his father, fearfully mangled from the terrible contact. His left leg was broken in five places and the right in two. His head and face were not badly bruised but the body itself was horribly mashed and distorted. Death had apparently been instantaneous.

Coroner Paul Donehoo, the police and detectives were on the scene within 15 minutes, but an inquest was not deemed necessary, and the body was taken to the undertaking establishment of H. M. Patterson & Son.

WIFE PROTECTS HIM.

The man who was running the elevator at the time was J. W. Nichols, of 96 Simpson street. As he was being questioned by the police and newspaper men, his wife, a frail little woman, trembling from excitement, stood with her arms about him, her eyes seeking his, the picture of despair. Some of the motley curious who had gathered had hinted at his arrest, and she was shielding him. But no arrest was intimated by the officers, and only his name and address were taken for the formal report.

According to Nichols, both Mr. Carter and his brother-in-law had stepped from the elevator and it had again started upward when Mr. Martin stepped from behind him and threw open the door just before it closed and attempted to step out. One of his feet reached the floor, but the other was drawn upward by the car. This caused him to slip, throwing the body down the shaft.

WAS 83 YEARS OLD.

Mr. Martin was 83 years of age, and was a familiar figure in Atlanta, especially at the Masonic temple. He was a Royal Arch Mason and took a lively interest in the order. For 35 years he was a memberof the county court of Franklin county, and up to two years ago was recorder and treasurer of Decherd, Tenn., where he lived. Since then he had retired from active work and was especially fond of paying visits to his sons, as was the case Saturday.

Mr. Martin is survived by six sons, Theo W., N. E., M. P., of Atlanta; E. B., I. H. and Clyde Martin, of McComb City, Miss.; two daughters, Mrs. E. S. Carter, of this city, and Mrs. J. W. Mason, of Decherd, Tenn., with whom he lived; two brothers, J. D. and N. R. Martin; two sisters, Miss Mary Martin and Mrs. John Saunders, of Winchester, Tenn.

The body will be sent to the home in Decherd today for the funeral and interment.

Baldwin was for many years associated with the Columbus Ledger in the capacity of a traveling representative, during which time he made thousands of friends in Western Georgia, who will be pleased to learn of his appointment in Washington.

DANGER IN MEAT EATING

Medical Reports Show That People Who Eat Much Meat Are Susceptible to Typhoid Fever.

The death rate of Typhoid has been 10 per cent for many years. Even if patient recovers, there is danger. Weakened constitution, languidness, loss of energy, and other after effects.

In a majority of cases typhoid fever is directly traceable to an inactive liver which has refused to clear away the masses of meat particles left undigested in the alimentary canal. This mass putrefies and sends out death-dealing poisons, to result in typhoid fever.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is the greatest known liver stimulant. Its action is gentle, yet effective. It draws water to the alimentary tract, flushes the stomach and bowels, washes away the undigested meat particles and removes the danger of fermentation. The blood is purified through the renewed activity of the liver.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT does not cause nausea and vomiting, and there are no dangerous after-effects as with calomel. Don't take an inferior substitute; many imitate the name but cannot produce the same natural, flushing action of the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. At all druggists, 25c. If your druggist cannot supply you we will mail full size jar upon receipt of price. postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Wants An Education

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Who lives in the country near Elberton, Ga., has been rendered a cripple for life through the loss of a leg. He is ambitious and wants to learn bookkeeping.

A little boy living in the country near Elberton, Ga., bears the distinguished name of Jefferson Davis. About three years ago he was seized with a disease known as the white swelling, and to save his life it became necessary to amputate one of his legs. This, however, failed to dampen the ardor of his ambition though he is poor and his father, a laborer, is financially unable to assist him towards getting an education.

Seven grades in the local school have been passed and he feels that he must soon make his own living. The boy has heard of the Georgia Children's Home society and is anxious to find out if it is possible for him to get a business training there. He wants to learn book-keeping.

Is there any one who will help him? Robert B. McCord, superintendent of the society, with offices in 401 Foote & Davies building, is anxious to hear from any one who will assist in aiding this little cripple.

TO ILLUSTRATE SERMONS WITH LANTERN SLIDES

Rev. W. R. Hendrix Plans Interesting Program for Summer at Wesley Memorial

Rev. W. R. Hendrix, pastor of Wesley Memorial church, has arranged a series of illustrated sermons for the summer months and will give the first one this evening.

Stereopticon slides will be the means of illustration. They will precede the sermon, furnishing the background and setting and introducing the discourse in a vivid, interesting way.

Slides will be used also to illustrate the hymns, and for this evening a special feature of the music will be a selection by the full church orchestra.

For the mid-week prayer service on Wednesday evening Mr. Hendrix plans a popular and recreational program consisting of motion pictures and brief addresses. He will speak next Wednesday evening on the significance of the Wednesday half-holiday, which was recently inaugurated by the grocers and butchers of the city and promises to be joined by other merchants.

At the morning service today Mrs. Carrol Summey and Mrs. J. E. Bosley will sing a duet.

Mr. Hendrix will preach at both morning and evening services.

ALUMNI OF TECH PAY FITTING TRIBUTE TO FIRST PRESIDENT

Dr. I. S. Hopkins, First President and Man Largely Responsible for the Founding of Big Institution, Was Honored by Alumni

The presentation of a mammoth loving cup to Dr. I. S. Hopkins, Ph.D., LL.D., by the alumni of the Georgia School of Technology, was one of the most interesting and timely events of the recent twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of that institution.

Dr. Hopkins was the first president of Tech, and was at the helm during the first ten years of its life. But Dr. Hopkins is more than the first president of the institution. Without him there would probably be no Georgia Tech at the present time, and the tribute of the alumni was a fitting recognition of Dr. Hopkins' great work.

The beginning of the Georgia Tech was really at Oxford, instead of Atlanta, and Dr. Hopkins was then president of Emory college. He had there a little two-room workshop, where he installed all sorts of machinery, especially that for wood work, which was his hobby. Gradually the students commenced to visit the shop of their president, and it was only a short time before about forty of them had secured woodworking tools and Dr. Hopkins was conducting a regular class.

This little class with Dr. Hopkins as the instructor formed the nucleus from which the present Georgia School of Technology sprung. The 800 students and its splendid equipment has grown. Owing to the prejudice then existing against textile schools in the south, which now can scarcely be conceived of, the work at Emory was discontinued.

Dr. Hopkins gave up the presidency of the institution, and championed the movement for the establishment of a state technological school.

Hon. N. E. Harris, present chairman of the board of trustees of the school, presented the bill in the legislature, and despite the fact that the prejudice of the times resulted in attacks from the press and the pulpit on the proposed institution, Georgia Tech was established.

Dr. Hopkins, as the first president, devoted his intellect and his energy to the upbuilding of the institution with wonderful success.

In 1897, when the institution was well on the road to its present success and the opposition to it had, to a large measure been dissipated, Dr. Hopkins was with difficulty persuaded by the late Bishop J. S. Keener, of the Methodist Episcopal church, to leave his great work and return to the active ministry of the church. Dr. Hopkins had brought Prof. Lyman Hall to the Tech as a professor of mathematics, and he was named as the second president of the institution.

After leaving Tech, Dr. Hopkins served successively as pastor of the First Methodist and Trinity Methodist churches, of Atlanta, and the First Methodist church of Athens.

After a servie as a minister and an educator for a period of more than half a century, Dr. Hopkins retired from active life, although he is now connected with the official family of Governor-elect Slaton and will be in the executive office under the new administration.

C. V. LECRAW ADDRESSES INSURANCE CONVENTION

Besides the Atlantian, who is southern superintendent of agents for the company, the only other speaker on the regular program was the governor of Indiana, Hon. S. M. Ralston.

Buying Diamonds On Partial Payments IS MONEY SAVING

Our plan is offered to anyone who promptly meets their obligations. To have a regular amount to meet each month and to know that it is for something worth while, prevents the waste of salary and income that otherwise is trifled away for things of no intrinsic value.

Diamonds possess a constancy of value given only to gold. Wearing them gives an air of prosperity and success, a cultivated finish to the toilette. One of the great humorists transposed a familiar quotation into "Them who has, gits." Nothing succeeds like success.

We insure the value of your Diamond in that we contract to buy back our diamonds at 90 per cent of purchase price at any time within one year, and always allow just what you pay for it in exchange for a larger diamond. You can run no risk in buying our diamonds.

We mean that you can buy from us a $100 diamond, wear it for an entire year, and return it to us and get $90.00 for it. Our small margin of profit of 10 per cent being all that you pay for the pleasure of wearing a handsome ornament a whole year.

If you desire to exchange it for a larger diamond at any time we would allow you $100.00, your full purchase price, for it and our plain figure cash prices enable you to make the exchange at the same price as if you were paying all cash. On account of the constant increase in the price of diamonds, we can frequently allow more than the original price.

Whether you buy on our deferred payment plan or for all cash, our prices are just the same. We accept notes from those whom we are assured are worthy of credit and divide the payments over as much as ten months if desired.

Our Diamond Book No. 5 tells all about our plan and more. We would like to send you this book No. 5. A postal will bring it.

Judge Preston's Advice To Mistreated Wives Is Hit Blow for Blow

City Recorder Pro Tem. Preston has his own ideas about dealing with wife beaters. He goes a step further than Theodore Roosevelt, who suggested a public whipping post for such offenders.

Judge Preston thinks that a wife is justified in taking the law into her own hands and punishing her husband, even if she has to use a stove poker to do it.

"If your husband slaps your face, pick up the first handy object that can be converted into a weapon and go after him," is the advice he gave to one woman from the bench Saturday afternoon.

Judge Preston was trying the case of John Fleming, accused of mistreating Mrs. Fleming. The latter testified that her spouse had struck her with his open palm following a verbal outbreak Friday night.

"I'm a believer in equal rights," said the judge, in making his decision. "I would advise any woman who is mistreated by her husband to sail into him herself and give him what he deserves."

Strike Lasts Six Hours

MILAN, Italy, June 14.—A general strike of the workmen of all trades was proclaimed here today as a protest against the condemnation to prison of eighteen workmen who were arrested for various offenses during the recent strike at the iron works.

The authorities have taken energetic measures for the maintenance of order. Thus far quiet has prevailed. A party of strikers last night cut the gas pipes in one district.

The strike was called off at noon and most of the men returned to work.

"September Morn"

HAND painted water color photogravures of Paul Chabas' nude painting, "September Morn," all one window of the Cole Book company and instead of harsh criticism excited only pity, which was due to the fact that the manager of the store took occasion to select about the coldest June day in the history of the city's weather for this art exhibition.

The original painting excited no end of comment when brought to this country for exhibition purposes. It was first placed in one of the windows of a Fifth avenue art gallery, and was promptly spied by one of Anthony Comstock's agents, who demanded that it be taken out or he would go to the courts. Afterwards Comstock himself decided the picture was nothing to shock anyone, according to newspaper accounts at the time, and agreed with the manager of the art gallery that it was artistic.

The picture was sent from one large city in the east to the other and caused more comment than any painting in years. It is now in one of the big European art galleries.

The figure is that of a young blonde haired girl, who is about to take her bath, and is said to be the same model as the figure in "Twilight" by the same artist. "September Morn" was exhibited in the last Paris salon, and received high praise from the artists in the Parisian capital.

The cut represents only the figure, which occupies a small part of the picture. Just bare outlines of mountains are seen in the distance, which rise from the water through a misty haze. The coloring is most delicate. The reproductions in the Whitehall street store are two different sizes.—(Advt.)

ADVOCATES OF WARNER COUNTY OPEN CAMPAIGN

Will Open Headquarters in Atlanta Prior to Meeting of Legislature

A movement, lead by citizens of Manchester and supported by practically all the voters of a large section of the country surrounding the town, is underway to have a new county established.

Warner is proposed as the name of the new county, in honor of Justice Hiram P. Warner.

O. L. Little, of Manchester, was in Atlanta Saturday making arrangements for opening headquarters for the county campaign. He states that his citizens have been organized several weeks and have already secured pledges of support from a large number of the legislators. After June 20 Mr. Little and his associates will have headquarters in the Kimball house, from which they will divert an active campaign to secure the new county of Warner.

Mr. Little stated that it was the desire of those seeking the new county to have it made up of the southwest portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeast portion of Harris. It is planned to have the new county occupy an area of 222 square miles, with a population of 10,500 and taxable values amounting to over $2,000,000. It is stated that it will leave each of the counties effected by the new county with a greater territory than some hundred other counties in the state.

Mr. Little points out the fact that Manchester is located on the line of Meriwether and Talbot counties and that it is eighteen miles to the county site of either. He says, also, that Manchester is growing very rapidly and that the population of the town has doubled since 1910. He states that the country surrounding the town is developing very rapidly and that the citizens are anxious to have their county site nearer home.

ETHICAL LECTURES TO CONTINUE NEXT FALL

Committee Gets Liberal Response and Will Arrange a Splendid Program

Planning for the continuation next fall of the splendid series of free lectures recently concluded for the season of 1912-13, the committee for ethical lectures of Atlanta announces that 120 citizens of Atlanta and neighboring towns have sent in to the committee the return post-cards recently issued, expressing their interest in having the lectures continue.

Believing that the idea of democracy in America is ethically valueless that does not include all human beings, the committee has had as lecturers during the past season men of recognized power of thought who write and think only in terms of humanity such as Dr. Felix Adler, Dr. Edward Howard Griggs, Alfred W. Martin and Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott.

For next season's lectures in Atlanta Dr. Adler as head of the ethical movement, and Mr. S. Burns Weston, of the Philadelphia Ethical society, secretary of the American Ethical union, have promised their assistance.

Dr. Horace Bridges, of the Chicago Ethical society; Mrs. Caroline Spencer, of the New York School of Philanthropy; Dr. Percival Chubb, of the St. Louis society; Dr. David Saville Muzzey, of the New York society; Dr. C. DeLisle Burns, extension lecturer of the University of Oxford, England, and others suggested not directly associated with ethical societies, will form the splendid list of lecturers from which the committee will be free to choose.

It is desired to so increase the number of those interested that instead of taxing about forty people with the total expense of bringing the lecturers to Atlanta—as has been done during the past season—it will be possible to assess a large number a small amount, for the six or eight lectures of next season. The nature of the lectures during the past series, and the fact that they are given by men and women who come to Atlanta only for the good they may do in a city so vigorously in the making, should bring a stiff greater response of interest. Those who have not mailed in the return post-cards sent them are invited to do so promptly, and those who have not received cards and are interested are asked to write to the chairman, M. H. Wilensky, Box 976.

HERE ARE HOLIDAYS FOR EXCEPTION ON DEMURRAGE

For the benefit of Georgia shippers, the state railroad commission Saturday morning specifically designated the legal holidays excluded from the time limit that applies in the forty-eight-hour car demurrage rule.

These holidays are set out as follows:

January 1, New Year's day.
January 19, Lee's birthday.
February 22, Washington's birthday.
April 26, Memorial day.
June 3, Jeff Davis' birthday.
July 4, Independence day.
First Monday in September, Labor day.
Thanksgiving day, as proclaimed by the president of the United States.
December 25, Christmas day.

Under the demurrage rule the railroads are permitted to charge $1 per day for cars held by consignors or consignees after the forty-eight-hour period. However, this rule provides that Sundays and legal holidays and days when the weather is unreasonably inclement shall not be included.

The designation of the legal holidays was made as the result of a letter received by the railroad commission from the Thomasville Iron Works, which inquired if May 30, federal decoration day, should be included in the list. The commission replied that this holiday is not recognized in the demurrage exemptions.

ATLANTA FINDS CHAMPION IN PHILADELPHIA PASTOR

Dr. Holderby, Cousin of Atlantian, Says Social Conditions Here Are Best

Atlanta seems to be the field selected by many ministers of Philadelphia for investigations of vice conditions.

The city was startled some weeks ago by the announcement that Rev. Zane Batten, of Philadelphia, claimed to have been accosted by nineteen different women during a short walk up Peachtree street, and that a friend of his, who walked on the other side of the street, was accosted by twenty-one women.

Now, however, a defender of conditions in Atlanta has sprung up in the Presbyterian ministry of Philadelphia. He is the Rev. William H. Holderby, a cousin of Dr. A. R. Holderby, the well-known Atlanta minister.

Dr. Holderby, of Philadelphia, walked the streets here until 2:30 a. m. he relates, and he was not accosted by even one. Better still, he pays tribute to the Atlanta police, and then he goes still further and attributes the statements of Rev. Batten to pique because one of his schemes was not carried out here.

A dispatch from Pittsburg gives the following account of Dr. Holderby's defense of Atlanta:

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

"PITTSBURG, Pa., June 14.—Declaring that the statements of Rev. Samuel Zane Batten and Rev. William Patterson, both of Philadelphia, who said that Atlanta was the most immoral city in the south, were entirely erroneous and actuated by a desire to discredit the police department and the newspapers of Atlanta, the Rev. William H. Holderby, a prominent social reform worker of Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and a cousin of Rev. A. R. Holderby, of the Moore Memorial church, of Atlanta, took issue with the Philadelphia ministers and attributed their 'statements to a plain case of 'sour grapes,' they having failed in their own plans for the moral cleansing of Atlanta.

"Rev. Mr. Holderby said that he was in Atlanta at the recent meeting of Presbyterian ministers, and that he investigated the one-time tenderloin and the central sections of Atlanta.

"Although I was about the streets until 2:30 in the morning, I was never solicited by a woman," he said, "and saw no evidence of disorderly houses.

"The police work has been admirable, and the work of private citizens in conjunction with the city officials has succeeded in placing Atlanta among the leading cities in regard to stamping out the social evil.

"The big Georgia city is entirely free from those conditions which the Philadelphia ministers would want northerners to believe."

"Rev. Mr. Holderby is pastor of the South Side Presbyterian church, of Pittsburg, and is conducting a campaign with the social workers of this city."

A committee was appointed to co-operate with a like committee from the Fulton County Medical society to suppress its use until further developments.

The committee appointed by the medical staff was composed of Dr. J. E. Sommerfield, Dr. Allen H. Bunce and Dr. George M. Niles.

BRITTAIN ASKS SUPPORT FOR SMITH RESOLUTION

State School Superintendent Urges Congressmen to Help School Recognition

State Superintendent of Schools M. L. Brittain is interested in the resolution introduced in the United States senate by Senator Hoke Smith, which provides for the appointment of a commission to investigate legislation of the character proposed by the defeated Page-Lever bill, which had for its object federal appropriations for industrial education in all the states of the union.

Superintendent Brittain feels that the enactment of such legislation will be a great thing for Georgia and, therefore, he has written to every congressman from this state urging that he use his influence to have the Smith resolution passed by the house of representatives.

Following is a copy of the letter which Superintendent Brittain has written to the various congressmen:

"Atlanta, Ga., June 14, 1913.

"Dear Sir: National aid to vocational education is of more importance to us in Georgia and in the south than to most of the eastern and western states. As a rule we are not expending—nor able to expend—more than four or five dollars annually on each child for educational training. Some of the northern and western states are able to secure three or four times this amount. I earnestly hope, therefore, that you will give cordial support to the joint resolution introduced in the senate by Hon. Hoke Smith which asks the president to appoint a commission to investigate legislation of the general character contemplated by the Page-Lever bill.

"Yours truly,

"M. L. BRITTAIN,
"State Superintendent of Schools."

CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Facts

CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Pianos are made in their entirety in one great plant. It is the plant of the world's greatest manufacturers of Pianos and INNER-PLAYER Pianos

Most Players are assembled instruments. CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Pianos are not only not assembled, but their makers go a step further than other Player makers. For they make their own metal parts, and they design and build the special machinery on which these parts are made, in order to secure the greatest accuracy and precision.

CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Pianos are solidly built.

Greater strength is necessary in a CAROLA INNER-PLAYER than in an Upright Piano. One is used and enjoyed by all, while the other is only occasionally played.

And so the makers do not use an ordinary piano case and insert the Player in it, as is commonly done. They build the CAROLA INNER-PLAYER from top to caster to meet the special requirements of an instrument sure to be in constant demand.

CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Pianos are equipped with every device necessary to give you a perfect command of musical expression. Most of these are exclusive, patented devices found only in the pianos carried on our floor.

Come in and investigate this perfected type of Player in a line so complete as to afford you the best opportunity for making satisfactory comparisons.

CAPTAIN SPRATT AGAIN CAPTURES STATE SHOOT

Brilliant Marksmanship Featured National Guard Rifle Matches at Camp Evans

Climbing from seventh to first place by brilliant marksmanship in the skirmish shooting, Captain W. T. Spratt, of Atlanta, inspector of rifle practice for the Fifth regiment, won the state championship in the National Guard shoot at Camp Evans Saturday. He scored 531 out of a possible 600 points.

Captain Spratt's victory was spectacular. He won his lead in the skirmish shooting Friday afternoon and clinched the championship by making a remarkable score at the practice at 1,000 yards, winning the Stockdale medal, a trophy offered for the best score at that distance.

At the termination of the shoot officers who had participated voted it the most successful ever held by the Georgia National Guard. The competition in the matches, especially in the team contests, was sharp, and it took good shooting for the Fifth regiment team, which finally captured the team prize, and incidentally the Anderson trophy, to nose out the Second regiment team.

WINDER COMPANY TEAM WINS.

A feature of the match was the shooting of the team of Company H, Third infantry, Winder. This outfit, picked from a single company, won third prize in the team contest. It was composed of Warren Hale, who, a year ago, at Camp Perry, O., won the world's championship at surprise fire practice, and his two brothers. One of these, Private Ewell C. Hale, took down the Drummond medal for surprise shooting Saturday. He made 97 out of a possible 100 points.

By his victory in the individual competition, Captain Spratt won the distinction of having captured the state championship twice in succession, and leading National Guard marksmen for the third time.

According to the plan arranged, the marksmen who finished within the first thirty will take part in an elimination contest to be held at the Fort McPherson range some time in July or August to qualify as members of the team which will represent Georgia at the national shoot at Camp Perry.

STATE TEAM OF FIFTEEN.

The state team is to be made up of the best fifteen shots in the National Guard, a team of twelve men with three alternates to be selected from the runners up in the state shoot. Competition in the final shoot at Fort McPherson will be keener perhaps than the shooting at Camp Evans.

Scores for the winners in the individual shoot, Saturday, were: Captain Spratt, first, 521; Sergeant Metcalf, Coast Artillery Corps, Savannah, second, 502; Lieutenant P. A. Dickinson, Company H, Second Regiment, Monroe, 496; E. C. Hale and Sergeant W. S. Hale, Company H, Third Infantry, Winder, fourth and fifth.

LIST OF MEDAL WINNERS.

Team trophy winners were:

First—Team 1, Fifth Infantry, Atlanta, winner of the General Anderson trophy, with 2,457 out of possible 2,600 points.

Second—Team 1, Second Infantry, Macon, winner of Colonel John S. Candler trophy, score 2,374.

Third—Team selected entirely from Company H, Third Infantry, Winder, Mason trophy, score 2,101.

Other teams finished as follows: Fourth, Governor's Horse Guards, Atlanta; fifth, Squaded Team; sixth Team 2, Fifth Regiment, Atlanta; seventh, Team 2, Second Infantry, Macon; eighth, First Infantry, Savannah; ninth, Team 3, Second Infantry, Macon; tenth, Team 4, Second Infantry, Macon.

Individual medal winners were:

Daniel medal for highest score, 200 yards, slow fire, won by Major Claude C. Smith, judge advocate general Atlanta, 86 out of 100 points.

Kicklighter medal, highest score, 600 yards, First Sergeant O. J. Metcalf, Savannah volunteer Guards, 92 out of 100.

Dunwody medal, 200 yards surprise fire, disappearing target, won by Private Ewel C. Hale, Company H, Third infantry, Winder, 97 out of 100.

Scott medal for skirmish fire, won by Corporal J. R. Cothran, Company D, fifth infantry.

Stockdale medal, 1,000 yards, won by Captain W. T. Spratt, Jr., Atlanta, 91 out of 100.

Crankshaw medal for highest aggregate score and state championship, won by Captain Spratt.

AMONG THE RUNNERS-UP.

Among the militiamen who will compete in the elimination shoot as a result of their showing in the state match are: Captain Spratt, Sergeant Metcalf, Corporal Cothran, Private Holeran, Lieutenant Dickinson, Sergeant W. S. Hale, Private E. C. Hale, Major Smith, Captain Rudesail, Sergeant A. S. Brown, Lieutenant S. P. Cronheim, Sergeant W. R. Brown, Major Wheeler, Private D. L. Hale, Lieutenant Tupper, Sergeant Anderson, Lieutenant Armstrong, Sergeant Hatcher, Sergeant Burpitt, Captain R. G. Taylor, Corporal Nolan, Lieutenant Wynne, Sergeant Altick, Captain Chandler, Sergeant Murray, Sergeant Bohannon, Lieutenant West, Private J. A. Williams, Sergeant Rabey, Sergeant Gresham, Sergeant Saye and Sergeant Briscoe.

A Foolish Clause of The Income Tax Bill.

The Atlanta Real Estate Board has taken a timely and well warranted step in protesting against certain clauses of the federal income tax bill now before Congress. As to the general purpose and spirit of the proposed law, there is no valid cause for complaint, but in some of its details it is manifestly crude and unless revised in these particulars it will result in endless confusion and possibly grave injustice to business interests.

Especially defective is that clause of the bill requiring tenants to hold up at its source of origin the amount of income tax which property owners may be due the Government at the end of a fiscal year. Inasmuch as there has been some doubt as to the precise meaning of this provision, we quote directly from the bill which has passed the House and is now pending in the Senate:

"All persons, firms, copartnerships, companies, corporations, joint stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, in whatever capacity acting, including lessees or mortgagors of real or personal property, trustees acting in any trust capacity, executors, administrators, agents, receivers, conservators, employers and all officers and employes of the United States having the control, receipt, custody, disposal or payment of interest, rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensation, remuneration, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable annual gains, profits and income of another person, exceeding $4,000 for any taxable year, other than dividends on capital stock, or from the net earnings of corporations and joint stock companies or associations subject to like tax, who are required to make and render a return in behalf of another, as provided herein, to the collector of his, her or its district, are hereby authorized and required to deduct and withhold from annual gains, profits and income such sum as will be sufficient to pay the normal tax imposed thereon by this section and shall pay to the officer of the United States Government authorized to receive the same; and they are each hereby made personally liable for such tax."

It is difficult to follow the import of so Brobdingnagian a sentence; but it seems certain that the method provided therein for the collection of the income tax would, in some instances at least, be as confusing as the sentence itself. And more than that, it would open the way for gross injustice. As the Atlanta Real Estate Board points out, such a plan would expose landlords to heavy losses from irresponsible tenants who, after withholding from their rent-payments the income tax as required by the Government, might disappear before the time for official reckoning and returns arrived.

That consideration aside, however, it remains evident that the Government has no right to require private individuals to collect a Government tax. Such a policy would be unwise and unfair to the tenant as well as to the landlord. Indeed, this entire scheme for holding up the tax at the source of its origin is so ill considered, so unbusiness and inherently foolish that it should not receive a moment's favorable consideration.

This protest, as we have said, has nothing to do with the general purpose of the income tax measure, which is warmly to be commended; but for the interest of the law itself as well as that of individuals this and all other clumsy details should be properly adjusted.

Next thing on the program is complaint about the heat.

Indications are that there is no falling off in the attendance on the ball games.

A Great Chorus Concert Today.

The concert of the Music Festival chorus at the Auditorium this afternoon will be the most interesting event of the kind since opera week. Organized about a year ago by the Atlanta Music Festival Association and trained by Dr. Percy J. Starnes, this chorus has earned South-wide distinction and has added much to the city's pleasure and musical fame. It is one of the largest choruses in America, numbering between four hundred and five hundred voices, and its productions are unusually pleasing and impressive.

The fact that today's concert will be the last the chorus will give this season will be an additional factor in attracting a large audience. Like all other Sunday afternoon entertainments given by the Music Festival Association, this entertainment will be free.

The Ollie Taylor Fake.

In its recent editorial on the now threadbare Ollie Taylor case, the ever interesting Saturday Evening Post falls victim to the same unfounded rumors that have misled many well-meaning journals. Though not mawkish or denunciatory as others have been, the Post assumes that Georgia is barnacled with a statute under which a boy not yet in his teens may be sentenced to the chaingang or to the reformatory for stealing a five-cent bottle of sodawater and that, if sent to the reformatory, he must remain there until he is twenty-one. "Undoubtedly," says the popular weekly, "the Legislature passed the act in one of those troubled, sleep-walking dreams to which all legislatures are more or less subject."

The facts are, as a thorough investigation by Miss Julia Lathrop of the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Commerce and Labor, has shown and as everyone by this time should know, that Ollie Taylor was not sentenced to the chaingang nor to a reformatory until he should reach his majority for having stolen a five-cent bottle of sodawater. On the contrary, he was given what in effect is an indeterminate sentence, not because of the particular theft, but because of a long series of offenses which showed that for his own as well as the community's good he should be placed under the guardianship of the State. And just so soon as Ollie Taylor gives evidence of reform and of his ability to become a good citizen, he will be released. He is held at the institution to which he was sent not as a matter of punishment but as a matter of wholesome discipline and education; and unless his case proves a very rare exception he will come forth in due season law-abiding and capable of honest self-support instead of the confirmed criminal he might have been had he been left unrestrained in his waywardness. Indeed, the Ollie Taylor case, when fully understood, becomes not a reproach but a credit to the State of Georgia.

These facts have been given such publicity that it is difficult to see how any well-informed person can still be in ignorance of them. They were fully set forth in Miss Lathrop's report, to which we have referred, and were published in the Congressional Record. If half the sympathy that has been wasted on this fiction were intelligently applied to the real problems of juvenile reform we should have a better America.

With an emergency and an elastic currency both, what better could one want?

Of Interest to Bird Lovers.

Through the influence of conservationists and nature-lovers, there was placed in the new tariff bill, as it passed the House, a clause prohibiting the importation of the feathers or plumes of certain rare and beautiful species of wild birds for other than scientific or educational purposes. This provision met the public's hearty approval and it was expected that it would pass the Senate without challenge, inasmuch as it would impose no hardship upon any worthy interest but would ally the United States with other thoughtful governments in a world-wide movement to check the ruthless slaughter of valuable birds.

It seems, however, that Senator Clapp, of Minnesota, has introduced an amendment which, if adopted, would greatly weaken, if not in effect destroy, the usefulness of the House provision. Students of bird life declare, indeed, that the proposed amendment would throw open the doors to the slaughter of about one hundred species of birds which ought to be protected and would mean the extermination of such beautiful pheasants as the impeyan, argus, Reeves, Amherst and trapogans.

Georgians in general and school and college folk, together with members of women's clubs and sportsmen's associations, in particular have shown themselves keenly interested in the movement to protect bird life against wanton butchery. There is good reason to believe, therefore, that they will exert their influence in favor of the original House provision and against the destructive amendment which has been proposed. Certainly they should do so.

Alas, when a man is too lazy to work on the sympathy of his friends.

Folks who fall in love at first sight learn to believe in second sight.

But the yawning grave never tries to excuse itself on the ground that it is the weather instead of the company.

Where Georgia Lags.

Efforts to secure a compulsory school attendance law for Georgia will be renewed at the approaching session of the Legislature with greater vigor than ever before and with a brighter prospect for success. Several praiseworthy measures of this character have been introduced within the past few years and have been favorably considered but because of one petty circumstance or another they have failed of passage. In the meantime, public sentiment has waxed keener and public judgment more mature in its demand for such legislation. If the members of the General Assembly soon to meet are in touch with the dominant thought of their constituencies and are duly considerate of the State's educational welfare, they will pass a compulsory school attendance bill.

Representative Fullbright, of Burke, it is announced, will introduce a bill providing that children between the ages of seven and twelve years shall attend school at least sixty days each year. It may be said of Mr. Fullbright's measure if it has been correctly reported that it is at least as temperate as anyone could desire. Naturally, the first law of this character will be milder than succeeding laws, when the general plan will have been duly tested and thoroughly understood by all the people.

The important thing is that Georgia should bestir herself to her vital needs in this regard and make a practical beginning in discharging her long-neglected duty. This State is one of the only six in all the Union that have no provision whatsoever for compulsory school attendance. That fact is not only a disgrace but a serious injustice to our citizenship. In behalf of the State's good name and the rights of its children, let some adequate measure of this kind be enacted this summer.

Don't kick about your vacation. Think of President Wilson forcing himself to work all summer.

Prof. Taft ought to take those Yale students down to Washington for an object lesson in government.

The Need of an Adequate Navy.

Until the United States has an adequate navy in both the Pacific and the Atlantic it will linger on a treacherous border land between security and danger—a condition, which for the sake of our nation's peace and welfare, should not be suffered to continue.

This country has some twenty-one thousand miles of seacoast to protect. It has numerous harbors with large cities; it has coaling stations remote from the mainland; it has Porto Rico and Hawaii and, for the present, the Philippines; most important of all it has the Panama canal with the far-reaching responsibilities which that vast enterprise imposes. In addition to this great rim of exposed territory, the United States is committed to certain vital policies, the maintenance of which demands a sufficient navy; witness the Monroe doctrine and the neutrality of the Panama canal.

Our country has been singularly fortunate in escaping foreign entanglements and it is devoutly to be hoped that its future in this respect will be as happy as its past. But our desire for continued peace should within itself impel us to take such measures of defense as will command international respect and not lapse into such a state of unpreparedness as will invite hostility.

Battleships, it has been truly said, are cheaper than battles and while American sentiment is opposed to extravagant or belligerent policies it is heartily in favor of a navy strong enough to safeguard national interests. To this end, Congress should provide for the building of at least two battleships a year. It was the Democratic party under the administration of President Cleveland that began a well considered program of naval development. That prudent policy should be continued by the party today until as we have said, there is an adequate naval force in both the Pacific and the Atlantic.

The seamy side of life is much like the other with the polish rubbed off.

And many a man's idea of being stylishly dressed is to wear a necktie that would start a riot at a funeral.

The Baby's Nurse.

One of the most timely and useful bulletins recently issued by the State Board of Health is that dealing with the homely business of selecting a baby's nurse. The chief merit of this bulletin lies in the fact that those who prepared it have gone fully and emphatically into commonplace details. Most of the things worth saying on any subject have been said thousands of times; and because of that very circ*umstance they need to be* repeated from different points of view and thrust with new stress into the thought of each generation. Indeed, it is not the imposing philosophies but the humble facts of life that are most difficult to grasp and that betray our loose methods of thinking and acting.

The Board's bulletin is entirely within the truth when it declares that some people seem to have the idea that "any old sort of a girl will do for a baby's nurse." Persons who would exercise great care in selecting a gardener or a dressmaker will pick up the first female they can hail from their door and entrust her with the care of a baby's happiness and health and life. "They do not stop to think," as the Board says, "whether there is consumption or other contagious disease in the house the nurse comes from, nor do they try to find out if the nurse herself is free from disease which their baby might easily contract.

In "Peter Pan," there is mentioned a colony of pathetic little children who fell out of their perambulators in babyhood "when their nurses were looking the other way" and drifted to the "Land Where the Lost Boys Go." Many a baby passes, not mysteriously but naturally and heart-breakingly from its parents because it has been entrusted to a nurse who "looks the other way." There is a world of wisdom in the bulletin's questions: "Do you know where the nurse goes with your baby when she takes it out for a walk? How do you know that your helpless baby is not lying in its carriage with the sun beating into its eyes, while the nurse is idly gossiping? How do you know that your baby, that is dependent on you for protection is not playing on the floor in some negro shanty amid dirt and filth, or is being fondled by some unfortunate sick person who is fond of children but ignorant of the danger to which the baby is thereby exposed?"

The Board's bulletin concludes with the sound admonition—Don't keep an untidy or irresponsible nurse and try to excuse yourself by saying "She is the best I can get." Better no nurse at all than such a one. This is seasonable counsel which, if consistently followed, will do much to take away the world's heartaches.

Commissioned-Governed Cities

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

In giving some data as to the spread of the commission form of government for cities Collier's makes note of the fact that only thirteen states now have no commission government cities.

The question has been agitated, however, in all these states. It is worthy of remark that the obstacles in the way are either unfriendly legislatures or rigid constitutional provisions. In Pennsylvania, for instance, a number of thirdclass cities have been fighting for four years for the passage of a bill that would allow them to adopt the new plan. About the same situation exists in New York state.

The list, which formerly included only small cities is rapidly expanding. Jersey City recently adopted the commission plan and is the fourth city having a population of 200,000 to adopt it. St. Paul and Denver will become commission-governed cities next year. There are six cities in the list having a population between 100,000 and 200,000. These are Oakland, Birmingham, Memphis, Omaha, Lowell and Spokane. Commission government exists in sixteen cities of from 50,000 to 100,000 population, and in thirty-one cities between 25,000 and 50,000 population. It is to be noted that Collier's list of cities between 100,000 and 200,000 does not include Dayton, which very recently has voted for commission government in an advanced form.

The largest city in the south that is under commission rule is New Orleans. There are many other commission cities in the south, the only states in which there is none being Virginia, Georgia and Florida. Louisiana has nine commission cities and Alabama has six. Kentucky has two, with others getting ready for it. The map is being enlarged so fast as to need revision every few days.

Servant Girl and Grocer's Boy

Her lips' remark was "Oh you kid!"
Her soul spoke thus (I know it did):

"O king of realms of endless joy,
My own, my golden grocer's boy.

I am a princess forced to dwell
Within a lonely kitchen cell,

While you go dashing through the land
With loveliness on every hand.

Your whistle strikes my eager ears
Like music of the choiring spheres.

The mighty earth grows faint and reels
Beneath your thundering wagon wheels.

How keenly, perilously sweet
To cling upon that swaying seat!

How happy she who by your side
May share the splendors of that ride!

Ah, if you will not take my hand
And bear me off across the land,

Then, travel from Arcady,
Remain awhile and comfort me.

What other maiden can you find
So young and delicate and kind?"

Her lips' remark was "Oh you kid!"
Her soul spoke thus (I know it did.)

Daredevil Photography

A naval photographer gets many duckings, and, after a time, takes them as a matter of course. Being thrown into the sea isn't considered by him at all a serious event. It is during battleship practice that he encounters grave dangers, for much of the work done at this time is from the tops of the fighting masts, which are at an elevation of 120 feet above the sea.

During different practices I have taken my position in these masts in order to get detailed pictures. Once in these basketlike tops, the question is how to "stick." The gun fire photographs itself. I suppose you wonder what I mean, but it is just this: Every time the big twelve-inch guns fire, the awful concussion they cause invariably gives the snap to the shutter of the camera, and the exposure is made.—From "Risks of Photographing Battleships in Action," by E. Muller, Jr., in the July St. Nicholas.

"But I don't work on a farm," replied the rural citizen.

"Where, then, may I ask?"

THE PHILIPPINES

III.—THE ASSEMBLY.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

An important part of the Philippine government which does great credit to Americans and Filipinos alike is the Philippine assembly. When the Philippine islands became an independent republic the grant and organization of this legislative body by the American people will be referred to as an act of great national faith in the untried and often doubted ability of the Filipinos to legislate. It also will be pointed out as the turning point in the political aspirations of the Filipino people.

• • •

The organization of the Philippine assembly rises above local interest. It is of general historical importance because it has the signal honor of being the first and only legally constituted legislative body among the many millions of Malay people. It was the second institution of the kind in the history of the entire orient, being preceded only by the opening of the Japanese diet in 1890. It is much more of a people's instrument than its fellow in Japan, for orders of nobility do not control its acts and no administrative officer, not even the president of the United States, can dissolve it. Its laws, when concurred in by the Philippine commission or upper house, can be annulled only by an act passed by a majority of both houses of the congress of the United States.

• • •

By authority of congress, the Philippine assembly was formally opened in Manila, October 16, 1907, following six years of civil government, during which the Philippine commission, with an American majority, was the sole legislative and executive body. The act of congress which provided for the assembly stipulated that the Philippine government could create it only after a period of two years of domestic peace. Consequently, brigandage and other disorders, including budding insurrections, delayed the boon. Affairs in the island settled down to a reasonable extent after the reconcentration camps ordered by Governor General Luke E. Wright for the provinces of Batangas and Cavite, near Manila, in 1905. These camps were maintained for a few months, and during that period the writ of habeas corpus was suspended.

• • •

By 1907 the government saw its way clear to officially ignore the outlaw bands of Samar and Leyte, and great rejoicing followed the proclamation of Governor General James F. Smith, which called for the popular election of members of the new body. Later the insular government, aided at times by the United States army, went into Leyte and Samar and wiped the ladrones off the map.

• • •

The law provided for an elective body no smaller than fifty and no larger than 100 members, the personnel to be chosen according to population, each province being entitled to at least one, and to serve for two years. A ratio of one delegate to every 88,000 of the population, exclusive of the wild tribes, who have no representation, was decided upon, and accordingly, eighty-one members were elected. The elections were tranquil and were accompanied by great enthusiasm. Many ludicrous mistakes were made by electors and election judges. There was a little corruption, followed by contests for seats, but in the main, the elections came up to expectations.

• • •

The Nationalist party won a sweeping victory, thus demonstrating that the Filipino people wanted independence. The Federal party, whose name by that time had been changed to Progressista, which was formed in 1900 for the purpose of supporting the American rule, and which had been religiously rewarded with all the juicy offices held by the Filipinos from the supreme court down, only elected about a third of the assemblymen. Their platform called for the gradual taking over of the government by the people, with ultimate independence in view. The Nacionalistas, on the other hand, demanded immediate independence. The candidates of the party discoursed eloquently on the pricelessness of sovereign power unalloyed by alien dominion. They questioned America's intentions and cast dark reflections on the integrity of the American officials to a degree that never has seemed justified by all impartial observers, Filipinos and Americans alike. The overwhelming victory of the immediate independence agitators uncorked a great deal of enthusiasm which led to quite strained relations for the time being between the governors and the governed.

• • •

So it was not only an eventful moment—it was a very dramatic one as well—when William H. Taft, who had been the first governor of the islands, then secretary of war, convened the first Philippine assembly on October 16, 1907. Mr. Taft had made the long journey from Washington for the express purpose of performing this public act, an act which the majority of Americans and foreigners in the islands, and some few Filipinos, considered many many years too soon. That they were mistaken has been proved by the sequel. The ceremony was held in the historic Grand opera house. Mr. Taft read a warm greeting from President Roosevelt, conveying to the Filipino people the hearty good will of the American people, and wishing them all possible success in the great undertaking they were about to assume. Mr. Taft's own speech was one of the most statesmanlike in his entire career, conveying as it did a warning to the budding legislators along with his feeling of confidence that they would make good. The assemblymen-elect, the majority being in their thirties, listened with very serious mein and made a good impression upon all.

• • •

The first formal session was held in the afternoon in the marble hall of the Ayuntamiento (the capitol or official palace). Credentials were presented, members sworn in, etc. In the subsequent organization Sergio Osmena, thirty-one years old, former governor of Cavite province, was elected speaker of the house, and Manuel Quezon, of Tayabas, former governor of the province, thirty years old, was chosen floor leader of the Nacionalistas. Mr. Osmena has been speaker ever since while Mr. Quezon is now one of the two Philippine delegates in congress, where he is the most active representative the islands ever have had. The selection of committees, official procedure and parliamentary practices follow the American house of representatives very closely.

• • •

The assembly is a cross between the national house of representatives and a state legislature. As the lower house of the only legislative organism in the islands it is more than an ordinary state legislature. With the commission it shares in the making of laws and regulations governing the currency, customs, internal revenue, public works, provincial appropriations, maintenance of order and in other similar enactments which are the sole province of modern lawmaking bodies. On the other hand, as a part of the government of a dependency of the central government it is deemed a legislature and is officially designated as such. It elects the two delegates to the American congress. It can originate legislation and all bills affecting the Christian provinces must have its consent before becoming law. Its failure to approve the annual budget, however, is provided for by the act of congress which created it, in stipulating that the budget of the previous year be automatically followed in subsequent expenditures. In other words, the Philippine assembly is a live, working body, not a pretty legislative toy.

• • •

Taking all in all, the assembly has been a success. Certainly it is far from the dismal failure so many expected it to be. It compares favorably with any state legislature in this country. So far no rotten graft has spoiled it. No utterly idiotic legislation has been passed that compares with the misplaced brain feats of some of our state legislatures. Remarkably few have been the big mistakes and these were due in part to inexperience. It has been stubborn at times, deadlocking with the commission on important legislation such as an insular divorce law, the election of delegates to congress, and in failing to pass the budget. Many Americans believe that the assembly has been right in refusing to assent to certain extravagances of the American controlled upper house, more especially as all the money is Filipino money, paid in by Filipino taxpayers.

CIVIC PROGRESS

By Sam T. Nicholson, Secretary Civic League of Atlanta

"Cobham, a village in Medway parliamentary division of Kent, Eng., four miles west of Rochester. The church (Early English and later, and restored by Sir G. G. Scott) is famous for its collection of ancient brasses, of which thirteen belong to the years 1320-1529, commemorate members of the Brooke and Cobham families. There are some fine oak stalls and some tilting armor of the fourteenth century in the chancel of Cobham college, containing twenty almshouses, took the place, after the dissolution of a college for priest formed by Sir John de Cobham in the fifteenth century.

"The present mansion, Cobham Hall, is mainly Elizabethan. The picture gallery contains a fine collection of works by the great masters, Italian, Dutch and English.

"The Cobham family was established here before the reign of King John. In 1313 Henry de Cobham was created Baron Cobham, but on the execution of Sir John Oldcastle (who had been summoned to parliament, jure uxoris, as Baron Cobham in 1417, the barony lay dormant till revived in 1445 by Edward, son of Sir Thomas Brooke and Joan, grand-daughter of the third Baron Cobham. In 1603 Henry Brooke, Lord Cobham, was arraigned for participation in the Raleigh conspiracy, and spent the remainder of his life in prison, when he died in 1618, with him the title expired and Cobham Hall was granted to Lodowick Stewart, duke of Lenox, passing subsequently by descent and marriage to the earls of Darnley. The present

The Cobbs of Georgia have never claimed "Cobham Hall" although several genealogists have claimed it for them. In a former article I gave you the history of "Cobham" on James river in Virginia, this place is often spoken of in the history of the revolutionary war. The Cobhams were in North Carolina during the revolution and were tories therefore we hear little of them.

It has been with much interest that I have recently examined an old Franklin and Jackson county deed book, in which I find Colonel John Cobbs, of Jefferson county, and Colonel John Cobbs, of Columbia county, buying land as early as 1799 and conveying land as late as 1804 and 1806. This proves conclusively that they were living at the that date (1806 and not dead in 1796. These old records hold much that is interesting, especially to genealogist.

I also find Thomas Cobbs, of Columbia county, giving a quit claim deed to 4,600 acres formerly in Franklin county. "I never have paid any money for," in 1809.

There is much in this section of Georgia that would make interesting history. Captain Jack (John) Randolph and his half brother, Peyton Randolph with Lee Randolph came to Jackson county prior to 1815 and the original home of Captain Jack Randolph built seventy-five years ago is still standing and in good condition is now the "Harrison hotel, managed by his grand-daughter, Mrs. Nancy A. Harrison, eighty-two years old. In another letter I hope to be able to tell you about Revolutionary land marks Indian Trails, I have found up here at the foot of our beautiful mountain country.

Jefferson, Ga., is like Rome, "a city of hills," which makes this town very picturesque; also like old Rome, it has interesting monuments, a confederate monument, one to Dr. Crawford W. Long the great benefactor to suffering humanity, and one to William D. Martin, who was born in 1771, on Stone Horse Creek in Hanover county, Va., died in Jefferson, 1859, leaving quite a sum of money, $25,000, to build a public school and a Methodist church. He was a bachelor through life but many were fathered by him and live to tell of his goodness to them, in his will he left a silk dress to every girl of age sixteen and money to those who were in need. He started a poor boy without help from relatives he made his fortune and left it to his friends and the public here is what he had written on his simple monument:

"Remember man as you pass by,
"As you are now so once was I,
"As I am now so you shall be,
"Prepare for death and follow me."

He did not believe in "waiting until the devil had him to pray," for then it is too late.

Respectfully,
MRS. MINNNIE E. HOGAN.

HAWAII DRY DOCK MAY BE DISCARDED

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The fate of the big naval dry dock at Pearl Harbor Hawaii, a naval adjunct considered almost indispensable to the maintenance of a battleship fleet in the Pacific, hangs upon a report to be submitted by a board of engineering experts now at work.

Peculiar and almost insurmountable geological difficulties have been found at the site of the dock, and unless these can be overcome it will be necessary to substitute a floating dock for the great concrete structure already fairly under way.

The board is now making elaborate tests of the various kinds of the strata underlying the dock and it probably will be three months before a report will be drafted.

ATLANTA THE SCENE FOR MOVING PICTURE PLAYS

The Edison moving picture company has staged five plays in Georgia within the last few weeks, and two of these have been produced in Atlanta. One of the latter included views of Five Points, the Grady monument, and the capitol. The other play produced here is not quite complete, and one of the concluding scenes is here shown as it was staged yesterday. The setting for this play is a cabin on the Bolton-Buckhead road, about five miles from the center of the city. The Edison company, which is producing these plays, consists of six members. From here the company will go to Tallulah Falls to take scenic views, and from there to Chattanooga to picture Chickamauga Park.

HAMBURG, Germany, June 14.—The great German battle cruiser hitherto known as "K," was to have been launched this afternoon, but refused to move from the stocks after she had been christened the Derflinger by General August Von Mackensen.

The general made a patriotic speech and broke a bottle of champagne on her bow. The cruiser stuck fast, however, and attempts to start her were abandoned.

RECEIVED $1.50 PER WEEK SALARY; SOMETIMES LESS

(By Associated Press.)

IPSWICH, Mass., June 14.—Testimony regarding the wages paid at the Ipswich Hosiery mills, where rioting occurred Tuesday night, was introduced by the defense when the hearing of the nineteen persons charged with rioting was taken up today.

Christian Panageopoulu said she had worked in the mill for a year and a half at a weekly wage of $1.50, "sometimes 10 cents less, but never a nickel more."

Poulitsa Bizou, who has been in America a year and a half and has been employed at the mill for a year, said she received about $2 a week. Neither girl is a defendant.

Anthiphe Ladopoulu, nineteen years old, who is accused of rioting, said she went out on the street Tuesday night when the mill whistle blew. There was no disturbance at the time, but she was arrested and taken to the police station.

She said that at the meeting of the strikers, which she attended, the leaders, Carroll L. Pingree and Nathan Hermann, who are charged with murder, advised against violence.

THE GENEALOGIST

History of Cobham Hall and Lord Viscount Cobham.

Mrs. Minnie E. Hogan

The four moral agencies for uplifting humanity, the individual, the family, the church and the state, should work along in harmony, each in its own sphere, lifting mankind from want and suffering, from wickedness and wretchedness to happiness and righteousness. But if the state remains inefficient manned in great measure by professional office-seeking "politicians," greedy "grafters," and incompetent "demagogues," standing out against reform, and with its unlimited power protecting and encouraging evil men, and evil things, the other agencies being heavily handicapped will be greatly retarded in uplift work.

Unrighteous, incompetent civil government, in city, state and nation, is not only incapable of success itself but is a great obstacle in the way of progress, general prosperity, and evangelistic success.

The primary source of all legislative, executive and judicial power is the people. This power they wield through the ballot in a representative republic such as ours, and for the wise use of this power they are morally responsible. Notice in this connection the following scriptural quotations: "The wicked walk on every side when the vilest men are exalted." "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." "The nations that forget God shall be turned into destruction." "When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice, but when the wicked breath rule the people mourn."

In almost every city and state government of the country, honor and purity and patriotism would govern action if the leading citizens would come forward and insist that only upright, competent men should be placed in positions of trust. There is hardly any considerable town that would not vote, and vote sincerely for the victory of public honor and virtue over vice and faithlessness, and no doubt when good citizens get sufficiently aroused they can make their governments, local, state and national, about what they were intended to be originally.

The trouble is there is great lack of organization and cooperation. Organization brings all the forces of good into close touch with each other. Each knows of the other's plans and clashing of operations is prevented. Wisdom and strength are added to every plan by wise counsel and a multitude of workers. Co-operating thus, more and better work can be done than if working seperately. No general would attempt a campaign on the plan usually followed by those opposing the public evils of the day.

With a civic league in every town, co-operating in state and national affairs every good thing can be accomplished. Bad or incompetent men aspiring to office can be defeated in the caucus, primary election or convention. Evil measures coming before the legislature or congress can be defeated by an overwhelming protest, and iniquitous laws now on the statute books can be repealed. The power in this country is in the hands of the good citizens. It only needs writing for civic righteousness.

Being non-partisan and non-sectarian in its character, good citizens, male and female, of all political parties and religious beliefs, desirous of promoting their own interests, and the public welfare, are invited to become members of the Civic League of America, the objects of which, briefly stated, are: To promote good citizenship, healthy public sentiment, righteous civil government, loyal personal service, sound morality, and the common welfare.

CHARGED WITH DUPING CHURCH MEMBERS

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, June 14.—Under indictment on a charge of operating a confidence game, Orlando E. Robinson, former manager of a match company and his son Orlando, Jr., are accused of having duped forty members of the Forty-first street Presbyterian church out of $21,500. They are said to have interested the church people in their scheme to organize a match vending machine company by holding prayer meetings.

The Robinsons were released on $8,000 bail each.

Attorneys for that portion of the Presbyterian congregation which claims it has been swindled, assert that the Robinsons held prayer meetings in their suite in a downtown hotel and at the residences of several of their customers. Ministers, business men, wash women, factory girls, widows and orphans are listed as their alleged victims, whose confidence was gained at the religious meetings.

The Robinsons are said to have operated in thirty-four cities in the same manner.

A JAPANESE VIEW OF THE CALIFORNIA LAW

By Kenjiro Sato

To the outer world California's persistence in persecuting the Japanese is almost incomprehensible. On the entire Pacific coast the Japanese are more or less coldly treated, but in no states other than California are they maltreated. Not only this, but Japanese agriculturists are even welcomed in the neighboring states of California. When the legislature of California was discussing the anti-Japanese land bill two western states, Washington and Idaho, revised their laws so as to extend to the Japanese the right of land ownership. Since the land infraglia at Sacramento began to attract attention of the nation, the Japanese consulate general and the Japanese association at San Francisco received from Americans living in other states a flood of letters stating that in their states Japanese farmers would be heartily welcomed and cordially treated.

The question arises: Why is it that of all states in the union, California alone should pursue the Japanese so relentlessly and so persistently? To answer *this question it is necessary to scruti*nize the past of the Golden state, as scientists tell us, we carry our ancestors with us in our brains and blood; we inherit tendencies and are liable to reproduce them as with individuals, so with community.

To begin with, the community which sprang into existence in California in the wake of the discovery of gold was naturally composed of loose stoms of humanity, honest toilers were there, and also men of intelligence and sound moral perceptions, but these were more then overwhelmed by lowless ignorant elements, whose visions were closed to all but the glitter of gold, like the wand of a fairy the pick brought them riches acquired by the vulgar is seldom employed for wholesome purposes, and the country in which these gold seekers grew rich was especially adopted to spur their base passions. Here was a climate stimulating like wine, quickening alike the pulse and the steps, there was no law, no traditions to observe, no social conventions to respect, no authority to maintain order.

From the beginning therefore, the Californians were allowed to give full vent to their primitive passions and instinct, and of all primitve instincts the commonest and the most persistent is perhaps that which tends to monopolize all that is valuable or profitable. The forty-niners had been in California scarcely two years when they began to look askance at these gold seekers first fixed their eyes upon foreign trespassers. The result was the foreign miners' license law of 1850. That in fact was the beginning of the anti-foreign agitation which in later periods assumed such pernicious aspects as to threaten America's ame cable relations with oriental nations. At first directed chiefly against the Spanish-Americans the agitation soon made the Chinese its chief victim as early as 1852, when the miners were far from crowded, the American miners began to attack the Chinese in terms whose vehemence was not surpassed even by the vacifferations of the sand-lotters of the days of denis kearny.

Equally important is the fact that more than one-third of the pioneers of California were southerners whose race prejudice, engendered by their contact with the negro had become almost innate. Some of these men were not uneducated but their conception of justice did not prevent them from regarding California as closed to all darkskinned people whether south Europeans or Orientals, but the worst was that the majority consisted of men of the Pike county Missourian type, ignorant, vicious, extremely provincial, to this class of southerners all aliens with the exception of north Europeans, were, "niggers if not d— niggers." In their eyes there was but little difference among Mexicans, South Americans, south Europeans and Chinese all were colored, inferior, undesirable. These southerners in alliance with certain other class of Americans soon raised the cry of California for Americans "and attempted to shut out all foreigners. These wholesale exclusion movements were on the whole a failure, though the agitators succeeded in *driving out a large number of Span*ish-Americans and the disgruntled miners vented their rage by making the Chinese their chief object of attack.

Another important factor in the anti-Oriental movement of California is found in trades unions in those states whose principal economic resources are agriculture, trade unionism seldom looms ominously upon the political horizon. It was gold mining which enriched California before its farm land attracted settlers, and the mining industry inevitably resulted in the organization of miners' unions. As early as 1850 the mining workers became a potent factor in state politics. Both the Republicans and the Democrats depended upon the mining vote to control the legislature. With the general economic progress of the states other traders' unions sprang into existence and joined hands with the order organizations, culminating in 1877 in the inauguration o fthe workingman's party.

In the meantime the distribution of wealth in California was such as would assist in the growth of trades union. The concentration of lands in the hands of a few deprived settlers of small means of an opportunity to secure land and become independent farmers, while the monopoly of railways and steamships by a few financial magnates necessarily raised the cost of living by keeping the transportation at prohibitive rates. This condition could not but arouse discontent on the part of the workingman and men of limited means. This dissatisfaction soon assumed the proportion of indignation as they battled hopelessly against the wall of adamant which capital insolently raised in their faces, and the disgruntled assailants not unnaturally sought consolation by preying upon these innocent, defenseless Chinese who were employed, in the construction of railways, in the bonanza of farming of great land-owners or in the digging of mines. The politicians, too, know that the best way to please the working class was to attack great monopolies, but they also know that it was much safer and easier to attack the Chinese than to assail capital. So the poor Chinaman was made the scapegoat for many of the blames which labor would place at capital's door. The anti-Japanese agitation of today is much the same story.

Such, in brief, are the factors which have been largely responsible for the formation of the peculiar mob mind of California. As long as this peculiarity persists California will continue to pursue the Japanese through the agencies of culture and enlightenment. She may some day learn to respect the rights of other people.

Small Cities and Towns Need Modern Improvements

THERE are a score of reasons why. The biggest and most inclusive reason is that Modern Improvements Pay.

¶ They pay in Health. Sanitary living conditions are the right of the people. Without them, there come sickness, crippled efficiency, poverty and worse.

¶ They pay in Money. The town that is alert and wide-awake enough to clean itself up, make itself attractive and wholesome, is the town that holds its own with firm grip and draws new population from elsewhere.

¶ It's exactly as it is with a home. Dirty, unhealthful, unsanitary, cheerless homes repel the visitor. And in time such homes lose their hold on their inmates.

¶ Is your town clean, efficient, wholesome—a good place to live? Is it the kind of town new industries and new people will naturally be attracted to?

¶ If you lack Correct Sewerage, good Water, Lights, Paving, you ought to get busy.

We Are Municipal Engineers

¶ It's our business to devise sanitary systems and improvements for towns and cities.

¶ We plan, construct, finance and operate. We have done these things for scores of towns, and we want to get in touch with every other town that needs this kind of service.

¶ We will promptly give you all the necessary information. Write us today. It will pay you; we guarantee that our service will produce dividends for your town.

1913 CORN SHOW WILL NEARLY FILL STATEHOUSE

Governor-Elect Slaton Promises Capitol for It—May Require All Three Floors

The first and only official promise that Governor-elect John M. Slaton has made in connection with his approaching administration, was given yesterday, when he agreed to turn over the state capitol during the first week of December to the 1913 Georgia corn show.

"My friends all know that I have been rather chary about making promises prior to the inauguration," said the governor-elect, "but this is one thing which I unhesitatingly commit myself to. I am in favor of the Georgia corn show, as one of the strongest influences now at work in upbuilding the state and helping it achieves its splendid agricultural destinies.

"I am in favor of the corn show because it teaches Georgia farmer boys and their fathers too, how to get fully one-third more corn out of their land with practically no additional expense.

"I am reliably informed that since 1909 there has been an increased production in Georgia, sufficient to give every man, woman and child, of every color, one peck of meal out of every corn crop. This means that the Georgia corn clubs are performing the greatest possible economic work that any person or any organization can undertake—teaching people to become self-sustaining.

"The influence of the corn clubs extends beyond the planting of this one particular crop. It teaches the advantages of intensive farming, which has been the solution of agricultural and economic questions in all countries. The corn club work is a work that goes on quietly from year to year, without sensationalism, but with cumulative effect of tremendous power.

"I am glad to see that the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce corn show committee already has taken up active preparations for the 1913 show, and I understand that keen interest is awakened in all parts of the state."

The 1912 corn show covered the entire lower floor of the capitol, with 1,400 exhibits, and the second floor was used for the purpose of giving the chamber of commerce dinner to the corn club boys who came to Atlanta for the week. This year, it is estimated from reports already received through State Agent J. Phil Campbell, the exhibits of the corn club and the girls' canning clubs will cover completely both the first and second floors of the capitol and possibly encroach on the third floor now occupied by the state museum.

It is predicted that the number of individual exhibits made by the boys who "come through," will at least double that of last year, even though the memberships in the corn clubs of the state may not be materially increased. Hundreds of boys belonging to the clubs, who failed to pull through last year for various reasons, have been spurred by the success of their associates, and will do their best to make a big crop of corn on their acre this year. Mr. Campbell reports that last year's corn show has proven a powerful stimulus all over the state, and that the keenest competition ever known now exists among the boys.

GOVERNOR BROWN GRANTS CLEMENCY TO 2 CONVICTS

He Commutes Sentences of Two More Floyd County Blind Tigers

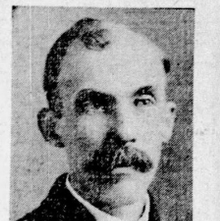
Governor Brown Saturday granted executive clemency to Ben B. Edwards and Thomas Hanniford, who are serving terms upon the Floyd county chaingang for violations of the prohibition laws.

Edwards, who is a well-to-do farmer, was sentenced to twelve months and a fine of $250. He served eight months, his sentence was commuted by the governor to time already served and the payment of his fine.

Hanniford was sentenced to twelve months and a fine of $150. He has served about the same period as Edwards. He will be given his liberty upon the payment of the fine.

Edwards and Hanniford were among a number of Floyd county offenders who were sentenced by Judge John W. Maddox, just prior to his retirement from the judgeship of the Rome circuit. In order to break up what he termed the "flagrant and persistent violations of the prohibition laws in Floyd," Judge Maddox gave chaingang sentences and fines to about eight of these blind tigers. All have been granted executive clemency by Governor Brown. Several of them were represented by Attorney G. R. Hutchens, of Rome.

BILL TO SUBSTITUTE MUNICIPAL COURT FOR JUSTICE COURTS HAS BEEN DRAFTED BY COMMITTEE



HON. WALTER MCELREATH.

HON. W. A. FULLER.

Chairman and secretary, respectively, of committee appointed by Atlanta Bar association to prepare a bill creating a court to supplant the justice court system.

A tentative bill providing for a municipal court to supplant the present justice court system in the city of Atlanta has just been prepared by a committee appointed by the Atlanta Bar association. This bill is now being printed in pamphlet form for distribution among the local judges and members of the bar association.

As soon as sufficient time has elapsed for a proper study of the bill the bar association will call a special meeting to discuss the measure, following which the bill may be adopted as prepared or it may be amended.

Upon the adoption of the bill by the association a formal request will be made upon the Fulton county legislators to introduce and secure its enactment into law.

Last fall and amendment to the state constitution was adopted which gives the legislature the power to abolish justice courts in certain cities and establish in lieu thereof such courts, or system of courts las the general assembly may deem necessary.

As a result of this constitutional amendment three Georgia cities—namely, Atlanta, Macon and Columbus, will ask the legislature to substitute municipal courts for their justice court systems.

PERSONNEL OF COMMITTEE.

Immediately following the ratification of the constitutional amendment last fall the Atlanta Bar association appointed a committee to draft a municipal court bill for the city of Atlanta. This committee was composed of Walter McElreath, chairman, Judge Arthur G. Powell, Judge Spencer R. Atkinson, L. C. Hopkins, Edgar Watkins, Van Astor Batchelor, Arthur Heyman, Shepard Bryan, Lee M. Jordan, Arminius Wright, Jesse M. Wood and W. A. Fuller.

Mr. Fuller was chosen secretary of the committee and he spent considerable time in collecting data relating to municipal courts in other cities. He obtained copies of the bills creating similar courts in Chicago, New York, Buffalo, Boston, Cleveland, San Francisco and other cities. These bills were carefully studied, and after months of conscientious work the committee has completed the tentative draft of the bill, which covers about thirty typewritten pages and contains about 10,000 words.

This bill provides for a court consisting of a chief judge and four assistants, for a clerk and deputy clerk, and for a marshal, and four deputy marshals. The salary of the chief judge is placed at $3,600 per annum, and those of the associate justices at $3,000 each; that of the clerk at $2,000, deputy clerk $1,500; marshall $1,800, and each of the deputy marshals $1,500.

The judges are to be nominated by a majority of the superior court judges of Fulton county and appointed by the court. Should the bill become a law the new court system will be effective January 1, 1914.

SYNOPSIS OF BILL.

"1. Those cases over which, as prepared by the committee ,approved by the Atlanta Bar association:

"This court is given jurisdiction concurrent with the superior courts of this state, with the following exceptions:

"1. Those cases over which exclusive jurisdiction is vested in other courts by the constitution of the state of Georgia.

"2. Those cases involving more than $500.

"3. Injuries to persons and reputation.

"4. Criminal cases other than matters now heard and determined by justices of the peace or justice courts.

"Provision is made for a chief judge and four associate judges. Any attorney at law who is a qualified elector and resident of the city of Atlanta, and who practiced law continuously for three or more years, will be eligible to hold office as judge of this court. Each judge is to be paid a salary and is not to be allowed to receive any fees or perquisites of office. The salary of the chief judge is fixed at $3,600 per annum, and the salary of each of the associate judges at $3,000 per annum. The judges are to be nominated by a majority of the judges of the superior court of Fulton county and appointed by the governor. The chief judge and two of the associate judges, to be designated in the order of appointment, shall serve for four years. The two remaining associate judges shall serve for two years. Thereafter their successors shall serve for four years. Provision is made for the suspension and removal from office by order of the superior court of any judge for incompetency, inefficiency, neglect of duty, or misconduct in or out of office, which in the opinion of such judge of the superior court tends to lower the dignity of such official or render him unfit to fill such office. An order of suspension may be passed ex parte but an order of removal only after proper hearing.

CLERKS AND MARSHALS.

"There will be a chief clerk and one deputy clerk, whose salaries will be $2,000 and $1,500 respectively. The chief clerk will be appointed by the judges of the court, and the deputy by the chief clerk. There will be a marshal and four deputy marshals. The salary of the marshal will be $1,800 per annum, and the salary of each deputy $1,500. The marshal and deputies will be appointed by the judges of the court. The duties of these officials are set forth in detail in the bill, and are substantially the same as those of the corresponding officers of the superior courts, with such other duties as may be prescribed under the rules of court.

RULES OF COURT.

The bill authorizes the judges to prepare and promulgate such rules of procedure and practice not inconsistent with the laws of this state as may be necessary to carry on and facilitate the business of the court.

PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

All actions in such court shall be commenced by summons as now provided for in justice courts. There will be no fixed court day, but court will meet every Monday and enter judgment or assign for trial all cases filed and served not later than eight days previously. A defendant can defend by merely entering an appearance, except where suits are filed on sworn accounts or unconditional contracts in writing, in which cases the answer must be filed under oath. No demurrers need be filed, but every defense in point of law or fact, whether for misjoinder, nonjoinder, or insufficiency of fact to constitute a valid cause of action which might ordinarily be made by demurrer or plea, shall be made by motion to dismiss or in the answer, and such motion or answer may be made on the trial orally, or may be made in writing if the defendant has entered an appearance previously. Amendments in form or substance are to be allowed. The judge at every stage of the proceeding must disregard any error or defect in the proceeding which does not effect the substantial rights of parties. The judges are directed in making the rules of court to arrange to expedite the trial of cases and to eliminate expense.

SERVICE OF PROCESS, ETC.

"All service upon defendants shall be personal, if possible. If not, by leaving copy with some person more than eighteen years of age domiciled at the residence of defendant, the return of service to show the method.

"Trials may be had upon demand for the same by either plaintiff or defendant before a jury of five. Jurors are to be compensated as in the superior courts. If a plaintiff desires a jury trial, he shall demand same when he files his suit; otherwise, he is considered to have waived his right to a trial by jury. The defendant in any case may demand a trial by jury when he enters his appearance, or files his defense; otherwise, he will be considered to have waived his right to a trial by jury.

APPELLATE DIVISION.

"Provision is made for an appellate division of said court for the hearing of matters of law arising in civil causes therein, with power of granting or refusing new trials in cases brought to the appellate division. The appellate division will consist of three of the judges of the court, one of whom shall be the chief judge, except where the chief judge presided on the trial of the case appealed. Appeal from the judgment of the appellate division on matters of law is allowed by writ of error to the court of appeals.

"New trials may be granted upon the same grounds upon which the same are now granted in the superior courts, and according to the same method of procedure, except that provision is made for simplifying and facilitating said procedure as applied to this court.

"Provision is made for the transfer to the municipal court of Atlanta and trial therein of any case pending in the superior court of Fulton county, or in the city court of Atlanta, on January 1, 1914, or thereafter brought in said courts, in which the subject matter and amount involved are within the jurisdiction of the municipal court of Atlanta.

COST DEPOSIT.

"Each party filing a suit of proceeding of any character in this court is required to deposit with the clerk the sum of $2 as costs of suit; provided that such deposit shall not be required of any person who shall make an affidavit that he is unable to make such deposit; and provided, further, that if the party making such deposit prevails in the case, the deposit shall be collected with the other costs from the losing party and returned to the party depositing same.

Note by the committee: Some of the reasons given for requiring this cost deposit are as follows: (1) Similar deposits are required in practically all of the municipal courts recently established in different large cities, in the United States courts, in the court of appeals, and in the supreme court. (2) The making of such a deposit will be the basis of a fund for the maintenance of the court, which is an added expense to the county government, it being expected that the court will be practically self-sustaining. (3) Requiring this cost deposit will tend to discourage the filing of frivolous suits. It will also meet a ground of objection now urged to the present justice courts that batches of cases are filed in some courts on the tacit understanding that no costs will be collected unless the same can be gotten from the defendants.

All sales are to be made before the courthouse door after proper advertisement, and proper records of such sales kept. At the present time, there is no way of tracing property sold in justice courts, and the bailiffs are particularly not to lend their assistance in tracing such property.

All suits will be filed in the clerk's office in the courthouse of Fulton county. The chief judge will assign the cases for trial from time to time to the different divisions presided over by the associate judges. All of the divisions will hold court in the courthouse. In having only one office for the filing of cases, and having all trials conducted in the courthouse, it is believed that the convenience of the bar and public will be greatly subserved.

About 14 1-2 Per Cent o State's Total Contributed by Fulton County

Exclusive of corporation and specia taxes, Fulton county last year supplie more than one-seventh of the state' revenue, or about fourteen and a ha per cent.

To be exact, the general taxes of th state, as shown by the tax digests o the various counties, aggregated ap proximately $2,800,000, of which amou $644,245.15 was charged and credited t Fulton county.

Captain W. H. Harrison o fthe comp troller general's department, is consol idating now the tax digests, and ha completed this work for 39 counties.

He finds that Tax Collector And Stewart, of Fulton, collected $24,41 more than was charged in the tax re ceiver's digest. These excess collec tions came from deliquent tax payer who had failed to make returns. O this sum $4,031 was collected for poll taxes. This indicates that 4,031 voter were about to escape the payment of the required one-dollar poll tax.

These extra polls are said to exceed the total polls reported by severa other counties.

The 38 other counties checked, col lected altogether in extra taxes—taxe not shown on the digests of the receiv ers—but $12,426.13. Just exactly how the taxes paid by Fulton compare with the taxes paid by the remainder of the state cannot be shown accurately until all of the corporation and special taxes are canvassed.

GREAT BOULEVARD MAY TRAVERSE NORTH GEORGIA

Citizens of Several Counties Plan Auto Highway From Atlanta to Murphy, N. C.

State Senator A. H. Burtz and W. H. Shippen, of Ellijay, spent Saturday in Atlanta working in the interest of a plan to construct an automobile highway from Atlanta through the beautiful north Georgia mountain country to the state line at Murphy, N. C.

The Atlanta chamber of commerce and a number of influential citizens living in Fulton, Cobb, Cherokee, Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin counties, through which the proposed boulevard will run, have already been interested in the project by Messrs. Burtz and Shippen and the other promoters of the enterprise, among whom are Sam Tate, of Tate; Carter Tate, of Jasper; Dr. E. W. Watkins, of Ellijay, and W. B. James, representative of Gilmer county.

Already the road to Marietta is in very good shape, and the road through Cobb county to Canton, in Cherokee county, is passable. Work, which is now under way in Cherokee county, will result in a fairly good automobile road to Nelson, which is just across the line in Pickens county. From there to Murphy, N. C., the distance of the proposed thoroughfare is about sixty miles, and the road will traverse Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin counties.

To foster the project the citizens of Gilmer county are arranging a great barbecue on July 4, when they will be the hosts to the citizens of the other counties interested, and then the value of such a highway will be extolled.

TO TRAVERSE RICH SECTION.

Gilmer and the other counties to be traversed, it is pointed out, are among the richest counties in the state in latent resources, which are literally clamoring for development. Good roads, Mr. Shippen declares, will do more than anything else to develop the section.

Some of the most beautiful scenery which Georgia possesses is along the route proposed for the highway, and a number of famous mountain resorts are near it. Good roads would result in an influx of visitors, especially during the summer months.

Along the proposed route lies the 35,000 acres of land recently purchased by the federal government as the first of its Appalachian forest reserves. This reserve will be converted into a sort of government park, and it has already been announced that the reserve will be stocked with a herd of elk and with other game. An automobile road to this park will be a necessity, it is said, and the citizens of Gilmer, Fannin and Pickens are preparing to push the project.

Hundreds are being invited to the Fourth of July barbecue, and it is expected to be one of the largest meetings ever held in Ellijay.

ITCHED AND BURNED BADLY

Pimples in Hair and on Face and Hands. Turned to Festers and Sores. Could Not Sleep. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Two Weeks.

Bladen, Georgia.—"I suffered ten months with itching of the skin. It began on my body in small red pimples, then all in my hair and on my face and hands. The pimples festered and then began to turn into sores. They itched and burned badly until I could not help scratching them. They began to disfigure my hands and face after turning to festers and sores. My hands would itch worse when I put them in water. My hair came out gradually. I could not sleep or do any of my work for the itching and burning of the sores. I tried three medicines and found very little ease. I suffered nine months with the red pimples itching and burning. Then I began the use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I would bathe with the Cuticura Soap three times each day but only use the Cuticura Ointment on rising and retiring. After keeping this up two weeks all the sores and itching had disappeared. I was completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment in two weeks." (Signed) Miss Maggie D. Holmes, Apr. 16, 1912.

Why not have a clear skin, soft white hands, a clean scalp and good hair? It is your birthright. Cuticura Soap with an occasional use of Cuticura Ointment will bring about these coveted conditions in most cases when all else fails. Sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

"SEPTEMBER MORN" WINDOW THAT SHOCKED POLICE

"SEPTEMBER MORN" TO SHIVER AND WAIT OFFICERS' DECREE

engaged. In feeling tones he depicted the outraged modesty of the city police department, drew a pathetic scene of the officers blushing coquetishly under the harrowing task of having to pace the beat where September Morn lay in wait to make eyes at them.

The Judge decided to go along and take a slant at this ravisher of cops.

Together the Judge and Mr. Arthur stood outside the window of the book store and looked long and steadyily upon the sea of Aphrodites wistful-eyed within.

Then the Judge spoke. "It was high art all right, he admitted, but so far as he could see there was nothing vulgar about the Maiden Morn. There was no law in the city or state, he declared, that would ban Miss September. The picture itself was the only evidence which could be brought into court, his own court, where the case would have to be tried if a case were made.

There was no law against good taste in art, the Judge argued, and while it certainly might be better for the youth of the community to have all the September Morns locked up in cloisters, yet there was nothing legally wrong about the lady, and for his part, he could hardly see how anyone could force her to don a pettiskirt. Better telephone Chief Jett and ask him to reconsider, the Judge advised.

The chief was duly 'phoned by Officer Arthur ,and the copy was not served.

AWAITS CHIEF BEAVERS.

"I haven't abandoned the idea of arresting the young lady," declared the Chief, Saturday night. "But it will certainly be a few days before any further action is taken. Chief Beavers'll be home Monday, and we'll see what he has to say about it."

So now it is that September Morn will have to throw herself upon the tender mercies of Chief Beavers. Will he be hard upon these September Morns in our midst, will he allow them ta segregate thuselg down at Cole's book store, or will he run 'em out of town entirely? Who knows, t tmight be far better to have them in the window, than adorning the walls of bachelor apartments all over the city, some of them in our best residence districts even.

As for public opinion on the case, it seems to be varied. Atlanta's art colony poh-poohs the attitude of the police department. Harry Osgood who is director of drawing in Atlanta's public schools and Mrs. Osgood call it ridiculous.

Mr. Osgood has seen the picture. He declares that it is very ordinary picture, and is entirely lacking in the suggestiveness which is found in certain nude studies. In fact, he calls it quite the opposite of indecent.

Miss Virginia Woolley, another local artist, although she has not seen the picture, declares that she certainly will do so at the first opportunity and says that she has always heard of it as anything but shocking.

Others agree with her. Atlanta's society folk unite in upholding September Morn. The officers and members of the art association decry the attitude of the police, and declared that if the officers object to a cute little thing like September Morn walking around in shop-windows, Atlanta never will be known as anything but a town where labels on tomato ans are well appreciated.

FEAR IS UNKNOWN TO AMERICAN BLUEJACKETS

WASHINGTON, June 14.—"Fear" is a word unknown to the American bluejackets and marines, writes the city clerk of Vallejo, Cal., to the navy department, at the instance of the city council, commending the enlisted men of navy and marine corps who rendered assistance during a serious conflagration in that town May 8 last. The clerk said that had it not been for the sailors ashore at the time of the fire, a portion of the city would have been destroyed.

FREE Medical Counsel and Advice

Dr. Hathaway & Co.

(INCORPORATED.)

Persons who are sick will find it to their advantage to consult the well known specialists, Dr. Hathaway & Co., who make no charge for examination and counsel.

COMPETENCY. There is no department of life in which experience counts for more or is more important than in the practice of medicine. Before placing your case in the hands of a specialist, investigate his fitness for the undertaking. Be sure you will get honest business methods, conscientious advice and the proper professional skill.

VAST EXPERIENCE. Dr. Hathaway & Co. have had upwards of a quarter of a century training in the practice of their specialty, and with this large and valuable experience they offer the very best possible to be had. They have successfully treated in that time all manner of chronic and private diseases. They have had private hospital and sanitarium experience, and their aim has been to give the best possible to be had for their patients. Not only that, but they have been in this community for many, many years, and are still young enough to appreciate and put in force new ideas.

HONEST METHODS. Dr. Hathaway & Co. do not make misstatements; they do not say one thing to a patient and do another. Their charges are moderate and medicines are furnished free of charge. They long since earned the reputation of always being frank and honest with their patients, and nothing has made them prouder than the fact that they are referred to by many who have consulted them as men who will give them honest, conscientious advice and opinions.

EXAMINATION FREE. In order that sick men and women may judge for themselves without expense, Dr. Hathaway & Co. make it an invariable rule to extend offices for the examination. Anyone can call on them to be examined, ask any questions they wish, be instructed what to do for their trouble with every assurance that no charge will result. They have without question the best equipped medical offices for the examination as well as the treatment of invalids. X-Ray appliances, Vjolet Rays, Static, Faradic and Galvanic electricity, Vibratory apparatus and the use of all of these is free to all callers for examination and treatment if they should so take treatment. You or any of your friends can avail yourself of this privilege at any time.

DR. GAULT, who is now associated with us, was formerly with us about eight years ago. The doctor has won a reputation in the treating and curing of diseases of men that is excelled by no other physician in this line, and it is for this reason that he is in charge of this company today. Dr. Gault was one of the first physicians in the south to start advertising and begin the use of the "606" treatment. He has given over seven hundred treatments of the "606" and the "914." If you are suffering from specific blood poison, there is no better treatment than this. The doctor has thoroughly demonstrated this in numbers and numbers of cases, for he has been using the treatment for practically two years, and time has proven that the contra-indications and the dangers of the administrations of the "606" have been built on the bogie-man. All sorts of dangers and bad effects have been attributed to the drug, but time has shown the mistake of accepting these reports without investigation, and competent specialists no longer mention such dangers as blindness or deafness and death, for they don't occur from the use of this drug. Such reports have been now recognized as false or else due to faulty observations by those not posted upon the subject. Dr. Gault considers that there are practically no contra-indications for this drug after two, years' experience, and in only a small portion of cases is it necessary to administer any other treatment.

CHRONIC DISEASES THEIR SPECIALTY. Dr. Hathaway & Co. will be glad to see at their office or have a letter from any man or woman who suffers from any disease that has baffled the skill of others. If you are afflicted, we cordially invite you to call and fully investigate our methods, and after we have gone over the case carefully and explained to you just what your trouble is and what we can do for you, if you are not entirely satisfied that you will receive not only honest business methods, but conscientious professional service and a cure for your disease, you will not be expected to take treatment.

THE DISEASES WE TREAT. We cure all chronic and private diseases of both men and women. SUCH AS INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, PILES, FISTULA, FISSURE, VARICOSE VEINS, NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, LOST VITALITY, BLOOD POISON, KIDNEY AND BLADDER AFFECTINS, CATARRH, OR ANY OTHER SPECIAL CHRONIC TROUBLE.

TWO NEW ADDITIONS ARE MADE TO THE FREE LIST

Transfer of Iron and Steel Raw Materials Brings Cut to $27,000,000

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The transfer to the free list of the tariff bill of iron and steel raw materials, with an estimated dutiable value of more than $400,000 a year, was approved today by the majority members of the senate committee. This increased the senate's addition to the Underwood free list to an aggregate annual loss of $2,600,000 in revenue, making the total estimated annual revenue less from the free list about $27,000,000.

After an entire day spent on the subcommittee's report of the metal schedule, Chairman Simmons announced it had been widely cut, nearly every item of the schedule being reduced. To the free list were added pig iron, ferro manganese, steel, blooms, slabs and billets. On all finished steel products an average reduction of 10 per cent was made from the Underwood rates, lead, zinc and aluminum were left unsettled to be disposed of Monday.

Aluminum will be changed from an ad valorem to a specific tariff basis and the duty will be reduced, but it will not be transferred to the free list as many had advocated. Aluminum experts will be called in Monday to go over the committee's proposed specific rates.

All structural steel which was made dutiable at 12 per cent in the Underwood bill has been reduced compensatory to the free listing of raw materials the average rates being about 10 per cent ad valorem. The raw materials were placed on the free list largely because they are controlled by the United States Steel corporation.

Senator Simmons said the administrative features of the bill which have presented such a problem would be acted upon Monday or Tuesday and that the bill would be ready for the caucus by Wednesday or Thursday. It was agreed by many of the Democratic senators that it would have been well had there been no attempt at this session to revise the tariff administrative regulations.

Inasmuch as the house bill has made changes and the senate has considered the subject for many weeks, it finally was determined that the revision task should be completed. All Democrats of the finance committee, however, make no secret of their wish that it would have been possible to retain the Payne-Aldrich bill administrative privileges until a commission could make a thorough study of the subject.

On Monday the committee will take up the agricultural and sundries schedules and the free list. It is predicted the caucus will make few changes and that debate on the measure can begin in the senate by Wednesday, June 25.

GIDEONS DELIVER BIBLES TO HOTELS IN AUTO

The Atlanta camp of the Christian workers' organization among commercial travelers was busy yesterday afternoon visiting the different hotels and placing a Bible in every room. They were accompanied by a band of twelve pieces.

Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock a carload of Bibles in an automobile truck left the Pryor street side of the New Kimball house and paraded through the streets of the city accompanied by a band of twelve pieces.

These Bibles were placed in every room of the leading hotels of the city by the Atlanta camp of "The Gideons," one of many camps of this organization, which is national in its scope.

The main object of the Gideons is to win commercial men to Jesus Christ. One of their methods is to place a Bible in the guest room of every hotel, according to their motto.

One thousand Bibles will be placed in the following hotels before Saturday evening: The New Kimball, Hotel Ansley, The Southern, Piedmont hotel, Georgian Terrace, Imperial, Hotel Brittain and The Dakota.

The Gideons have been organized fourteen years, and have extended their work through Canada, where over 5,000 Bibles have been placed.

"The nice part of our position is the cordial manner in which the manager of every hotel welcomes our contribution," said Charles H. Burge, the president, as the truck started on its rounds.

The following is the delegation which had charge of the work: A. F. Todd, state president of the Gideons; Edgar Oliver, national vice president of Gideons; C. H. Burge, president Atlanta camp; M. F. Allen, state secretary; C. W. Austin, J. G. Addy, John J. Baker, G. W. Brownlee, R. M. Baker, C. G. Childs, A. H. Cooper, W. L. Hardin, A. S. Holcombe, A. C. Wellborn, W. T Justin, Captain W. H. H. Phelps, W. E. McCalla, H. A. McDonald, J. B. Osborn, L. S. Perry, Newton Phillips, L. C Satterfield, W. D. Warren, R. C. Ozmer, M. I. Seale and M. C Morris.

ATTEMPT MADE TO OUST W. O. W. STATE MANAGER

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 14.—When the sovereign camp of the modern Woodmen of the World resumed its sessions today A. W. Adams, state representative for Florida, offered resolutions demanding the removal of T. W. Mitchell as state manager. The resolutions alleged that Mitchell had been appointed by Sovereign Commander J. C. Root over the protests of almost all the state camps. The resolutions further alleged Mitchell was not in harmony with the state organization.

The delegates on motion of Sovereign Root, after a heated debate voted to refer the resolutions to the committee on distribution.

$20,000,000 FOR WAR IN TRIPOLI

(By Associated Press.)

ROME, June 14.—The Italian chamber of deputies today approved almost unanimously an appropriation of $20,000,000 to continue the war in Tripoli, where the Italians recently suffered a severe reverse at the hands of the Arabs.

MAY USE NAVAL BOATS TO EXPORT EXHIBITS

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The navy department is receiving inquiries from commercial organizations throughout the country regarding the bill recently introduced in congress providing for the utilization of naval vessels for the display of American goods in foreign ports.

If these continue to come the department probably will get out a circular answer pointing out what it regards as the impracticability of such a project from the naval standpoint. Officials declare naval vessels are not constructed to carry cargoes and that although they are rated at so many thousand tons displacement, once their stores and coal are aboard, they are fully loaded and any addition to that load is undesirable.

The misapprehension as to the capacity of warships appears to rest upon the confusion of such craft with the ordinary cargo boats, according to naval officers.

Another Six-Cent Verdict

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 14.—Thomas B. Harned, a Philadelphia lawyer, won a verdict today of six cents damages against the International Magazine company, publishers of the Cosmopolitan, for libel. Harned brought suit for $75,000 on the ground that he had been injured by publication in the Cosmopolitan of articles relating to the "sugar trust."

Flag Day in Washington

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Flag day was celebrated by the employes of the postoffice department in Washington today as it never had been before. During one hour the employes recessed to pay homage to the colors, and assembled in the archways of each of the eight floors of the big interior court and sang songs of the flag. The postmaster general took part in the exercises.

TURNS DOWN $10,000 FOR GIRL HE LOVES

Charles Jason Refuses Offer Made by His Father to Quit Old Love

(By Associated Press.)

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, June 14.—An offer of $10,000 if he would give up the girl he loved and enlist in the United States navy apparently has been turned down by Charles Jason, son of a wealthy rancher near Niobrora, Neb.

Two weeks ago the elder Jason left a check for $10,000 at the recruiting station here to be turned over to his son the moment he enlisted in the navy. The son said he would think it over but he has failed to return and recruiting officers do not believe he will claim the prize. He is believed to have gone to St. Paul where his sweetheart lives.

Instant Postum

A delicious drink—absolutely free from the coffee drug, caffeine.

A level teaspoonful of Instant Postum in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly and makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular (must be boiled)

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water.

RAILROADS REQUEST NEW BAGGAGE RULES IN GA.

Six Companies Petition State Commission for Application of Interstate Rules

Six of the interstate railroads entering Georgia have petitioned the state railroad commission to adopt into its intrastate rules the rule applying to excess baggage as promulgated by the interstate commerce commission, and which became effective on interstate baggage on June 1, this year.

In asking for this ruling the railroads say they are actuated by a desire to have uniform rules on excess baggage for both intrastate and interstate traffic. Heretofore, the only rule in Georgia regarding excess baggage allowed a charge on all baggage exceeding 150 pounds in weight.

The new interstate commerce commission ruling applies to the dimensions of baggage and will affect principally traveling salesmen who must carry their samples in specially constructed cases or trunks.

This rule follows:

"Limit of Size of Single Pieces.—(a) For any piece of baggage (except immigrant baggage checked at port of landing, whips in flexible cases, and public entertainment paraphernalia), any dimension of which exceeds forty-five inches, there will be an additional charge for each additional inch equal to the charge for five (5) pounds of excess weight, gable or dome-shaped ends or similar protuberance, to be included in the measurements.

"(b) No piece of baggage the greatest dimension of which exceeds seventy-two (72) inches (excepting immigrant baggage checked at port of landing, whips in flexible cases, and public entertainment paraphernalia), any dimension of which exceeds forty-five inches, will be accepted for check.

"On and after June 1, 1914, trunks or other rigid containers, with more than two bulging sides, or with two bulging sides that are not opposite to each other, will not be accepted for checking."

The petition for the adoption of this rule was filed by representatives of the Atlanta and West Point, Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, Central of Georgia, Georgia, and Southern railways.

A hearing on the petition has been set by the commission for July 8.

TACCO GIVEN GREAT RECEPTION IN ATLANTA

The Visit Will Continue Indefinitely, and It's Freely Predicted That Every Home Will Extend an Invitation

Tacco is one of the most welcome visitors that ever came to Atlanta—but Tacco didn't come for Tacco was born right in Atlanta and is proud of this fact. Until just recently Tacco was unknown to the world, but if the record of popularity of only a few days is to be taken as an indication Tacco will be world famed.

Tacco is seemingly very popular with all the ladies, especially with those who own their homes. Tacco is also popular already with many automobile owners. It is becoming a frequent thing to see Tacco on a large touring car, roadster, or the finest electrics. It matters not what the car is, the owners all welcome Tacco.

Ask the lady of the most exclusive home and she will tell you that Tacco is cordially received. In fact ask the lady of any home and she'll tell you—provided she's met Tacco—that Tacco is welcomed.

But Tacco is not particular about a place to ride, sit or walk. You are just as likely to find Tacco on the side of an automobile as on the back of the seat. In the home Tacco is just as likely to be seen on a bed, as on a chair, table, or perhaps on the finest piano.

Tacco visits drug stores, furniture houses, etc., but never remains here long, for invariably some customer comes along and carries Tacco home with them.

Tacco has the natural gift of making things look new as never given a home. Tacco has no superior in brightening up old furniture, desks, automobiles, etc.

Tacco is none other than a handy varnish, which is easily applied with a cloth. Tacco is a varnish pure and simple, not a greasy polish.

Tacco is manufactured by the Amber Chemical company, with offices in the Forsyth building.—(Advt.)

RECEIVER IS NAMED FOR SAVOY CAFE CO.

The Blue Seal Ice Cream company, and others, with claims aggregating about $1,500, have filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against C. S. Gregory, doing business as the Savoy Cafe company, at 34 Peachtree street.

Judge Newman of the federal court, appointed E. Basil receiver on the petition of the creditors, who say Gregory has absconded and that the restaurant business he conducted needs protection.

Ten laborer's liens were filed one after another against the cafe Saturday morning in Justice F. M. Powers' court on Decatur street between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock. Each was for salary which the Greek waiters claimed was due them. The amounts ranged from $80 to $10.

A bailiff promptly left to take charge of the cafe for the benefit of the petitioners, and fifteen minutes later the receiver was appointed by the bankruptcy court, which took the affairs out of the hands of the bailiff.

MR. SIDNEY H. PHELAN'S FUNERAL THIS AFTERNOON

Services at St. Luke's at 3:30. Interment Will Be in West View

The funeral of Mr. Sidney H. Phelan will be conducted from St. Luke's Episcopal church at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Dr. C. B. Wilmer will officiate, and the burial will be in West View cemetery.

The following gentlemen will act as pallbearers: Henry H. Cabiniss, Dr. Joseph Jacobs, John E. Murphy, George W. Parrott, Donald M. Bain, Frank S. Ellis, Frank E. Callaway and Martin F. Amorous.

Mr. Phelan who was one of the pioneer citizens of Atlanta, died Friday at his plantation in Crawford county, where he has lived for the past eight years. His body was brought to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ernest E. Dallis, 58 West Fourteenth street, Atlanta, on Saturday, and will remain there until the hour of the funeral.

Mr. Phelan was a Shriner and a member of the Couer de Leon Commandry of the Knights Templar. The latter organization will conduct the services at the grave.

Since he retired to his plantation, Mr. Phelan had been identified with the swamp reclamation projects of Crawford county and had met which such success that he was invited to speak on the subject at several universities.

Mr. Phelan's ideal devotion to his family was one of his very distinctive characteristics, and he was never happier than when his children were grouped around him.

He is survived by four daughters and three sons, Mrs. U. S. Atkinson, Mrs. E. E. Dallis, Mrs. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., Mrs. Barry Wright, of Rome, M. G. Phelan and S. H. Phelan, Jr., of Atlanta, and Leman Phelan, who lived with his father on the Crawford county plantation.

A host of grieved friends are sympathizing with the bereaved family in the loss of their father.

ICEMEN ENJOIN STEWART; NOT PEDDLERS, THEY SAY

Denying that they are peddlers, W. H. Carter and J. H. Crane, icemen, Saturday filed suit in superior court to enjoin Tax Collector A. P. Stewart from levying executions against them for the state's special peddlers' tax of $50.

In their bills of injunction, upon which Judge Pendleton issued temporary restraining orders, both asserted they deliver ice to regular customers and do not hawk it on the streets. This, it was maintained, was not peddling in the meaning of the state's tax law.

The court will decide on June 21 whether or not the distinction is well drawn.

Conference at Plains

PLAINS, Ga., June 14.—The district conference, largely attended by preachers and laymen, closed Wednesday night with a great sermon by Rev. J. A. Thomas, of Americus. Dr. Jackson, of Dawson, was chairman and Rev. B. A. Bailey, secretary of the convention. Rev. Mr. Mather delivered a fine speech at the Baptist church Thursday evening.

CHILDREN'S PLAYGROUNDS WILL OPEN ON MONDAY

Six for Whites and Two for Colored, Headed by Joe Bean, of Athletic Club

The six playgrounds of Atlanta's park department will open for business Monday morning and will run every day (Sunday excepted) until the first of September.

They are as follows:

Grant park, Miss Charlotte Underwood director, Miss Annie Whiteford Hill assistant.

Joyner park, W. M. Francis director, Miss Nellie Orr assistant.

Mims park, Miss Eugenia Jones director.

Pine Hill, Miss Virginia Scott director.

Stewart avenue, Miss Annie McGee director.

English avenue school, director not yet selected.

The two negro play grounds are:

Storrs' school, Houston street, Alice Cary director.

Gray Street school, Willie Kelley director.

The supervisor of playgrounds this season is Joe Bean, athletic director of the Atlanta Athletic club and one of the best men of this profession in the south. The park board and Park Manager Carey consider it fortunate for the playgrounds that they were able to secure his services.

The playgrounds will open at 8:30 in the morning and run until 11:30 o'clock, and will open again at 3:30 in the afternoon and run until 6:30 o'clock.

Since playgrounds were established as a regular feature of city park work three years ago they have grown in attendance and popularity until now the people in every ward in the city are clamoring for them.

The park board this year reduced the number of grounds in order to increase the equipment, deciding it were better to operate six grounds with adequate equipment than a dozen with inadequate equipment. The board hopes to get a sufficient appropriation to operate a playground in every ward next year with full equipment.

FALLS ON SOAPY FLOOR; ASKS COURT FOR $5,000

Miss S. A. Boyd, a public stenographer, who told the superior court Saturday that she suffered permanent injuries when she slipped and fell on a soaped tiling in the Empire building, April 14, has filed suit for $5,000 damages against the trustees of the building.

Miss Boyd asserted that she hurt her foot, ankle and knee in the fall and suffered a shock to her nervous system.

H. M. Atkinson, Samuel Carr and William Aspinwall, trustees of the Empire building, were named as defendants in the suit.

Cleans Blood Through Kidneys

A Most Important Function and One to be Carefully Guarded.

S. S. S. is a Wonder. It Makes You Look and Feel the Picture of Real Health.

The purpose of the kidneys being to filter the blood the question of treating supposed kidney weakness should be considered carefully. Instead of drugs and alleged kidney stimulants the better plan is to purify the blood with an antidotal effect such as you get from S. S. S.

It should be remembered that the kidneys are made up of a fine net work of blood vessels, and it is to stimulate the functional activity of kidney tissue through its capillary network that S. S. S. shows one of its most remarkable effects.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital to healthy kidney action as the nutriment obtained from grain, meat, fats, sugars, or any other part of our daily food is to the natural reconstruction requirements of the tissues. And there is one component of S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating the cellular tissues of the kidneys to a healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. In cases of rheumatism, cystitis, chronic sore throat, huskiness of voice, bronchitis, asthma, and the myriad of other reflex indications of weak kidney action, first purify your blood with S. S. S. so it will enable the tissues to rebuild their cellular strength and regain their normal health.

S. S. S. is prepared by The Swift Specific Co., 157 Nitro Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any deep-seated or obstinate blood trouble, write to their Medical Dept. for free advice. It will be worth your while to do so.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores.

County Farm Education Essential and How It Can Be Had Cheaply

THERE is probably nothing that needs enlightenment or intelligent learning and education as much as in farm life. For instance, much valuable information is being gained daily which has enabled many to increase their revenue of profits from their farm operations. This data is being freely distributed to all parts of the world. Many men are interested enough to become enlightened on these subjects and are imparting it or making use of it to impart to their fellowman. In many counties now throughout the east and west teachers are regularly employed to teach in each county the farmers how to get the best from their efforts. For instance, the county demonstrator or teacher can be employed by the year for $1,500 to $5,000, and no county can possibly spend any money better than to secure a good man to do this work, one that has had some practical experience and knows his business. For instance, any county who has a man of this kind in it can save enough from hog cholera alone by this man keeping up with this work and inoculating the different herds of hogs, or furnishing the different breeders, and he could help them secure their needs. Serum and giving information how it can be done to easily save $5,000 to $25,000 per year in any one county in the country. On the other hand he can do the same work with cattle with tick eradication. He can give information in poultry raising, in clover, pea and alfalfa planting and enable hundreds of people to succeed with their first efforts and know exactly what they are doing.

Furthermore, he can give the farmers of the county information and tell them the best places to buy their seed, their implements, their live stock; and also tell them equally as well the best places to sell their products. He can keep in touch with the markets over the country and let the markets know of he produces that will soon be ready to offer and get buyers to come to the county or farm and bid for these products. A man of this kind employed in every county can more than ten times over every year pay his salary. He can do more to bring the people together and save them thousands of dollars on co-operative buying and selling, and get many encouraged and visit their place and give in a few moments information that they could not possibly get otherwise. He can get for the citizens of the county much valuable literature and get reduced rates on the best farm papers and periodicals. He should write every week an article for each of the county papers. His headquarters should be at the court house of the county and every Saturday he should be in his office, say from Saturday until Monday at noon. Anyone who has anything to exhibit or that would be of interest to others could bring it together every Saturday and have a little free exhibition, say one Saturday once a month of cattle, once a month of poultry, once a month of agricultural products and once a month of canned goods, fancy work and handwork made by the ladies. All of this work will help interest the people, encourage and help build up different things in the county. And, of far more value than anything, if men are in need of money matters or many things they could let their wants be known through the co-operative teacher at the head of each county and he could help them secure their needs. Thousands of dollars could be added to the revenue of the county and the best man that could be had would be the cheapest. It would not fall heavy on the different merchants or business men of the county to be assessed $10 each year for this work. Many of the farmers would volunteer to pay $10 to $15 to employ such a man. The county should pay at least one-half of this money. I do not believe there is a county in the state of Georgia, if they would look at this matter from the right standpoint and think over it but that can readily see the advantages to be had by having employed such a man with a team of his own and one that was willing to get out, pull off his coat and do work himself. He could, by proving to them in traveling over the county, if necessary, prepare and plant one-half to one acre in any section to alfalfa, inoculated peas, or subsoil or dynamite a piece of land to show how this work could be done and not be dependent on the other fellow to do it for him. My experience is that the best way to get a thing done right is to do it yourself.

It is surprising sometimes how a little piece of work done properly in a community is worth to that particular community. For instance, I know of one particular acre of land that was planted on a farm three years ago that has been worth thousands of dollars to that community in actual dollars and cents. It could do the same for other communities if there is not done, simply because the people have never stopped to think of the benefits to be derived from it. Hundreds of counties in this line of work, and some men are receiving $3,000 to $5,000 per year salaries for doing this co-operative county teaching. They are earning and bringing to the county in return five to ten times as much as they are being paid. The value of this to the state is untold, and many counties in the state of Georgia could be progressive, become prosperous and rich and be known throughout the world that will now never be heard of if this work was taken up and pushed for all it is worth in many counties in this state. The possibilities in this work are not one-half told in one-half known and we are sleeping over our rights when we are not taking advantage of them and getting what we are entitled to out of them, and you must remember that often if a few dollars spent does not directly bring revenue to you today it often will in time to come, and anything that helps your community will eventually work around and help you. Education and enlightenment is practically all our country needs to bring about prosperity and wealth to the farmers of Georgia.

Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed Co.,
Memphis, Tenn.
Attention, Mr. J. P. Gentry.

Dear Sir:

Your letter of the 30th, received. You undoubtedly remember how skeptical the writer was as to the claims you made for Aunt Patsy and also the objections made to the high cost of the same, but the results from the feed have removed all doubts.

I did not believe Aunt Patsy would improve the laying qualities of my Buff Rocks, but it has done so and I have a healthier yard of poultry than ever before.

Ever since the writer has been raising poultry he has kept a close record of the cost of the same and the past few months' records show Aunt Patsy is the cheapest feed, if not as you instruct.

I am very glad to report these results, though my monthly orders are the best sign of my satisfaction.

Wishing you continued success, I am,

Very truly,
H. S. ADAMS.

If you are a Baby Chick Eat Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed.

DO YOU want to buy a lot 200x600 feet in size for $15 per front foot on Tuxedo Drive, adjoining one that cost $17 two years ago, and right at R. F. Maddox's beautiful home on Pace's Ferry road? Consider, first, that you get your money's worth now; second, that so especially around Atlanta gives promise of greater or surer enhancement in values, and third, that when a car line brings this lot in touch with Atlanta's center, it will take several times its present price to buy it. It is paid for in full. Reason for selling, owner leaving city. Cash or terms. Owner, Postoffice Box 719, Atlanta.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The Past Week Shows Large Increase in the Number of Inquiries for Property and Also Some Important Building Permits—General Conditions Are Also Showing Improvement—Houses Rented—Realty Men Oppose Tax Features

No new transactions in addition to those announced yesterday were given out yesterday afternoon, but the week as a whole brought distinct encouragement.

Agents were unanimous in reporting a sudden increase of inquiries, and the record of real estate transfers, while made up of small transactions, has been heavy of late.

During the past week there has been some good building news. The permit for the new produce headquarters, for instance, means an expenditure of $205,000. Other permits have reduced the year's deficit to something like $350,000.

Several building announcements were made in addition, and there seems to be a disposition to develop property, particularly on main thoroughfares close in.

Two very encouraging indications are the lack of building activity and the scarcity of vacant property inside the city limits. Good building lots, convenient to car lines and in good sections, are hard to find and are held at high prices.

Consequently there is much development in the suburbs. Developers, finding undeveloped tracts inside the city almost impossible to find, are going out further.

General conditions, too, are helping. The new cotton crop is barely three months off, and in Georgia, it will be the most economically handled crop known for years. The secretary of the treasury has announced that he will issue emergency currency should the banks be called on for it in periods of stringency, such as the crop moving season.

A great percentage of real estate loans and notes, made last spring a year ago, have either been paid by now or arrangements have been made for extensions.

The strong position of the market is shown by the fact that there have been no sacrifices of property. There has been a good deal of swapping, perhaps, but owners have not given away many valuable equities.

HOUSES RENTED.

Smith, Ewing & Rankin on yesterday announced the following list of houses rented in the past few days:

No. 28 Joe Johnston avenue, B. Phillips, $12.50.

No. 46 Rogers street, O. L. Graham, $15.

No. 41 Mills street, R. L. Boshe, $22.50.

No. 56 West North avenue, Mrs. Clyde Glenn, $50.

No. 480 Whitehall street, T. J. Turner, $42.50.

No. 168 West North avenue, Mrs. L. Hawkins, $75.

No. 111 Walton street, Mrs. A. E. Webb, $25.

No. 243 East Georgia avenue, Mrs. Pope, $25.

No. 68 West Georgia avenue, Mrs. E. O. Hawkins, $15.60.

No. 140 McAfee street, A. N. Martin, $16.60.

No. 90 Holderness street, P. H. Henry, $27.50.

No. 293 Forsyth street, S. W. McGehee, $25.

No. 32 Pavilion street, G. E. Gable, $22.50.

THE INCOME TAX.

Certain features of the income tax, as applied to real estate, which were enumerated in detail in a recent issue, are meeting the protest of real estate agents. At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges opposition was expressed.

The commitee also put itself on record as favoring the amendment of Senator Hoke Smith to the national banking laws allowing national banks to accept real estate collateral.

Protest Court Abolishment

JACKSON, Ga., June 14.—To protest against the city court of Jackson being abolished there was a meeting of business men held here last night. Representative J. H. Mills has given notice that he will introduce a bill to abolish the city court at the approaching session of the general assembly. A petition is being circulated asking Senator W. B. Search, of the Twenty-sixth district to defeat the bill in the senate.

The city court of Jackson was established in 1911. Hon. H. M. Pletcher is judge and Colonel C. L. Redman solicitor of the city court. Indications now point to a hard fight over the city court matter.

FESTIVAL CHORUS TODAY WILL BE CONDUCTED BY DR. STARNES

DR. PERCY J. STARNES AND His BATON.

Dr. Starnes has been director of the Atlanta Music Festival chorus since its organization a year ago. He will conduct the season's farewell concert this afternoon.

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, who has directed the Atlanta Music Festival chorus since its organization more than a year ago, and under whom it has attained a position of pre-eminence in the musical world, will conduct in person at the big free concert this afternoon in the auditorium-armory. At this concert the chorus will appear for the last time before disbanding for the summer months. The concert will mark the culmination of the first year's efforts and will give all Atlantians the splendid opportunity of seeing and hearing the finest chorus in the south. This chorus now numbers between 400 and 500 voices. It is double the size of the famous chorus in Buffalo, and it is nearly equal in size to that of the Mendelssohn chorus in Toronto. The organization is permanent, and work will be begun again in the fall. For next year tentative plans are under way for the presentation of an oratorio, probably the "Creation," with soloists and a big orchestra.

The concert this afternoon will begin at 4 o'clock and will be composed principally, so far as the choral parts are concerned, of old English and old Irish ballads. The famous composition of Gounod's, "By Babylon's Wave," will be the concluding number. The organ selections will be from Grieg, and will include some Peer Gynt music, a Norwegian bridal procession and "Pome Erotique."

Dr. Starnes has brought unusual ability and experience to bear on the training of Atlanta's chorus. Before becoming the city organist under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival association, he was organist to the Royal opera house in Covent Garden, London, as successor to the late Sir Arthur Sullivan. He was also organist at the Royal Albert hall, London; festival organist to the Brighton Sacred Harmonic society, and conductor for Sir Wilson Barrett for the production of the "Sign of the Cross."

MISS PAINTER UNDAUNTED WHEN CALLED TO BIG JOB

Daughter of Fertilizer King Confidently Steps Into Shoes of Dead Father

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 14.—Despite the fact that she is the first southern woman to have the business cares of a big corporation cast upon her shoulders, Miss Okie Painter, the only child of the late E. O. Painter, known as the fertilizer king, declares she feels no doubt of her ability to continue the work of her father as president of the Painter Fertilizer company, a half million dollar concern.

Mr. Painter lost his life when he fell from a ferry boat in the St. Johns river.

Whether he was accidentally drowned or whether his death was suicide is a question brought up through the fact that he was one of the most heavily insured men in the United States, policies in force totaling $1,178,000, a large part of that amount having been written since the first of the present year. The fact that a big legal battle will result before the insurance is paid has been hinted strongly.

"Having been my father's closest adviser in life and knowing his plans and views, I see no difficulty in carrying on the business just as he would had he lived." This was Miss Painter's answer when asked as to her plans for the business of which she has been elected president.

"For almost ten years," she said, "I have been identified with the Painter Fertilizer company, as my father's private secretary and as advertising manager. I know every detail of the business. I have had a business training peculiarly to fit me for the work. I am a graduate of Stetson university and have also taken a business course. I am a stenographer and bookkeeper as well and although these are the qualifications of a clerk, still they give me a knowledge of business details that I can utilize daily.

"There will be no radical change in the conduct of the business. Everything will be carried out just as had been planned by my father."

Miss Painter is twenty-seven years old and has the bearing of a business woman in her every move. She sits at the desk of her late father with and the discipline she maintains among the office attaches is as strict as that of the regular army. One might forget that she was a woman insofar as the showing of any feminine traits in the conduct of the business of the day. Like her father, she is early at her desk and late to leave. She cares little for the dictates of fashion or society and suits her habits and garb to the needs of her work.

"There should be no clamor about a woman taking up the reins of business," she said. "If she is prepared for the work, and I believe I am.'

That the company has faith in her ability to head the concern is apparent in the fact that at the same meeting at which she was elected to the position a dividend of 10 per cent was declared just as had been planned before the death of her father. Other plans, which include an expansion of the business are going ahead under her management.

GUARDS BLAMED FOR STRIKE DISORDERS

Deputy Sheriff Tells Senate Probe of Conditions in West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 14.—A happy and contented people living wholesome lives among the hills of West Virginia, thrown into lawless terror by an industrial strike, was described to the senate mine strike investigation committee today. Former Governor Glasscock and a group of the men and women brought in from the hills to tell their own stories, described conditions.

"When the guards paraded up and down the creek with their rifles on their shoulders, then trouble broke out," said E. Brazee, a grizzled old mountaineer who for nine years as a deputy sheriff preserved law and order on Paint creek single handed.

Former Governor Glasscock told the committee that the principal complaints of he miners that came to him concerned the mine guards.

Mr. Glasscock made clear to the committee that he had made two attempts to get an agreement between miners and operators to arbitrate their difference. In both cases he said the miners were willing to arbitrate but the operators declined.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

AT THE MONTGOMERY.

The reason for the tremendous crowds at every performance at the Montgomery this week is because Dee Baker, the wonderful character singer who has won so much favor in Atlanta in such a short time. Mr. Baker's singing is so far different from the usual run of singers and his songs are the latest New York and Chicago song hits. His character impersonations and his wardrobe are wonderful and his lightning wardrobe changes which he makes are marvelous, making them between each song so quick that you have to take more than one look to make sure that he is one and the same person.

Mr. Baker's engagement has been extended for an indefinite stay at the Montgomery, and the many patrons have a treat in store for them every day.

Tomorrow Mr. Baker will sing the New Rube Song, entitled "Oh, How She Dances."

No more knives, no more scissors, no more razors, no more blood poisoning. Away with the instruments of barbarous butchery. Jacob's Magic Corn Liquid will take out any corn, hard or soft, whole, and positively without pain or danger. Never pare or cut a corn, for if the blade slips, as it frequently does, and the corn bleeds, there is serious danger of blood poisoning, and many deaths have been caused in this way.

The first application of Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid gives instant relief from pain, and if a soft corn of new growth, will remove it. Hard, deep, stubborn corns require several applications, but are just as completely removed, root and all, and there is no possibility of danger, nor pain. Tampering with a corn causes irritation and makes it harder to remove. Use Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid we guarantee it to be successful and painless. 20c, by mail 22c.—(Advt.)

FEDERAL PIKE THROUGH NORTH GEORGIA ASSURED

Congressman Gordon Lee Outlines Plan for Construction of Highway

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
DALTON, Ga., June 14.—A government pike road, costing $20,000, and extending from Ringgold, in Catoosa county, through Dalton and probably several miles into Gordon county, is more than a possibility—in fact, it is practically a certainty.

Friday a meeting of representative citizens, among whom were a majority of the board of county commissioners, was held at the court house, where Congressman Gordon Lee outlined the plan. He stated that while he couldn't make a definite promise, he was confident he could secure, within two days after the board took action favorably, an appropriation of $10,000 from the government; this, combined with a similar amount from Whitfield county and a like amount from Catoosa county, would be used in the construction, under government supervision, of an excellent pike through the two counties, joining the government pike at Ringgold, and extending south and into Gordon county.

Present at the meeting were L. R. Wiggins, ordinary of Catoosa county, and W. E. Biggers, a member of the board of commissioners, who positively guaranteed that Catoosa would appropriate its part. Now it's up to Whitfield county as to whether or not the road will be built, and the people here are confident the board will take favorable action at its first meeting in the future.

The pike would follow the line of the proposed Johnston-Sherman highway connecting Chattanooga and Atlanta, and traversing the routes taken by the Confederate and Federal forces during the Civil war. It would prove a big link—almost one-half of the distance of the proposed national highway.

The money from the government would come as a result of the appropriation made for road building experimental purposes by congress last year. The bill provided for an appropriation of $10,000 to each state in the union; but practically all of the states refused the appropriation, the total of which amounted to $500,000, and the money was then offered to five states. Mr. Lee is confident, however, that he can yet secure the $10,000 which was Georgia's original part, provided Whitfield and Catoosa show the co-operative spirit.

WRITES BLESSING TO FRIEND, TAKES POISON

John Cook, of Moultrie, May Die From Laudanum He Swallowed

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
MOULTRIE, Ga., June 14.—"God bless my friends and brothers. I am going to h—l, if I don't go to heaven."

This was the substance of a note scrawled by John Cook on the back of a letter from his sweetheart just before swallowing an ounce of laudinum today.

Cook was at the home of his sister, Mrs. Swilley, and while the rest of the family were at dinner, he swallowed the drug and went to the edge of the city, where he lay down in a clump of bushes.

The note and empty bottle aroused the family and the police joined with relatives and friends in making a search for Cook. He was alive, but limp, when found. He was taken to the Daniel sanitarium. His chances for recovery are believed to be slight.

Cook has been employed in a grocery store by his brother, L. H. Cook.

SPEER REFUSES PETITION FOR INJUNCTION ON CARTER

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
MACON, Ga., June 14.—The L. Carter company, of Odom, won another decisive victory in the United States district court this morning when Judge Emory Speer refused the petition of several alleged creditors to grant an injunction against L. Carter, as president of the company, and as an individual.

Without even hearing from the defendant company, and before Attorney Isaac, for the petitioners, had finished his arguments, Judge Speer held that he could not issue an injunction as prayed for. He again alluded to the poverty of the claim against the L. company, and said that Mr. Isaac's "showing was exceedingly attendated and shadowy," and far from being sufficient to justify the appointment of a receiver or to authorize the issuance of an injunction.

FORMER MINE GUARD TELLS HOW "DEATH SPECIAL" POURED STREAM OF FIRE ON STRIKERS

Machine Guns on Armored Train Pelted Camp, Says Witness—Pale-Faced Women Tell How Peaceful Community Was Transformed Into Theater of War—Wounded Mother Shows How She Shielded Babe From Rain of Bullets. Senate Committee Astounded at Testimony

(By Associated Press.)
CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 14.—About a single battle in the coal strike on the Paint and Cabin Creek districts centered today's inquiry by the senate committee investigating the coal mine strike.

Almost all day the committee heard statements concerning the attack on Holly Grove, a strikers' camp, from an armored train which was run up into the strike district on February 7.

The committee was astounded at the testimony of Lee Calvin, an ex-mine guard, who was one of the men in the armored train when the strikers' camp was fired on. Cisco Estep, a miner, was killed and Mrs. Annie Hall wounded. Calvin, called by the attorneys for the miners, told a sensational story of the attack. After relating he had been a "chief guard" on Cabin Creek, and had left the district because of the shootings there, he said that Sheriff Bonner Will and Quinn Morton, a mine operator had prevailed upon him to join a party going up Paint Creek in the armored train.

"There were ten or twelve men in the armored car attached to the train," said Calvin, "and when we got just above Paint Creek junction all of them began getting rifles ready. They tried to give me a rifle, but I told them I had no shooting to do. The brakeman came through the train and turned down the lights.

STREAM OF FIRE.

"He told us not to raise the windows, but to shoot right through the windows. I was leaning out of an open window and as we came up to Holly Grove I saw a stream of fire start out of the baggage car where the machine guns were mounted. The stream kept up as we went through Holly Grove. "As we passed I saw three or four flashes of fire from the tents."

He did not see any shots from the tents before the shooting began from the train.

"I just heard the engine whistle blow 'toot, toot' and the shooting from the train began. I am positive the shooting first began from the baggage car."

The witness said that Quinn Morton was on the train when the train had passed the miners' camp at Holly Grove. He said Morton came running back through the car and shouted:

"Back up the train and we will give them another round."

"I think the sheriff told him something about there being women and children up in those tents and he would not shoot," said the witness.

MARTINE LETS BOMB LOOSE.

At this statement Senator Martine, of New Jersey, almost leaped from his chair.

"What sort of a man is this man, Paul Morton—I mean Quinn Morton," he shouted. "Is he an ordinary American citizen that he could order such a thing?"

The attorneys for the coal operators were on their feet in a moment and for a time the committee room was in confusion.

"Mr. Morton will be brought before your committee," shouted Attorney Jackson. "and you will see him and talk with him."

"God help me then," remarked Senator Martine.

The attorneys for the operators protested vigorously against Senator Martine's remarks and after some argument they were told by the committee that they would be given an opportunity to cross examine Calvin and to call witnesses in rebuttal.

"The senator ought not to say that," said Mr. Jackson.

"I just can't help it," said Senator Martine.

Under examintion by Mr. Belcher, the witnesses repeated the statement that "Quinn Morton came through the car hollering "Back up the train and we'll give them another round." He said that when the train reached Mucklow just above Healy Grove the men in the armored car remained there for three days, until after the last "battle of Mucklow." Calvin told the committee that he warned the company bookkeeper not to go out, but who was killed in the battle, not to go up into the hills that day.

"I was there when they brought him back on a stretcher," he said, "him and the others who were shot in the battle."

The witness declared that Chesapeake and Ohio detectives had "slugged him" in a Charleston hotel, because he had quit the company.

PALEFACED WOMEN TESTIFY.

Palefaced women and men who showed traces of years of arduous toil digging coal from the West Virginia mountains told the committee their side of the controversy.

It was a tale of a peaceful community of happy, contented people, transformed into a theater of war, and the members of the senate committee sat back, with startled glances, as witness after witness told the story of the strike.

The attorneys for the striking miners in presenting their case called about a dozen men and women of the hills to tell the committee of the attack on the strikers' camp at Holly Grove.

The attorneys for the mine operators insisted they would show that the train was fired on from the town before the machine guns in the armored car were turned loose.

ADVENT OF "DEATH SPECIAL."

The advent of "death special," as the miners termed it, or the "bull moose" train as it was called by the operators, was the principal subject of the inquiry this afternoon, following a general condemnation by witnesses of the "mine guards" who were brought into the district by the operators and who former Governor Glasscock said he considered the principal cause of the trouble, when he declared martial law.

A detailed description of the armored train was obtained from Harry Arthur, who was employed by the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad as a brakeman on the train. He described the steel sheeting which encased the baggage car of the train and the two machine guns which were mounted so as to give the greatest possible range through the protected doors of the car.

HOW MOTHER SHIELDED BABES.

Mrs. Annie Hall, who limped into the committee room, told the committee how she shielded her three little children from the bullets by hiding them in the chimney corner of her little home at Holly Grove when the armored train made its appearance. She said she had been shot through the feet by a bullet which passed through the Bible and hymnal on her parlor table.

W. B. Buzzard told the committee that a man with whom he was talking on a Cabin Creek train was shot from a closet on the car after an argument with a mine guard. No criminal action had ever resulted from the shooting, so far as he knew.

Sidney Byers, a miner, said that the people in the strike district were "terrorized by the behavior of the mine guards," who paraded through the district fully armed. Ralph McNeil, of Erkdale, declared he had been mistreated by guards and Harvey S. Campbell, a former special agent of the C. and O. railroad, said that he had ridden on the "bull moose" train and had been ordered to shoot if stones were thrown at the train.

"'If you shoot, shoot to kill,' was our orders," he said. Romeo Bejett, another former special railroad agent, gave similar testimony.

At tonight's session Lee Calvin resumed the stand and Attorney Byrne, representing Former Sheriff Hill, took up his cross-examination. Attorney Belcher, for the miners took occasion to declare that his side did not desire to "blame Sheriff Hill for what happened at Holly Grove."

"Did the sheriff give any orders to shoot?" asked Mr. Byrne.

"No, I didn't hear him," said Calvin. Senator Martine asked the witness whether the sheriff saw the men loading their rifles.

"Yes, he saw them," said the witness," but he did not give orders either way."

Attorney Byrne endeavored to find out if it was not Calvin himself who said, "Let's go back and give them another round" after the train had shot its way through Holly Grove. The witness denied this flatly. Mr. Byrne concluded his cross-examination without altering the original story told by Calvin.

Attorney Davis, for the Paint Creek Collieries company, then took up the cross-examination. He went into the history of the witness and the reasons for his application for work at Mucklow, which he secured on as a mine guard. Calvin said he was originally looking for "construction work" but that Manager Hale at Mucklow agreed to recommend him for a place as guard. He worked as a guard for about twenty days, he said. Mr. Davis' examination did not last long, and the committee ordered Calvin to return on Monday.

The operators were allowed to put on two witnesses in advance of the opening of their case Monday. George Carney and Hillborn Price said that after working in West Virginia mines for a time they went to the Ohio field, which was unionized. Fines were imposed on them by the union, they said, for working in a non-union mine in West Virginia. The fines were not paid and they returned to West Virginia.

Education Worth $25,000

CHICAGO, June 14.—A college education is worth $25,000, according to statistics compiled by the administration office of Northwestern university and made public today. In seeking to prove in dollars and cents the value of a higher education, the university took a census of the class of 1903, members of which have had ten years to get "settled."

The investigation showed that for the first five years out of school the average earning power of the graduates was $857, and for the next five years the earning capacity jumped to $1,862.

According to the United States census bureau the average earning capacity of the salaried man in Chicago is $1,202. An estimate of the total value of a college education was arrived at by finding the difference between the earnings of the graduate and multiplying the sum by forty, which the statisticians considered a fair estimate of a man's years of service.

VARDAMAN WANTS TO PROBE CAUSES OF WRECKS

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Senator Vardaman declared today at the regular session of congress, beginning in December, he would try to bring about a congressional investigation of the causes of railroad wrecks.

AUCTION

NEXT THURSDAY IS THE DAY

Ex-Secretary Wilson===

Hon. James Wilson, former Secretary of Agriculture in Washington during several administrations, said not long ago in a speech before the people of Augusta, Ga.:

"You are going to find your lands getting away from you and prices advancing. The people from the North and West are coming South. This is the realm of future prosperity. The soil, climate and the people of the South have heretofore been greatly misunderstood. A new epoch in its history is now beginning. Opportunity for development in the South is unrivaled, and is here for both capitalist and home-seeker."

Mr. Wilson is well fitted to speak about the South. And these words coming from a man who knows every section of the country are very significant. He has been here many times and has studied the land question in the South closely. For that reason he is well qualified to speak.

What he says is reason why real estate is an excellent investment, and particularly Atlanta real estate. And past history shows that no section of Atlanta is better for investment in real estate than Ansley Park. That's why the twenty-five lots which will be auctioned off next Thursday in Ansley Park Annex will be excellent investments. Somebody is going to make some money. Will it be you?

Andrew Carnegie Says----

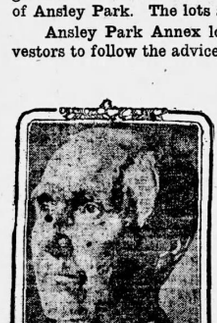
"Young woman or young man, buy some suburban property and hold on to it. It is the surest investment since civilization."

The famous ironmaster knows what he is talking about. He has practiced what he preaches, for he is a large landowner.

Everybody knows what happened after every other auction of Ansley Park lots. Those who keep posted say the same thing will happen regarding the Ansley Park Annex lots which will be auctioned off next Thursday afternoon.

Thousands upon thousands of dollars have been made for Ansley Park investors. The name of Ansley Park has been synonymous with increased values and steady enhancement. Ansley Park Annex has been given the same care and attention which characterized the development of Ansley Park. The lots are high and overlook Ansley Park.

Ansley Park Annex lots present a good opportunity to Atlanta investors to follow the advice of the millionaire ironmaster.



Russell Sage----

During his lifetime, the advice of Russell Sage was sought by the greatest financiers in the world. He was an authority on the accumulation of money and that he was a good authority was demonstrated by the many millions which he left when he died. This is what he thought about real estate investments:

"Buy lots in outlying districts, paying a small sum each week; await developments, follow your vocation and in the end other people have made money for you."

That this was good advice has been shown time and again in Atlanta, and with Ansley Park lots in particular. The enhancement in this property has been phenomenal. It is pointed out by enthusiastic Atlantans as an illustration of Atlanta's wonderful growth. The whole South knows about it.

That's why Ansley Park Annex lots which will be auctioned off next Thursday will present an excellent opportunity for following the advice of the late financier.

Grover Cleveland----

Not only successful business men and financiers point to enhancement in realty values as good illustrations of the accumulation of wealth, but the same advice is given by statesmen. Among those who made a close study of this was the late ex-President Grover Cleveland. This is what he said:

"More wealth has been gathered from the suburban realty than all other methods combined."

Isn't the advice of such authorities worth following? Just think of the Atlanta men you know about who have made fortunes by the enhancement of Atlanta real estate values. You can count lots of them. Even among your friends you will find some who have made money by simply buying Atlanta real estate, and then, as Russell Sage said: "Let other people make money for you."

Remember the day of the auction—

NEXT THURSDAY, JUNE 19. If you go out there and buy a lot, it will probably be an eventful day for you. It may be that your fortune will date from that day. There are twenty-five lots out there waiting to make money for some folks. Be one of the folks.

Auction Ansley Park Annex

THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1913
3:30 P. M.

25 LOTS 10 PER CENT CASH, $25 PER MONTH

When you put money in property, think of these things: Location, surroundings, progress of the section.

All admit that the North Side of Atlanta is in the right direction, and if you pick the right location you can't go wrong.

The surroundings of this property are the best Atlanta affords. The section from Peachtree to Piedmont Avenue is the heart of the cream of North Side property.

This includes the top of Atlanta realty---the part that has grown a thousandfold in the past five years and where the next three years means the climax of high values and profit.

These lots are between North Boulevard and the Ansley Park Golf Links. The Boulevard is one of the principal north and south streets of Atlanta, and one of the logical links in the proposed Battlefield Drives around Atlanta.

The Golf Links speak for themselves. A number of the expert golfers have pronounced these Links the equal of any 9-hole course in the country.

One of Atlanta's prominent citizens remarked a few days ago that he considered a Golf Course the greatest possible acquisition to a residence section.

There is never a possibility of property surrounding a Golf Course being anything but the highest class residence property.

This property is located directly in the line of progress. The way to make money is to "get in the way" of progress, and you can't miss it here.

Remember, an auction is where you bid what you please. You set the price yourself, and that will be the way these 25 lots will be sold.

We own 93 lots in this tract and all will be finished in the same high class manner. We could only get 25 ready for you by the 19th of June.

These lots will be sold 10 per cent. cash and $25 per month, with 6 per cent. on deferred payments.

These terms allow you to participate. Think it over.

The real value of these lots is from $1,500 to $3,000---average value about $2,350. Remember YOU place the value at an auction. Any lot here will be worth $4,000 to $5,000 in three years.

Ansley Park has increased 11,000 per cent in eight years. Would you be willing to predict what the value will be in the next eight years?

The Annex is a continuation of the old Park. Its history will be a repetition of the first. Why not? Built by the same man on the same lines, in the same direction, for the same class of people.

The lots that are shaded are the ones to be sold.

Trading in Stocks Was Broad And Active for Short Session

Many Stocks Were Carried Above Their Prices of Week Ago, Having Completely Recovered From the Downward Plunge

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 14.—The advance in stocks, which came after the violent break earlier in the week, went on unchanged today. Virtually every important stock traded in shared in the day's rise, while added substantial amounts to the large gains achieved since the upturn began.

Many stocks were carried above their prices of a week ago, having sustained a complete recovery from the downward plunge after rendition of the Minnesota rate decision.

Operations for the long account were carried on more confidently today, but nothing has been done exceeding in weight the markets' demonstration of firmness yesterday. Concerted efforts were made to drive in the short interest, which was forced to retreat. The advance was continued through the half-day session without serious interruption.

Growth of ease in money rates was an important influence in broadening speculation for the long account. Predictions of a large cash gain on the week by the banks were fulfilled, the bank statement showing an actual cash gain of approximately $4,000,000. Substantial additions in securities was reflected in a scaling down of loans, and nearly $9,000,000 was dded to the excess cash reserve.

In the weekly trade reviews emphasis was laid on various favorable features of the week's trading, including the stock exchange report, the better tone in the money market and lessening of tension in trade circles.

The bond market was firm. Total sales par value, $1,297,000.

United States coupon 2s advanced 1-8 and the registered 2s 1-2 on call on the week.

FINANCIAL BUREAU ON STOCKS.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The financial bureau says: "Wednesday's buying opportunities in the active stocks with the intuition to seize them for quick profits. Look for increased market today. Wheat and corn are sold on advances."

STEEL STOCK REVIEW.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The long decline in the stock market reached a climax this week in a violent break which was carried in many cases to the lowest point in several years. Activity ceased entirely to force prices below the quotations at the close of last month.

The immediate occasion of the decline was the United States supreme court decision in the Minnesota rate case, which was interpreted by Wall street as unfavorable to the railroads.

Troubled conditions in the foreign market, liquidation for European account and the monthly statement by the United States Steel corporation showing a loss in unfilled tonnage were contributing factors in the downward movement. Underlying these factors was a lack of confidence which had prevailed for months.

The turn in the market came toward the close of the week as a natural reaction from the abnormally rapid decline. Secretary McAdoo's statement that he would sanction issuance of emergency currency helped to bring about the upturn.

AUSTIN & RAIT'S MARKET LETTER

NEW YORK, June 14.—Many who have been selling cotton with impunity for some time, realized that they were not making much progress, and that the bull support was in fact being steadily sold on the favorable crop prospects, and the belief that tariff agitation in connection with the coming fall elections would probably preclude the possibility of any radical tariff revision for the present generation.

In this writing the situation surrounding the financial community seems more hopeful, although in all fairness it must be admitted that while directly affects the cotton market, was responsible for a sharp break in prices, and that there were $500,000,000 available for stock exchange emergency purposes, and that they were at a deliberate warning of probable stringency of money in the fall, but the authorities stated unofficially that they made it evident that the mention of this money was not to be construed as a permit that the banks had such funds existed. It may have the effect of causing financial institutions to lend more freely when the time of the moving of the various producers of cotton and grain will be necessary and practically certain.

Reports from the south indicate that normal progress has been made in the planting of the past week, excepting in parts of the Carolinas, Louisiana and Texas, where there have been excessive rains and rather low temperatures, and cultivation has been delayed. However, warm and clear weather was in progress at the end of the week, and from the central and western belts, the planting situation was very satisfactory. It will be remembered that the critical period of the growth of crop is first being entered, and on the theory that favorable weather will be received with many scares, we are inclined to favor the bull side of the list when marked depression occurs. Just now the cotton crop is probably more vulnerable, because of the heavy short interest in the list, but trade factors are looking ahead are willing to hedge their future sales against the crop movement in the 12c level basis New York. Spinners are also taking advantage of the opportunity of the movements of the near months, to warrant a belief that the bull support will continue, cotton stocks here being abnormally small.

Continued Oil.—The most potent bull argument is the difficulty in obtaining spot oil. A meeting of several points is to be held for the purpose of determining what is to be done in the matter. Consuming demand halts at a certain price, and while this is largely due to financial circles, yet the hand-to-mouth buying suggests a total reluctance to impart a bullish undertone to this market. Should there be no new crop deliveries as yet, despite the continued satisfactory crop outlook, we believe that there is a fair-sized short interest in the list, and that a scramble for contracts, consumers should interest speculators, as stability will shown in the next market values. Naturally, continued favorable accounts will have influence, but it is unlikely that the crop will be carried with safety through the critical summer months without experiencing some setbacks, which will stiffen purchases of oil on the moderate recessions.

Easy Bargain

Having tried unsuccessfully various highly recommended remedies for dislodging selfish passengers from coveted seats, the woman who swung from a strap in front of the steady man tried talking at him to her husband. As a diversion to the changing, she said impressively:

"If you, James, should ever be so impolite as to sit down where there was a woman in the car left standing, I would never speak to you again as long as I live."

The man looked up then.

"Lucky devil," he said. "Not many of us could purchase peace at that price."

PHILADELPHIA BANK A GOOD EXAMPLE.

The growing tendency of city governments to realize, as Mayor Harrison of Chicago, regent in planning future rapid transit facilities for their communities is well illustrated by the recent appointment of A. Merritt Taylor as director of a new department of city transit to be established, and his future needs with special reference to subway and elevated extensions. Mr. Taylor was given the widest latitude in securing the best technical advice in this important matter, and enlisted the services of Ford, Bacon & Davis, consulting engineers, from New York, who specialized in the transit problems of the larger cities in the United States. The resulting report is said to have met with favor by the Blankenburg administration. Some of the possibilities with its findings and recommendations believe that it sets a pace, standard and example to other cities.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF DRY GOODS MARKET

NEW YORK, June 14.—Jobbers are buying their fall requirements of domestic cottons in a very careful way and are placing orders only for a portion of normal needs. Few operators were providing any goods to be held, and the absence of speculation of any character gives the market a decided appearance of hesitancy. The combined influence of tight money and tariff uncertainties are the principal factors in the controlling force in the situation.

The strong feature of the market is that stocks are unusually low and the spot sales are frequent enough to keep prices steady. Occasional irregularities in fine trading have been made on wide and narrow sheetings, tickings, and bleached muslins, but generally the purchases, values have stiffened again.

Fruits of the loom 4x4 bleached muslins were reduced from 8 5-8c to 8 7-4c, at which price all the goods offered, were taken, and the goods are not at value preparatory to an advance. Wide sheetings were revised only two cents on a yard. Hosiery and underwear manufacturers have maintained prices for shrinking on basis of last season, and the men now on the roads are selling to moderate sized advance orders. Wash goods sales in the jobbing houses were very successful during the week, and jobbers and retailers are active in cleaning up the small lots that are to be had.

Prices range as follows:

Print cloths, 28-inch, 6¼-64; 3 1-4c; 64x60s, 3 1-2c; 38 1-2-inch, 64x64s, 5 1-16c to 5 1-8c; brown sheetings, southern standards, 7-4c; tickings, 8 ounce, 13 3-4c; denims, 9 ounce, 14c; standard prints, 5 1-2c; standard staple ginghams, 6 3-4c; dress ginghams, 9 1-4c.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 14.—The cotton goods markets are quiet and steady. Large receipts of burlap have been received in the country this week. Agents are opening lines of spring hosiery and underwear daily. Business is quiet for advance shipments. Yarns rule steadier.

SURPLUS RESERVE ITEM SHOWS LARGE INCREASE

This Item Rose $8,824,100, Banks' Currency Gain Exceeded Estimates

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 14.—The Financier says today:

Exceeding all preliminary estimates of the currency gain, based on the week's operations, the New York clearing house banks, in their statement of actual conditions, issued today, showed a total addition to cash holdings of $10,072,000, and a deposit increase of $4,402,000, the bulk of the gain went to swell the excess reserve.

This 100h rose $8,824,100, bringing the surplus above legal requirements to $8,512,600.

The favorable showing thus made was helped by a contraction of $5,865,000 in the loan account, which reflected part of the severe liquidation in the stock market early in the week.

WEEKLY CROP SUMMARY.

Cotton crop summary for the week: Correspondents' reports show quite clear that the cotton crop promises well over the last four or five years for that territory as a whole and that in Texas, Oklahoma and Alabama is only slightly less good. Growth in these sections has been rapid and with rapid owing to low temperatures, but no harm has been done as yet. Some days of warmth will not quickly overcome. Altogether, in the central and western states the size of the plant does not run so large as in the eastern for two years. But it is most healthy and seems quite ready to make rapid growth under normal warm weather begins. But of more import since at least one week than ever in the past few feet state of cultivation and excellent condition is the striking characteristic of the entire belt. Local showers have come and rainfall was generally abundant and beneficial. In Georgia and Texas cutting of the crop has does not appear so high as at the close of last week, the latter being above the record-breaking cold for June and continuous daily rains. Practically no field work was done and much grass and weeds are growing. With the coming week will have an important bearing on the outlook for the crop. If warm, improvement will be quick. If more rains fall losses will result which only a favorable latest season can correct.

North Carolina—Cotton recently come up has not been cultivated, and is in some cases now becoming quite grassy as result of week or continuous rain. Stand generally good and fine, but not making rapid growth, owing to extremely low temperatures.

South Carolina—Week of continuous rains. Cultivation suspended. Chopping unfinished and much grass and weeds in evidence. Stand looking in localities. But other sections report doing well and this crop is very promising.

Georgia—Continued rainfall has prevented cultivation and some plants becoming grassy. Weather for next week will have very important bearing on crop which is in need of warmth and sunshine.

Alabama—Rainfall of week, while excessive in localities was not general. Cultivation at a while plant growth is below expectations, owing to cool weather and lack of sunshine. Stand is excellent shape. Rapid growth certain with return of normal temperatures.

Mississippi—Favorable moisture, clean fields and good stands, outlook for crop is good. Cultivation and other conditions best in years. Fruit is small, however. Occasional reports of farmers plowing in cotton lands owing to prevalence of weevil.

Tennessee—Hot weather needed to push plant growth. Otherwise conditions are favorable.

Arkansas—Fields in high state of cultivation. Too cold for rapid growth of cotton. Stand in shape. Week's rains of wonderful benefit.

Texas—Excellent week's work done. Specially good north and west where rain was abundant. Rain would be beneficial south central and southern sections, where top crop is forming and plant is small. Grasshoppers numerous west, but have done little damage. Northern and eastern counties say plant blooming freely.—J. B. Turner.

THE WEATHER.

Atlanta and Vicinity—Fair tonight and Sunday.

Georgia and Alabama: Generall fair tonight and Sunday; light variable winds.

Above 500 Attendt Elks' Celebration Of Birth of Flag

Between 400 and 500 good Americans gathered in the lodgeroom of the Elks' clubhouse Saturday evening to celebrate the 136th anniversary of the birth of the flag of the United States.

Flag day, June 16, and Elks' Memorial day, the first Sunday in December, are two fixed anniversaries celebrated by every lodge of Elks, and a solemn and beautiful ritual is prescribed for each.

In addition to the ritual, there was an interesting program, which included an address by Brigadier General R. K. Evans, commander of the Department of the Gulf; the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner," by the audience, and prayers by Chaplain H. H. Waldauer and Rabbi Marx. Miss Regina Jambo read the history of the flag. Mrs. John Edgar McKee sang a song of her own composition, "We'll Stand By the Flag," and there were many other interesting features.

When the program was completed refreshments were served and then the celebration was turned into a dance.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NEW ORLEANS COTTON MARKET

Main Bullish Influences Were Operations in July and the Cold Weather

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, June 14.—Cotton week closed at a net advance of 14 to 17 points. Bulls were in fairly good control of the market for the start, the low prices being made on Monday, and, at the lowest, only a slight net decline was allowed, the trading months standing unchanged to 4 points down, compared with the final prices of last week. The high prices were made on Tuesday when the trading months were 23 to 32 points over last week's close. The range of prices was 23 to 36 points.

The main bullish influences of the week were the operations in the July position and the cold weather in the cotton belt. Reports of too much rain in a few sections of the cotton belt in the week also helped the long side. While few people claimed that any great immediate damage had been done the growing crop by the slight temperature, it was almost unanimously conceded that the growth of the plant was not rapid enough. The bull side argued, served to make the crop even later than it became because of the setback around planting time. Toward the end of the week weather conditions were more favorable but they brought forth no great amount of fresh short selling. Bears were very hesitant of their inability to get a good line on the July campaign.

The work of the bulls in the summer months caused a considerable improvement in the spot demand, and, while offerings of actual cotton were not large enough to satisfy the demand that was done, there was more activity than usual in spot circles which made the cause of the bulls more in favor in some quarters. The small stocks of United States ports excited no little comment and caused uneasiness among shorts.

Rumors were that stocks would still further shrink as the result of pending foreign shipments. The only consolation to the bears was the gossip and rumors of the week was the report that owners of actual cotton in the south were selling July in New Orleans and New York against prospective large shipments to those markets. In the spot department prices gained 1-4 on Tuesday, middling closing at 12 7-16 against 12 3-16 last week and 12 1-4 this week last year. Sales on the spot amounted to 1,873 bales against 1,200 last week and 1,615, this week last year. Sales to arrive were 1,639 bales against 1,000 last week.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, June 14.—Cotton futures opened steady at 5 points decline, compared with the close of yesterday. Cables were below the trade and there was little or no disposition to buy, but the market was lost because of more favorable weather map and other crop accounts. While temperatures continued moderately low, there was no rain in the belt, and private reports indicated that fast growing weather was made with it in the fields.

Reports of clean and well cultivated fields excited much bearish comment. Around the Wheat Prices Took Violent Upward Swing on Forecast of Hot Weather

Throughout the Northwest the Crops Needed Rain, and There Were Reports That Permanent Damage Had Already Been Done

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, June 14.—Wheat prices took a violent upward swing today, impelled by an official forecast of protracted dry, hot weather. Throughout the northwest crops needed rain, and there were reports that permanent damage from drought had already been done. The market closed firm, at an advance of 7-8 to 1 3-8c net. Corn finished 1 5-8 and 1 3-4c to 1 7-8c up; oats with a gain of 1 1-8 and 1 1-4c to 1 1-2c, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 2-2c.

Except for a momentary dip at the outset when the market was affected by some overnight showers in the Dakotas, and Canada, wheat showed remarkable strength all day. Clear skies, and sweltering temperatures made short work of the unwelcome announcement that an indefinite period of such conditions could be looked for, a lively scare developed.

Bears refused to be acting for bull leaders were conspicuous bidders for September wheat. The special incentive for this purchasing was said to be an opinion from a well known expert, that without general soaking rains within a week, the losses in the spring wheat belt, would reach a heavy total.

Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equalled 270,000 bushels. Primary receipts of wheat were 656,000 bushels; a year ago 295,000 bushels.

Pessimistic field advices from Illinois and other important states excited the shorts in corn. Offerings were extremely small. Besides, reivers predicted a falling off in receipts next week.

Oats crossed the forty cent line, and closed at the highest level of the season. The causes were unwelcome heat and absence of moisture.

Provisions sagged with the hog market, and on account of an expected bearish statement Monday in regard to packing house stocks. Trade was much more active than usual on Saturday.

JUNE WHEAT HARVEST 575,000,000 BUSHELS

Late Ripening This Season Will Contribute 50,000,000 Bu. in Southwest U. S.

Wall Street Journal says:

June is one of the big months in the world's gathering of its bread crops. In the United States alone the harvest of winter wheat probably not include more than 50,000,000 bushels. In the present month, but there have been more forward seasons when the cut 100,000,000 bushels in June. The biggest end of the reaping of winter wheat is in other countries. Southern Europe, including Italy, Spain, Portugal, Greece, Turkey and the southern portion of Russia. Together they gather a yield of 555,000,000 bushels, making with that gathered in the United States 575,000,000 bushels of wheat as the contribution for the period of not more than 25 working days.

The fine of reapers which has been working its way northward during the past five months began its operations in January in New Zealand and Chili and Australia. The bulk of the Australian harvest about 30,000,000 bushels in that month. In February the reapers of the southern hemisphere up into the great peninsular of Asia, where British India yields as a rule not less than 350,000,000 bushels, with probably more than 20,000,000 bushels from Upper Egypt. The reapers are now north of the Equator, and in May arrives they reach North Africa, pass through Cyprus, Syria and Asia Minor in Central Asia and by the end of the month have covered Asia Minor, and entered Europe. The line of reapers across to the western continent in Cuba and Mexico. May is the month for China, Japan and Central India, and the harvest of Texas, Oklahoma and also the harvesting line strikes Texas, and the beginning of the new winter wheat crop supply is in June.

About half the wheat harvested during the first six months of the year is cut in five months ending with May. The other half is the product of the remaining seven months. The approximately 1,125,000,000 bushels. A large portion of this wheat especially finds some competition with Argentine and Australian yields of approximately 250,000,000 bushels. The first large crop affecting wheat at prices at home is the India crop, which usually begins to arrive in June and July. The contribution to the world's breadstuffs is now averaging about 225,000,000 bushels a day, not including corn or barley, but the maximum will be reached in July, when wheat from Europe and the United States will pour in their heaviest yields. The world's crop aggregates 3,500,000,000 bushels.

AUSTIN AND RAIT GRAIN LETTER.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Wheat—The spring wheat crop news now entering the field when damage reports are to be looked for. The first ripple has come from North Dakota and Canada where moisture is insufficient. Further advices of this character are to be looked for, and with the absence of rain, prices will advise against becoming too bearish. However, the winter wheat harvest is progressing and offerings of new stuff will be placed upon the market. Moreover, the domestic crop outlook is quite satisfactory, with export demand practically all. A fair trading market will rule, pending developments concerning the outcome of spring wheat crops. The government report was about as expected.

Corn and oats—Almost phenomenal strength has been shown by corn, and a liquidating wave arrayed on the bull side, and we do not feel like anticipating them as yet, though the short interest has been materially cut down. We have intimations of unsatisfactory crop prospects in scattered localities, and also have seen that large receipts and a good start on the crop would not depress prices. Our values should follow corn to some extent. However, if the government report places the crop at 1,000,000,000 bushels or in exaggeration of the promise, prices are not very encouraging for the bulls.

Provisions—Prominent packers are still supporting the market and the longs have profitably liquidated. Hog receipts increase occasionally, but the stuff is all wanted, and we should look for the long side whenever spasmodic weakness occurs. Some slackening has taken place in the demand for lard, but prices are still heavy at any point. M. F. Austin.

HERE'S THE WHOLE PLAN
Boiled Down for Easy Understanding

THE JOURNAL is putting on the most interesting campaign in its history. It is A BOOKLOVERS' CAMPAIGN and it is open to every resident of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Every day, beginning Sunday, April 6th, THE JOURNAL will print a picture and a coupon.

The picture will represent the name of a book. The coupon will contain blank spaces for the name of the book, the name of the author, and the name and address of the contestant.

There will be SEVENTY-FIVE of these pictures and coupons. One will appear every day, including Sundays, for seventy-five consecutive days.

The contestant has only this to do:

Be sure to secure the complete set of pictures and coupons. Cut them from THE JOURNAL as they appear from day to day and save them until all the Seventy-five have appeared. No answers are to be sent in until the last coupon has appeared.

Fill in the blank spaces on the coupon with the name and author of the book you believe the picture to represent. Keep them all until the campaign has closed. Then send them in as directed.

This is a campaign that will give pleasure to every member of the family. You don't have to be the possessor of a college education to be successful in fitting the names of the pictures and books together. You simply have to study the pictures, use your wits, select the answer you think most appropriate, and keep at it until you have named all the seventy-five. It will really be lots of fun. Get suggestions from your friends. Get into the spirit of the game and you'll be amazed at the good time you will have.

And then think of the PRIZES! See the list on this page. It's a great list.

Remember: This is a FREE CAMPAIGN. You don't have to enroll your name. You don't have to subscribe. You don't have to solicit subscriptions. You don't have to advertise. There are no strings whatever tied to the prizes. It is a campaign of perfect fairness and openness and it's going to be a great big thing.

LOOK AT THE PRIZES. READ THE RULES. GET BUSY.

The Pictures for This Booklovers' Campaign Are Made in This Way

Three members of The Journal's staff, one of whom is the Booklovers' Campaign Editor, are charged with the responsible duty of selecting the titles to be represented.

None of the three men knows what titles the others have selected. Each knows only his own titles. Only the General Manager knows all of them, for he must review the titles and the pictures, see that there is no duplication of the titles selected, and make sure that the pictures clearly and plainly and fairly represent the titles.

Now the descriptions of the pictures to be drawn to represent the titles are turned over to The Journal's Art Department. Each description is numbered to correspond with the number of the title filed away with the General Manager.

For example: The artist is told to draw a picture of a crowded street at noonday at Five Points. An officer is directing the streams of people and vehicles.

The title is not given the artist. Just a word description of the man's idea of what the picture should be to represent the book he has in mind.

The description above applies to the book entitled "Traffic," by E. Temple Thurston.

The artist does not know what title he is representing in his drawing. He draws to order, according to the written instructions given him. The picture is then passed upon by the man who selected the title to be represented. If the picture does not quite fit the title, or if it is faulty in any way, it is changed until it fits the title perfectly.

So that's the way the pictures are drawn. Remember that the correct title is not selected to fit the picture. The picture, in every case, is drawn to fit the title.

A LOVELY YOUNG ATLANTIAN

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

INVITATIONS for the marriage of Miss Charles Owens and Mr. Edward B. Hall have been recalled, the ceremony to take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Owens, Monday evening, and will be witnessed by only the members of the family and most intimate friends.

The only attendants will be Miss Marion Goldsmith, maid of honor; Mr. Joseph Winterbotham, of Chicago, best man, and the young brothers of the bride, John and Donovan Owens, and her cousins, Theodore Owens and Harriet Shewmake, who will be ribbon bearers.

The date of the wedding is the same as that of the bride's parents, and but for the fact of Miss Owens' indisposition would have been one of the most brilliant of June.

Since her debut the pretty bride-elect has been one of the most popular young women of society, and whether riding a thoroughbred horse to blue ribbons in the annual horse shows or leading cotillions has been a charming figure in Atlanta's gay world. Mr. Hall is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Hall, of Morristown, and a cousin and kinsman of Mr. William C. Hall, of Atlanta.

* * * *

THE announcement in today's paper of the approaching marriage of Miss Eloise Oliver and Mr. Frampton Ellis is of pleasurable interest to a wide circle of friends throughout Georgia. The pretty bride-elect is the only daughter of Mrs. John Oliver and is a cultured and charming young woman, her school days being followed by a stay of some length abroad after which she made her debut two winters ago.

Personally she is very picturesque and attractive, a slender girl with a wealth of sunny brown hair and brown eyes.

Mr. Ellis is a son of Judge and Mrs. William D. Ellis and one of the most popular representatives of a family prominent throughout the state.

* * * *

THE movement of Georgia women to save the beautiful plumage birds of the state is receiving support and commendation from many sources, expected and unexpected. Doubtless many women will give generously of their support for the same reason assigned by one woman.

"I have always wanted" she said, "egret and osprey feathers on my hats. They are beautiful, but I have always found them too expensive. If I cannot have them, I will help to make it impossible for others to wear them, who arouse in me the un-Christian fault of envy," she concluded, laughingly.

As a matter of fact, her interest in the work goes far deeper, but she phrased a humorous reason for the amusement of her listeners.

Mrs. J. M. High, owner of one of the city's largest department stores, has given her support to the movement, and many other women, for varying reasons, are lending their aid to the movement.

The clause in the new tariff law prohibiting the importation of egrets, ospreys and other feathers, the use of which necessitates the sacrifice of the birds, has passed the house of representatives and is now before the senate.

An amendment to the clause has been offered in which Senator Clapp, of Minnesota, seeks to exclude from the prohibition the feathers of game birds killed for food purposes or of those which are killed as pests.

The passage of such an amendment would mean the extermination of many beautiful wild birds, and the women of Georgia are urging that all women who are interested shall actively lend their support to the movement to prevent the passage of the amendment.

Miss Nina Hornaday has sent out letters to many women asking that they write urgent letters to Senator Smith, requesting his support and his vote against the amendment.

The Ideal in this Store is "Service"

In working out organization problems, efficiency engineers first state the IDEAL in one word, and then bend all their energies toward achieving that IDEAL.

The Ideal in this store is SERVICE. Daily we strive to reach it. From the department managers to the humblest worker in our ranks, the IDEAL is to SERVE.

We are succeeding pretty well, thank you, but we haven't reached the ideal. Do you know a way in which we could better the Store Service?

Now, Then!--69c & 75c Laces & Embroideries at 25c

As the season wanes lace importers "get out from under" their purchases. They must dispose of their surpluses. Knowing Rich's capacity, many of the importers turn to us. We are not greedy for laces— we have plenty of our own. But three yards for the usual price of one—ah, that's a bargain we just had to have. You surely wish to share. See what's here for tomorrow:

25c for 75c Swiss flouncings, 27 inches wide, and 3 to 5 inch galloons to match. Bewitchingly embroidered in eyelet, blind and shadow patterns.

25c for 69c allover shadow laces in cream and white, 20 in. Since shadow laces have such a tremendous vogue, it might be well to come early.

Jumble, according to Webster, means a confused mass. This jewelry is such a mass. There are hundred of pieces of this, hundreds of that—odds and ends as plentiful as the sands of the sea. The jewelry is of value; the designs are "good;" but we just can't have such a mass cluttering up stock.
Therefore, we have grouped the various La Vallieres, rings, brooches, bar and beauty pins, cuff links, necklaces, chains, etc., into three lots. Great values in each lot—just a delightful rummage, with every purchase a prize.

25c; values 50c to $2.
50c; values 98c to $3.
$1; values $2 to $7.

EATONTON

EATONTON.—A pleasant little surprise for an Eatonton visitor, delightful in its informality and jolly good fellowship, was that at the home of H. C. Walker, on Jefferson street, Thursday evening, for Mrs. Mattie Joe Marshall, a former resident, who has been the guest of friends here for several weeks. One table of women was enjoyed, with sandwiches and Roosevelt punch served in the White House after the games, which fully attested Eatonton mint beds in every way equal if not superior to those of the executive mansion at Washington. Not until a late hour were good-byes said, with many happy recollections of the evening for those who dropped in to enjoy the games at a home always noted for its unbounded hospitality.

Friday afternoon at the home of Col. and Mrs. Meriwether F. Adams, on Maple street, a happy party of young folks, joined with Master Robert Alexander Irvine in celebrating his fourteenth birthday. Games and other pastimes added to the evening's pleasure with "lots of fun" as the verdict of every one present. A color motif of pink and white was carried out in the refreshments of cake and cream served during the evening. Good-byes were said with many good wishes for many happy returns of the day, and that every one might be just as bright and happy as the host's fourteenth birthday. Mrs. M. A. Adams, Mrs. B. N. Alstrom and Mrs. F. M. Denham assisted in the entertainment of the guests.

Mrs. L. C. Elkins and Master Carle Tallaferro Elkins, of St. Augustine, Fla., are week-end guests of Dr. and Mrs. V. H. Tallaferro.

Watch Your Baby These Summer Days

Little Stomachs Get Out of Order Easily in Hot Weather

During the hot months mothers should look very carefully to the condition of the bowels of babies and young children, and, for that matter, it is very important in the lives of people at all ages. Care should be taken that the water is pure, the milk wholesome and the fruit ripe (though not over-ripe), and that not too much of anything is eaten.

When trouble results it is usually in the form of constipation or of diarrhoea. If the child loses appetite, is fretful or languid, and complains of headache, you may look for constipation. Give it a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring, and by morning this pleasant laxative will have acted and the child will be its normal self again.

At the first sign of a summer cold also give Syrup Pepsin, as the cleaning out of the bowels will usually be sufficient to break the cold. Summer diarrhoea can be stopped in the same way by ridding the bowels of the poisons and germs that cause the trouble. This is the opinion of the value of Syrup Pepsin is shared by thousands of people like Mrs. Ella Denzel, 124 Nichols Ave., Stratford, Conn., who uses it successfully herself and gives it to her two little boys; and Mrs. C. C. Allen, of New Monterey, Cal., who finds it in every particular just what she and her family need.

Avoid giving children cathartics, purgatives, pills or powders, as they are too harsh. Confine yourself to a gentle laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You can obtain it of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter being the family size.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

As to weather the week has given us everything all four seasons, beginning with summer and back again, numbers of affairs planned for out of doors were changed to indoor events, parties for brides-elect and parties for recent brides making the week bright with interesting affairs.

Mrs. Charles Hopkins, Jr., who, as Miss Helen Payne, was one of the loveliest figures of the unmarried set, has been the honor guest at a series of luncheons and dinners since her return from her honeymoon in Virginia.

During the week Miss Sarah Rawson, Miss Passie May Ottley and Mrs. Roy Collier entertained for the attractive young bride; that at which Miss Rawson was hostess, being also given for Mrs. Charles Shelton, another lovely bride whose wedding was preceded and followed by delightful entertaining.

Each pretty luncheon was characterized by a color scheme of pink, Mrs. Hopkins in the daintiest of trousseau frocks being a charming part of the picture.

THE tea hour at the Piedmont club, which is brightened by music, sees the gathering of numbers of gay little parties every afternoon who enjoy informal dancing after in the ball room after tea on the terrace the ball room porch and loggia.

"These Dansants" have been the vogue in Paris and New York during the winter and the orchestra at the club has induced most of the members to follow the example of the metropolitans and become one of the "everybody's" who are doing it.

The two dancing classes whose meetings have been weekly events during the spring season were the honor guests at a "the dansant" at which Mrs. Frank Callaway and Mrs. Don Pardee entertained Wednesday afternoon at the club, tea being served in the dining room from a table bright with poppies, Mrs. John Marshall Slaton and Mrs. Robert Maddox pouring tea.

The smartest of afternoon frocks are worn, the club terrace looking like a flower garden with the gay colored gowns and vivid tones which lead in the season's fashions.

THE departure Friday of Miss Marjorie Dixon for Washington, was a matter of pleasurable interest to the friends who will miss her from the social events. Miss Brown to be the guest of the Misses Wilson at the White House during this week.

The pretty young Atlantian is the only daughter of Mr. Edward T. Brown, at one time a law partner of President Wilson, and Mrs. Brown, and is one of the loveliest members of the young set. Her debut winter before last being made with Miss Passie May Ottley at an afternoon and evening party which were the most brilliant events of that season. Miss Brown has not only beauty but shares the charm which has made her mother one of the most popular women of the city, their home being the center of a delightful social and artistic life.

* * *

A RECENT event of interest in Atlanta was the marriage of Miss Hope Cunningham Peters to Mr. C. S. Ashby Henry, which took place at "Pelton Place," the summer home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Peters.

The bride is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Peters and a niece of Mr. Edward Peters, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black and Mrs. H. M. Atkinson, and has visited here on a number of occasions, her older sisters, Miss Edith Peters and Mrs. Smedley Butler, having spent much of their young ladyhood as the guests of their grandmother.

Miss Peters was her sister's maid of honor and among the maids was Miss Dorothy Peters, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Peters, of Garden City, L. I. Mr. Henry is the son of Major and Mrs. Robert Randolph Henry, of Tazewell, Va.

* * *

AMONG the Atlanta weddings of the week of particular interest was that of Miss Minnie Van Epps to Mr. Robert Graham Hanson, Jr., of Bristol, Tenn. Popular socially and a very charming representative of two families prominent in Georgia for several generations, the pretty bride for the past few years has given up her time as a volunteer worker for the Associated Charities. She has endeared herself to the poor of the city, who have found in her, not only a "friendly visitor," but a visiting friend.

That her marriage will take her to Tennessee is a matter of sincere regret to her Atlanta friends.

* * *

AN interesting event of Saturday was the celebration of Flag day by the Daughters of the American Revolution, patriotic exercises being held at "Craigie House," the home of the Atlanta chapter, and by the Joseph Habersham Chapter at "Woodbine," the residence of Mrs. William Lawson Peel, while the Piedmont chapter held their celebration at Palmetto.

Flag day stands for the national celebration of the first use of the flag, the first official recognition of the day having been made by the governor of New York on June 14, 1897, when an ordinance was passed requiring a flag to be flown every public building, the day having been chosen because 114 years previously the stars and stripes were formally adopted by congress.

The origin of the flag is shrouded in mystery, no authentic record having been preserved of the person who designed it, Tradition, however, accredits Betsey Ross with the design of the flag, and her home is pointed out to tourists in Philadelphia.

The red in the flag is supposed to stand for bravery, the white as an emblem of purity, while the blue represents fidelity.

The fact that the book plate which originally belonged to George Washington was formed of stars and stripes is interesting in this connection, while having no especial connection with the subject.

THE wedding of Miss Frances Bostick Dixon and Mr. Benjamin M. Jones, of Wilmington, N. C., was a beautiful event of Wednesday evening, taking place at 8.30, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary D. Dixon.

The young bride made a lovely picture in her wedding gown of lustrous white charmeuse satin, rare lace was introduced upon the corsage and was set in panels in the skirt. The veil was caught to the hair with a spray of lilies of the valley, and fell in graceful folds to the edge of the long court train, and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses, showered with lilies of the valley.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Ruth Dixon, who wore a gown of rose colored charmeuse.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for an extended wedding trip after spending some time in New York will be at home after the first of July in Wilmington, N. C.

AN ATLANTA HOSTESS AND HER GROUP OF VISITORS

How to Make and Serve Summer Drinks

By Anne Rittenhouse

THERE is almost as mucht in the serving as there is in the making of refreshing summer drinks. Not quite so much, however, for a really good fruit punch is refreshing even if it is served in a chipped and cracked crockery cup. But, on the other hand, a drink of only mediocre quality seems delicious if it is nicely served in graceful glasses, and is drunk to the tuneful sound of tinkling ice.

Whatever else the summer fruit drink may be, and however it be served, it must be cold. It should be made long enough before it is needed so that it can stand bottled on ice for a couple of hours, or else it should be generously supplied with shaved ice. The ice should really be shaved or else broken very small. A small ice shave is a big convenience for the maker of iced drinks. One with a knife that can be so adjusted as to cut fine or moderately coarse ice is the best kind to buy.

Even without an ice shave ice can be broken into fine pieces without much trouble. One way to do this is to wash the ice and then wrap it in a piece of clean, new unbleached cotton kept for the purpose. Wrap the cotton in a piece of burlap or newspaper and pound the ice with a hammer. It can also be chipped fine with an ice pick, but this method of breaking it is tedious.

The wicker trays for iced drinks are tempting. One, stained green with handles crossing at almost right angles over it, and with compartments for eight or ten glasses and two pitchers, costs $11. In lighter weight these baskets are less expensive.

A mixed fruit punch can always be made, as different combinations of fruit can be used. One recipe calls for a grated pineapple, added to three cupfuls of water and serve very cold with ice, which have been boiled together for fifteen minutes. Add a cupful of fresh, strong tea and strain and cool. Then add the juice of five lemons and half a dozen oranges, half a pint of maraschino cherries and six quarts of ice water. At the last minute, just before serving, add a bottle of apollinaris and some chopped ice. This punch can be made with other fruits, and imported ginger ale can be substituted for the apollinaris water. Fresh mint leaves added in place of the marischino cherries vary the flavor.

Fruit cup is made in this way: Slice a dozen lemons which have been thoroughly scribbed and add half a pound of sugar to them. Mix a quart of strawberries with the same amount of sugar and mix a grated pineapple with half a pound more of sugar. Let all three mixtures stand for twelve hours, then squeeze them all through a strainer, getting out all the juice possible. Add two pounds of sugar and three quarts of water and servery very cold with ice.

STRAWBERRIES AND CURRANTS.

A delicious strawberry drink is made with a quart of cold syrup—made by boiling equal parts of sugar and water together for fifteen minutes—to which a pint of strawberry juice, the juice of three lemons and two quarts of water have been added. The whole should be strained. Sliced strawberries and chopped ice snould be added just before serving.

With currants and raspberries combined a tempting concoction can be made. Crush a quart of ripe, red currants and a cupful of red raspberries. Add the juice of a lemon and two quarts of water and stain. Then add a quart of syrup which has been chilled thoroughly on the ice. Put the beverage in bottles, cork them and stand them on ice for three hours.

LEMONADE WITH VARIATIONS.

With lemonade as a foundation many cooling drinks can be made. One recipe for delicious lemonade says to grate the rind of three lemons—previously carefully cleaned—over two cupfus of sugar. Squeeze the lemons and strain the juice over the sugar. Add a cupful of cold water, stir, cover and leave for fifteen minutes. Then stir it until the sugar is dissolved, strain it and put it in a two-quart pitcher. Fill it with ice water. Put a little shaved ice in each glass before pouring the lemonade.

A pint of lemonade, a pint of cold tea, a pint bottle of imported ginger ale and four tablespoonfuls of grape jelly melted and added make a tempting beverage. Pineapple in combination with lemonade is also good.

To make a pineapple lemonade boil two cupfuls of sugar and a pint of water for ten minutes, cool and add the juice of four lemons and a grated pineapple. Let the mixture stand in the refrigerator for two hours, add a quart of water—apollinaris or some other charged water makes the drink more sparkling—and serve at once.

Immediately after the contest refreshments were served.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

BY THE COUNTESS OF BLANKENBERG.

LONDON, June 14.—I stated several months ago that their majesties would not be able to devote the afternoon of the first Saturday in July to another visit to Henley, for the finals of the royal regatta. The king has now decided to hold a review of some of the territorial forces on Wimbledon Common on that day, and it may be regarded as very likely that the queen and the Princess Mary will accompany his majesty on that occasion. The coaching club will be holding their second meet for the season in Hyde Park on the same day, and will afterwards drive down to Ranelagh. On account of the Wimbledon engagement, there will be no party from Buckingham Palace in Hyde Park that morning.

* * *

There is good ground for expecting that Queen Mary, together with her daughter, will manifest their interest in four-in-hand driving by witnessing the procession of the coaching club along the serpentine on their way to Hurlingham. There is a whisper that the princess may be seen upon one of the coaches at a meet this season. This, however, is more likely to be arranged in connection with the Four-in-Hand Driving club, which is the senior fraternity, and has the advantage, from her royal highness' point of view, of holding its mets on Wednesdays instead of Saturdays.

* * *

On Monday, June 16, the king will hold a review of the Household cavalry in Windsor Great park, and there will be a large attendance of members of the royal family, who will be assembled at the castle in anticipation of the Ascot galeties. In the afternoon their majesties will proceed to Eton college.

* * *

The portrait of the king by M. Georges Scott, which was exhibited at the Paris salon in coronation year, has just been presented by Mr. T. J. Lennard, the sheriff of Bristol, to the British art gallery. It will be remembered that the portrait created widespread attention on both sides of the channel.

* * *

The good old Britannia has been refitted for use during the yatching season, and will certainly be used by the royal party during the Cowes week. The idea of the gossips, however, that the prince of Wales will figure as a competitor in some of the principal races in the Britannia rating is purely conjectural. The king has no intention whatever or making over this craft for the exclusive use of his royal highness. Indeed, since it was reconstructed, by the insertion of additional cabins, bath accommodation, and the like, it has been rendered less suitable for serious racing, and is better adapted for pleasure cruising. It has been declared for years past that his majesty meant to put a new Britannia into commission, with the idea of making a bid for some of the chief prizes of the yachting world. But the eagerness of the German emperor, and in a lesser degree of King Alfonso, for seafaring triumphs is not shared by King George. Of one thing you may be sure, and that is that his majesty has no desire to try his luck against the Meteor, or any other royal craft, in such contests.

The quidnuncs have been saying that the prince is shortly to have an honorary commission in the army without regimental attachment. The only ground for this assumption is that Queen Victoria adopted this course when her own first-born son reached his eighteenth year. Now, in the case of the present heir apparent the views of his august parents are very well understood in the court environment, and they are recognized as being thoroughly sound. In a general way the intention is that his royal highness shall not be pressed unduly into public life, and a good many things are being deferred until he attains his real majority, and enters upon man's estate. For this reason he is not likely to have any important commission in the army until the summer of next year, when he will enter upon his twenty-first year, and complete his university career. Even then he may not be given a captaincy in the guards, and do some actual work with his troop before joining a cavalry regiment for a similar purpose.

This being so, one may dismiss for the present the idea that he is to have an honorary colonelcy in a Prussian regiment, to Dovile the rank of a general officer in the army of the great white czar. It would naturally be impossible for him to receive such high rank in a foreign army, even in an honorary way, while continuing to enjoy only a junior commission at home. In the same way one may abandon as chimerical the notion, put about by some of the imaginative genery, that the German emperor would like to present Princess Mary with the uniform of a Prussian regiment. Such things are all very well for the Hohenzollern ladies, but since the late Queen Victoria used to turn up in the park, in the earlier years of her reign, in a sort of regimental dress, English princesses have never been partial to such spectacles. Certainly Queen Mary would never think of such a thing in her own case, and for such a daughter to do something which such a mother would not dream of doing is quite out of the question.

* * *

A delightful story is going round about the prince of Wales' pocket money. It is an understood thing that when undergraduates ask their friends to dinner and theater each person pays his own expenses. One day his royal highness was invited by a Magdalene man to join a party to dine and go to a play. "I should love to go," said the young prince, "but the fact is I haven't got 2 shillings." "Then, why don't you write home for some money?" asked his friend. "I've tried that," confessed the prince, "and been told what I've got has to do till the end of the term." It looks very much like a "terminological inexactitude."

* * *

Prince and Princess Alexis Dolgorouki will not be among the smart givers of entertainments in London this season, as they have let their beautiful place in Upper Grosvenor street to Mr. and Mrs. Scott-Robson. Their highnesses are still in deep mourning for Prince Alexis' brother, and have been receiving their health in the Riviera. The prince has now gone to Paris; but the princess is taking a leisurely motor tour through some of the beauty spots of France before joining him there.

AUGUSTA

AUGUSTA.—The marriage of Miss Jennie Crawford and Mr. J. H. Morrison, of Virginia, was celebrated Wednesday evening, at the Crawford home, on Hill. The lower floor was thrown open to the guests and beautifully adorned in Killarney roses. The matron of honor was Mrs. Clarence Sanders, Jr., and the bridesmaid was Miss Fidelle Renkl. Mr. James T. Richie, of Columbia, S. C., was groomsman, and the best man was Mr. Frank Ehrlich, of Columbia. The ceremony was performed by Father Lonegan. The bride's gown was a handsome creation of white satin, her flowers were lilies of the valley and bride's roses. After the ceremony a large reception was held later in the evening. The bride changed her wedding gown for a going away gown of lavender cloth with hat to correspond.

Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock the marriage of Miss Emily Kells Rowland and Mr. Harry Colt Morgan, of Americus, occurred at the Greene Street Presbyterian church, which was followed by an informal reception at the Rowland home. The bride wore a going away gown of tan cloth. After the reception the young couple left, for a visit to the groom's family in Americus. There were no attendants. The ushers were Mr. Newton Sayre, of Augusta, and Mr. Willard Flynn, of Savannah. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan will return to Augusta to make their home here.

The marriage of Mrs. Belle McDonald and Mr. Thomas Jefferson Collins was quietly celebrated Wednesday evening, at 8:30, at the parsonage of the Crawford Avenue Baptist church, Rev. Thomas Walker officiating.

Another marriage of the week was that of Miss Jimmie Jackson Verdery and Mr. Raymond Murphey, which occurred Tuesday evening, at 7:30 o'clock, at Grace Methodist church, in North Augusta, Rev. C. E. Poole officiating.

Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. Bernard H. Herndon, of Powelton, Ga., of their daughter, Mary Zena, and Mr. Simeon H. Morris, Jr., of Augusta, the marriage to occur on June 25, at the Baptist church, at Powelton, Ga.

Home Treatment for Sallow, Wrinkled Skin

A. C. F. asks: "What should I do for my sallow complexion, and how can I get rid of my wrinkles?"

Sallowness is best removed by removing the skin itself. This is effectually accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolized wax, which causes the offensive outer skin gradually to peel off, in fine particles scarcely noticeable to the naked eye. Within a week or so you will have an enviable complexion, the new skin exhibiting a healthful, youthful tint incomparable with artificial coloring. Get an ounce of this wax at your drug store, apply at night like cold cream, only don't rub it in. Wash it off in the morning with warm water. For your wrinkles try a solution of powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in a half pint witch hazel. Bathe your face in this every morning for awhile. The result will surprise you.—Beauty's Mirror.—(Advt.)

A programme of study and diversion has been arranged which will afford both recreation and improvement for those who attend. AUBURN, Ala.—A wedding of wide interest was solemnized in the historic Auburn Methodist church at twilight on the evening of Thursday, June 12, when Miss Elizabeth Lockhart Thach, daughter of Dr. Charles C. Thach, president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, was united in marriage to Mr. Nathaniel Cortlandt Curtis, of Tulane university.

The church was decorated for the occasion in the bridal tone of white and green, the chancel and the choir loft being draped with southern smilax. A profusion of palms and ferns were banked on either side of the organ, which was studded with magnolias.

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the four ushers, Messrs. C. C. Certain, of Birmingham; Charles Thach, Jr., Thomas Bragg and B. L. Shi, of Auburn, came down the aisles and took their places on either side of the chancel. The ushers were followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. William Mercer Cohen, of North Carolina, a classmate of the bride, and the maid of honor, Miss Otis David Thach. Next came the little flower girls, Miss Martha Power, of Montgomery; Miss Eileen Donahue and Miss Frances Mitcham, of Auburn. Immediately preceding the bride came the little ring bearer, Miss Sarah Hall Crenshaw, of Auburn.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, Dr. C. C. Thach, and was met at the altar by the groom with his brother, Mr. Howard Curtis.

The bride was gowned in white charmeuse, hand-embroidered and trimmed in real lace and seed pearls. The veil, caught in cup effect with orange blossoms, was of peculiar interest in that it has been used by seven of her college classmates, she being the eighth to wear it. The flowers were white bride roses, showered with lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor wore a gown of white crepe de chine and carried an arm cluster of pink peonies.

The maid of honor wore white brocaded satin draped in embroidered chiffon. Her flowers were also an arm cluster of pink peonies.

The brade is the eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles C. Thach.

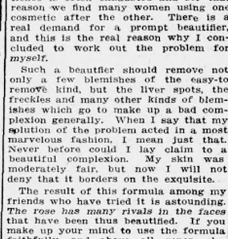
How to Make the Skin Clear and Pinky-White As a Rose

Valeska Suratt, the Self-Made Beauty-Actress Reveals Some of Her Precious Beauty Secrets.



By Valeska Suratt

THE trouble with nearly all cosmetics is the long time it requires to produce a result. Patience is often exhausted and for that reason we find many women using one cosmetic after the other. There is a real demand for a prompt beautifier, and this is the real reason why I concluded to work out the problem for myself.

Such a beautifier should remove not only a few blemishes of the easy-to remove kind, but the liver spots, the freckles and many other kinds of blemishes which go to make up a poor complexion generally. When I say that my solution of the problem acted in a most marvelous fashion, I mean just that. Never before could I say claim to a beautiful complexion. My skin was moderately fair, but now I will not deny that it borders on the brunette.

The result of this formula among my friends who have tried it is astounding. The rose has many rivals in the faces that have come under my notice since I make up your mind to use the formula faithfully, and above all generously, you will achieve the result you have so long sought.

Let half a pint of water come almost to a boil. Add two tablespoonfuls of the ordinary Keeps Dried Corn, after adding one ounce of zintone, until it is all dissolved. Then let it cool. If the cream is too thick to pour easily from a bottle, thin it down a little with more hot water. The cream will be white and satiny. Hold a wet, hot towel to the face several times for several minutes. Rub this cream on the entire face. Then wipe off with a soft, dry cloth. Then apply again and let it dry on the face. Repeat this again at night. Any good druggist will let you have zintone for about fifty cents.

• • •

ROSABELLA.—Such a pretty name should go with a youthful face. My wrinkle specialist says you look years younger, and it will not take very long to do it either. I call it my little miracle worker. Pour half a pint of hot water in a bowl and place the bowl in a pan of water over a slow fire. To this add two ounces of eptol. Stir until it is dissolved and starts to cream. Then remove from the fire, slowly add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine, and continue to stir until it is cold. Eptol may be obtained for no more than fifty cents at any good drug store. This cream should be applied very liberally and thoroughly rubbed into the skin until it has disappeared. The cream will not grow hair on the face. Keep the cream in an air-tight jar or bottle.

• • •

MISS N. S.—No matter how heavy or obstinate your superfluous hair, you can get rid of it almost by magic by using simple sulfo solution.

This you can get at the drug store for one dollar. Apply it with the finger tips to the superfluous hair, keeping the hair moist with it for two or three minutes until it has been dissolved. Then wipe it off with a damp cloth and wash the skin. It never reddens or irritates the skin.

• • •

MRS. F. T.—Yes, even mothers who have lost all their development as a result of nursing can surely regain it by using this formula for the bust:

In a half pint of cold water, dissolve two ounces ruetone and half a cup of sugar, all well mixed together. Of this take two teaspoonfuls three or four times a day in a wine-glass of water, after your meals. The ruetone will cost you one dollar at the drug store.

• • •

PRISCILLA.—This is the formula for blackheads which you asked for. It is splendid.

First wash the face with hot water and soap. Then sprinkle some neroxin on a dampened sponge made wet with hot water. Then rub well for a few minutes on the parts of the skin which are affected with blackheads. You should be able to get the neroxin at any druggist's for fifty cents.

• • •

LAURA, N.—You can surely get rid of every pimple and prevent them from returning.

Dissolve twelve ounces of granulated sugar in one-half pint of water, add one ounce of sarsene, and mix the whole together thoroughly, then add more water to make a pint. Sarsene is a liquid which you can get at the drug store by the ounce. Get it in the original package. Take one or two teaspoonfuls of this mixture three or four times a day, with a little water if desired.

• • •

MRS. T. D.—This formula will force your hair to grow wonderfully, fill in bald spots and stop it from falling.

Mix half a pint of alcohol with half a pint of water. To this add one ounce of bay-quinol. Shake thoroughly and then it will be ready to use. If you prefer, you can use imported bay rum instead of the water and alcohol. The beta-quinol you can get at almost any drug store for not more than fifty cents. This formula should be applied very freely to the scalp after brushing it generously for a few minutes all over. Rub the tonic thoroughly into the scalp with the finger tips.

• • •

Never fail to use this shampoo on your hair. Never use soap. Eggol, which you can get at any good druggist's for twenty-five cents, is surprising in its action in ridding the scalp of every particle of scurf and foreign matter.

Miller-Copeland

FORT VALLEY.—A beautiful wedding, and one challenging widespread interest throughout Georgia and Alabama, was that on June 11 of Miss Maude Miller, of Fort Valley, Ga., and Dr. Henry Moss Copeland, of Atlanta, at the Methodist Episcopal church of Fort Valley, and was perfect in every appointment. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion by loving hands. As it echoed the wedding party was announced by a double quartette of magnificent voices, singing Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus."

First to enter were eight young girls, bearing in their hands lighted tapers, and forming a beautifully effective background. Following were the four ushers, Messrs. J. C. Greenfield, W. F. Miller, Harris C. Neil and O. F. Jones, who encircled the altar.

The bridesmaids, Misses Bessie Smith, of Atlanta; Carol Dean, of Gainesville, Ga.; Telete Scott, of Canton, Ga., and Janie Culpepper, of Fort Valley, were gowned in white meteor crepe, with pointed tulle, carrying white sweet peas. The groomsmen were Dr. Richard R. Daly and Mr. F. L. Wilson, of Atlanta, and William Wright, of Fort Valley.

Mesdames W. F. Miller and H. C. Neil were matrons of honor, the former very beautiful in a dress of crepe de chine and duchess lace, while Mrs. Neil was stately in her wedding gown of charmeuse satin and duchess lace, both carrying white sweet peas. Just before the bride, came two dainty little flower girls, Marjorie Brown and Margaret McMillan, scattering rose petals.

The bride was a picture of loveliness, wearing a dress creation of crepe sylvia draped with princess and rose point lace, court train, carrying a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies. Veil of lace, arranged as a Dutch cap, caught with orange blossoms, made her a picture long to be remembered, as she leaned on the arm of her father, Mr. Frank Osborne Miller. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. Seth Copeland. During the ceremony, performed by Revs. T. G. Lang and J. E. Seals, the soft strains of "Angels Serenade" swept over the vast assembly with Miss Louise Meldgahl at the organ and Mr. Frank Fincher violinist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osborne Miller, and is much beloved and highly esteemed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, who know and appreciate her beautiful qualities, of mind and heart.

After the ceremony a large reception was given at the spacious home of the bride on Anderson avenue, where many friends gathered to offer congratulations. The wedding gifts, of rare beauty and great value, evidenced the popularity of the favored couple. The room in which the bridal party were seated at table, was decorated with Southern smilax and banked with palms and ferns, giving the effective alfresco appearance. The hand-painted place cards bore, not only the names of the wedding party, but also an appropriate toast. The bride's favors to her maids were dainty white ivory stick fans. Her going-away gown was golden brown charmeuse, with French coat of brocade to match, and hat of chic brown with paradise aigrette.

Dr. and Mrs. Copeland left on the midnight train for the mountains of North Carolina, for a month's stay, amid a shower of rice and good wishes. Dr. Copeland is a successful and prominent busines man of Atlanta, where he numbers his friends by the score. Mrs. Copeland as Miss Miller, has visited Atlanta quite frequently, and has many friends and acquaintances who will be pleased to know the Capital City will be her home.

Out of town guests at the Miller-Copeland wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Copeland and Mrs. Clarence eath Cowart, of Troy, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Greenfield, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lanier, Judge and Mrs. John R. Wilkinson, all of Atlanta; Mrs. Dave Massee, of Macon; Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Weir, Mr. and Mrs. Custis Nottingham and Messrs. Robert Sparks and W. A. Bonier, all of Macon.

VOL. XXXI. NO. 112. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 15, 1913. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

By Angus Perkerson

FROM Sing Sing to San Quentin, or wherever else you care to take a look inside of a prison, be sure of this one thing:

That in the rather quiet spot out from Milledgeville, where the state has built its prison farm, you will find the only convict in all the jails of the land who is a whimsical gentleman and a train-robber in one; a socialist, "like Abe Lincoln;" and a maker of a new ten commandments.

"Old Bill" Miner quotes Humboldt, and dreams of how the express from Paris to Constantinople might be robbed. He tells of seventy years at the business of a highwayman, and urges the amenities of life.

"Be a gentleman," says Bill, "and if you find you can't rob a coach with a clear conscience, then get a regular job."

Bill has stolen half a million dollars in his day. One night in September he slipped through the window of a boarding school, and set out to find adventure and other men's gold. He searched for both all up and down the new western country, in the Klondike, in the far north, in England, Ireland, Scotland, up to the very mouth of the Danube, in China, Australia, and even along the west coast of Africa.

"I was hunting for the home lode, as Humboldt says," remarked Bill. "Whether you're stopping a coach in Nevada or hoeing cotton in Milledgeville you're searching for that same vein of gold. Everyone's hoping, everyone's looking for it. And you can't tell when you'll stick your pick into the ground and dig it up."

BILL'S ANKLETS OF STEEL.

The anklets that limit Bill's steps as narrowly as a hobble skirt from Paris, clanked; and he added something from Darwin and a word from George Ade.

These anklets have a close connection with Bill's ten commandments. To have them off, he must give his word to think no more of escape; and how can Old Bill Miner do that!

The spirit that sent him searching the corners of the world and robbing for the pure adventure of the thing as well as for the money, may revive despite his seventy years.

The way out of prison in Canada, Australia, and who knows where else, was easy for Bill; and it may be easy again, the open road may call to him, Old Bill may see the means to escape.

"You know." He gave a tug at his thin, grey mustache. "You know, that Paris express is a gold mine." Like a boy of twelve dreaming over a story, Bill, in his seventieth year, looked away to the rim of the sky. "It carries from $75,000 to $100,000 every trip, and goes right through the place. I'd want it. Down there along the Mediterranean you have all the chance in the world. A little nerve, two men to count on, and I would be like having that much money in the bank."

Do you catch the idea? Bill's flesh may be weak, but his spirit feels that old thrill of adventure. Age is telling but the chance to escape yet may come. Who knows what will offer itself, what opportunity, what way to freedom—to the old life, the open road, adventures up and down the world.

"Say the word," assured the warden, "and the chains come off."

"Well," answered Bill, "I've got sorter used to them. Guess I'd better keep them on."

BILL'S FIRST COMMANDMENT.

It is the first of his ten commandments that keeps Bill in chains.

Never lie, is this opening injunction. If he had the chains off, he would be bound by his word, then the chance might come and the temptation be too great.

"You can rob a coach because you are a socialist," he explained. "I have. But you can't lie unless you've got an ugly streak in you. All the great people have been socialists. Even Jesus Christ was a Socialist (I say that in all respect). Abe Lincoln was, I was. I've took all I could from the strong, and given all I could to the weak.

Change the laws. That's Bill's second commandment.

As he says, he isn't a lawyer and he can't give any too many details. But his fixed belief is that the laws are wrong, and that they work evil.

"You see," he explained, "the first laws were enacted in the year 500. The people who made them invaded Rome, murdered half the people, put the other half in slavery, and then passed laws to prevent crime; seems to me they might have passed laws before they did their mischief."

Never say a bad thing about a man when you can say a good one. That's the third commandment.

"It makes you feel good," said Bill, "when you've done a good turn or said a good word. You're happy. A man's a fool to talk ill about another."

Give a fellow money when he needs it. That's the fourth.

"I never robbed for money," went on Old Bill. "Anything you do for money isn't worth doing. I've taken half a million from those who didn't need it and shouldn't have had it. But I haven't a cent now. It's gone to help other people."

EVERY MAN'S GOOD WILL.

Keep every man's good will. That's the fifth.

"To make people think well of you, you've got to do the right thing," says Bill. "You can't find anybody who'll say a bad word of me. Ask them in the prison here, ask them in the west. There isn't a man can say I've done a low trick. Robbing an express is just taking something from somebody who has more than he deserves."

Never take what belongs to another MAN. That's the sixth.

"And it needn't surprise you," said Bill. "I never robbed an individual. The only money I've taken has been what I've got from the corporations. I've waged a sort of war on them. That's all. And there's another thing. I never shot a man in my life."

Never fail to help a woman. That's the seventh.

The first thing a gentleman must be is a respecter of womanhood." Old Bill tapped his foot by way of emphasis, and set his anklets to rattling. "Show honor at all times to women—as though they were your sisters or your mother."

See something of the world. That's the eighth.

"The people of various states," he explains, "are different. The people of different countries all give you new ideas. You can see pictures in Paris and niggers in Africa, and learn from both of them."

Take time off for reading. That's the ninth.

"You can learn many things from people," says Bill, "but there are some ideas you must get from books."

And don't squeal. That's the tenth.

"If you start a job," concluded Bill, "and it turns out wrong, takes the consequences. Don't try to drag somebody else into it."

TWENTY-YEAR SENTENCE.

Bill is doing twenty years at the state farm at Milledgeville because of evidence given against him by two "green pals." The three set out to rob an express train at Gainesville, and the two assistants who were new at the business, were caught and turned state's evidence.

"I'd rather serve a lifetime in an Australian pen," said Old Bill, "than do that. But then they were new at the game, and I wouldn't be hard on them."

That is Bill's attitude. Never be hard on anyone but a corporation. If you take his word for it, not a single unkind act has smirched his whole life. And what a life it has been.

On a farm in Kentucky, a place of green meadows, Old Bill Miner first saw the light of day. But the name at his christening wasn't "Bill" and "Miner" is as much an alias. He says that neither the police nor any of his pals know his real name, and he intends that they never shall.

Well, the years passed without any incident to speak of, until that night in September when he eased from a school window, slipped across the school grounds, and stole the first part of that half a million dollars.

WEARING THE GRAY.

"It's a job I've never done time for," says Bill. "It started me. That's enough said about it. With the money in my trousers I started west, for the mining camps. In '61 I found myself in California with a hankering for home, and I set out east. But in '64 I was back in Kansas. I wasn't robbing coaches, though, or looking for a "home stake." I was riding dispatches for General Wright and wearing a gray uniform. I fought for the south in that guerrilla warfare we had in the west, and I fought the best I knew.

"Then the Indian wars came on and I took a hand in them. After that I went back to mining. Why, do you believe it, I was in Sacramento when C. P. Huntington laid the first railway line in that country. I went up into the Klondike hunting gold, I shipped to South America, I went to Africa. There isn't a mining camp in the world I haven't visited. But most of the gold I dug was from coaches and express trains.

"In Africa I started up the Nile, meaning to go all the way to the Red Sea. But I stopped short of that, turned about and headed for China.

"In Africa I toured, in Europe I did a few jobs to keep me in pocket money, and at Monte Carlo I was cleaned out. I dropped $5,000 there in one lump.

"Money looked scarce, and I set out for home. I stopped over in Canada, and got a life sentence for one hold-up. After four months, I broke jail, and started working south.

"In time I reached here and it looks as though here I'm to stay till the end of my days. At seventy, a twenty-year sentence is pretty long, isn't it. And, yet, I've never done a man an injury. I've robbed none but the corporations, and they had too much as it was.

"I've practiced Socialism, not robbery. I wish the governor could see that."

HOW MORSE CAME BACK

CHAS. W. MORSE.

CHARLES W. MORSE, who was released two years ago from the barracks at Fort McPherson, to prepare himself for death, has become president of the Hudson Navigation company, a power among the money kings, and apparently a man of health and vigor.

Others have failed to come back but Charles W. Morse is not among that number.

Five years ago he was convicted of violating the national banking laws and was sentenced to fifteen years in the Atlanta federal penitentiary. After two years of this sentence had been served, Morse began to fail.

In a petition to President Taft, the fact was set forth that Morse was incurably ill of Bright's disease and that his death was but a question of a brief time. The mere privilege of dying a free man was asked for him.

Morse was transferred from the federal penitentiary to Fort McPherson, in order that his physical condition might better be observed; and the foremost surgeons of the United States army were sent here to make an examination.

Their report to President Taft was that Morse, as the petition had described, was in an incurable state and seemed meant for but a short while more of life.

HIS REMAINING DAYS.

Various estimates were made of how long he would live. By some he was given a few months, by others as much as a year. But all medical authorities who examined Morse agreed in the opinion that he was the victim of an incurable disease from which he soon must die.

Being moved by this opinion of physicians who had examined Morse, President Taft pardoned the convicted banker, or did what was equivalent, he commuted Morse's sentence, and after serving two years of a term of fifteen years the man who had been known as the "ice king" was set at liberty.

Morse, accompanied by his wife, left Fort McPherson two years ago to return to New York to die. In order to gain strength for this trip, he remained a few days at the Piedmont hotel, then set forth upon his journey home.

When he left the hotel he walked to his cab, but he was assisted and seemed weak and tottering like an old man.

Upon his arrival in New York, he remained secluded in his home. He saw no one particularly reporters, and for a week or more Morse was a sort of Sphinx whom no New York paper could make speak. He also was one whom no New York newspaper man could see.

SAILS FOR EUROPE.

At the end of this retirement, into which he had taken himself to prepare for a trip to Europe, Morse went aboard ship and sailed away for the continent. After his departure news came back occasionally of his improvement, of how he was gradually overcoming the disease which was to have meant his speedy death, of how he not only was regaining his health but was planning to wreak vengeance upon his enemies in Wall street who had brought about his imprisonment.

One fine day Morse stepped from a gang plank in New York, his face ruddy, his step firm, the old Morse of the days before his conviction—the Charles W. Morse who had forced the financiers of the country to recognize him as a leader among them, as the "ice king," the "steamboat king" and as a kingly person in several other businesses.

The talk of how he would mete out quick punishment to those who had assisted in his conviction became more insistent, and the whole money market forgot its own affairs for a moment to turn its attention to Charles W. Morse and wait to see what he would do.

Two years before he had been a convict at the Atlanta federal penitentiary. When he gave a dollar bill to another prisoner he was placed in "solitary confinement," exactly after the manner of a counterfeiter or a forger who had been unwise enough to sin against the government.

MORSE COMES BACK.

But now, in only two years' time, he had exchanged the condition of a federal convict for that of a financial leader who could demand national attention.

Morse had come back, if ever a man had.

Instead of succumbing to the disease that was to have caused him a speedy death, he had recovered his health entirely. At least he seemed to be hale and hearty, and certainly he had enough of the old vigor left to make himself felt in the financial world, as he had when he was building himself a fortune and was winning recognition as a leader in several industries.

But his return to health is not the only part of his recovery. When he left Atlanta, it was said that his wife, who assisted him so bravely, so tirelessly, had found it necessary to sell her valuables, such as jewelry, to supply herself and her husband with necessities.

All that fortune which Morse accumulated before his conviction was said to have been spent. His case had been appealed to the highest courts, and every possible effort had been made to secure his release. These continued efforts were said to have cost him his whole fortune.

THOUGHT TO BE PENNILESS.

When President Taft commuted Morse's sentence, the banker was thought to be penniless, or almost so, as well as ipcurably ill. But whatever his condition then, Morse now has retrieved his old position of power and of fortune, and his health seems to be none the worse for his attack at the Atlanta federal penitentiary.

Either the physicians who examined him were mistaken in the seriousness of his condition.

Or Morse was capable of such recovery as they thought impossible.

Or his return to health now is misleading, and simply means that he has the vitality to prolong life a short while longer than the examining physicians had thought.

General opinion, however, is that Morse has "come back." Among the announcements printed in New York of Morse's election as president of the Hudson Navigation company, is the following, which seems to show the nature of public opinion:

WHAT NEW YORK THINKS.

"Charles W. Morse has 'come back.' In less than five years since he was convicted of a violation of the national banking laws and sentenced to serve fifteen years in the federal prison at Atlanta he has again become a power in the financial world. The definite news of his return to power was contained in an announcement made this morning that he had been elected president of the Hudson Navigation company.

"When Morse was released from Atlanta, after serving about two years of his term.

it was generally reported that he was broken in fortune as well as in health.

"The millions that were his before the panic of 1907 had melted into thousands, and not only his money but his prestige was gone. But when Morse returned to New York last year, apparently as strong as ever, and with all his old audacity of spirit unabated, the financial world began to talk again of the "ice king" and "steamboat king," and to predict that it would not be many months before he would again be a factor in the financial world. Rumor replaced the lost part of his old fortune with a new one and made him nearly as rich as before."

But Morse's ability to come back, in spite of the opinion of a medical board that his death was inevitable, in spite of the handicap of a fortune gone, and of his conviction in the United States court and his sentence to a federal penitentiary—in face of all these things, it is not so surprising that Morse has "come back."

HIS CONTINUED SUCCESS.

Frm first to last he has had the power to outface misfortune and to turn any situation to good account.

Owen Wilson, writing in "The World's Work" of Morse, whom he named as "The Admiral of the Atlantic Coast," said:

"Mr. Charles W. Morse belongs to that class of keen Americans who can swap anything with anybody and make a profit."

Morse, as he told, was a native of the Maine coast, and naturally took to ice and ships. His business career began when he was nothing but a boy. After finishing the public schools at Bath, he went to Bowdoin college. But just before he entered college he became a bookkeeper for his father at $1,500 a year. He paid another young man the $500 to do the bookkeeping, and with the $1,000 a year he paid his way through college and saved enough to set himself up in business. While he was yet in college, he formed a partnership with his cousin, Harry F. Morse, and they bought ice and sold it in New York. About this time he made a contract with a brewer to sell the wealthy man 50,000 pounds of ice. As reference, he suggested that the brewer telegraph to Morse's father in Bath. The answer was:

"We don't know where Charlie is or what he is doing, but will back him in anything he does."

FORTUNE EARNED AT COLLEGE.

It is said that Morse earned $500,000 while he was in college, and whether this is true or exaggerated, it is a fact that he was a rich man upon the day of his graduation, and that every penny of his wealth had been earned through his own shrewdness and enterprise.

Bit by bit, the partnership that Morse had formed in college began to branch out and to grow—month by month getting stronger, reaching into new fields. Finally, Morse entered into a consolidation which earned for him the title of the "Ice King."

The company which resulted from this consolidation raised the price of ice in 1900 from *30 to 60 cents, and immediately it became the ob*ject of attack by various newspapers. Public resentment against the company finally became so strong that it was reorganized. But it is said that Morse made $12,000,000 out of this transaction.

About this time, Morse had reached the limit of his power in the ice field, and he turned to the coast steamship lines. He already owned a fleet of 60 or 70 sailing vessels, and soon he consolidated four companies and became known as the "Steamship King."

Afterward he became interested in banking companies, in publishing companies, telephone companies, and his power and his enterprise brought him increasing success, until the charge of violating the national banking laws was brought against him by the government.

In spite of his position in the financial world, this charge was proved, and he was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment in the Atlanta federal penitentiary. But two years was all that he was to serve—with this much of his sentence completed, Morse returned to his former power and his former success.

SEARCHING FOR A HOME

BY W. WERNER

IN the question of the growing undesirability of the neighborhood as a place of residence the Tanners were quite agreed. When Mrs. Tanner at the dinner table informed Mr. Tanner that three more "furnished rooms" signs had been placed in windows in their block during the day and that positively it was getting to a point where she dreaded giving newly formed friends their locality, Mr. Tanner came back with the news that on his way from the elevated he had been unpleasantly impressed with the prominence of two recently placed "window refrigerators" in the block below them, and really could not blame her for feeling as she did.

Everything being perfectly amicable on that point, the danger point was then touched—the subject of moving, the one discordant note in the Tanner home. Although they were both anxious to get away from an environment which constantly jarred, their opinions differed sadly when it came to locality.

Tanner insisted upon quarters which would correspond with his pocket book, and upon one occasion had suggested a homely little suburb where rents were cheap, and where he might have a garden, but his suggestions had been instantly tabooed.

"No, Tom," Mrs. Tanner said, her mouth set in a determined line, "it's all very well for suburbanites to tell you about their wonderful lettuce beds, their radish beds, flower beds and the rest of it, but if you've never had time to fix simple window boxes here, how, under the sun, could you attend to an entire garden? Don't be foolish, Tom! Besides, I was raised in the city. I don't know any other life! Don't want to."

So the suburban idea was wafted into oblivion, together with Mrs. Tanner's dream of an apartment in a fashionable neighborhood near the university, where they had friends. Tanner put his foot down firmly on that scheme when he learned that the seven room apartment rented for $45 a month. "Out of the question, Beth, until I get a raise. Now, the only way out, little woman, as far as I can see, is to stay where we are for another year. Bradford has promised me an increase, then."

Mrs. Tanner's reply was a skeptical arching of straight eyebrows and a muttered commentary on pie crust promises. Then the subject was dropped. And the Tanners, being young people of peace-loving natures, it ceased to be a topic for everyday wrangling, though Mrs. Tanner ever had in mind the beautiful apartment in the beautiful neighborhood.

At last, on a never-to-be-forgotten visit to friends in the coveted locality, all in the twinkling of an eye, as it were, she found a way to have the $45 apartment.

Her eyes were brilliant, her color high with delightful anticipation, when Tanner came in to dinner. Immediately they were seated at the table the wonderful plan was unfolded.

"It will be the easiest thing in the world, Tom," she exclaimed when she had finished telling him of the "paying friends" the Browns had taken in order to maintain their charming apartment. "You remember I had a letter from Becky Moore last week asking me to find her a nice homelike place near the university? She is coming up, you know, to take a course in something or other. And then your cousin Sue. Just dying to get out of her present quarters (same as we are, she remarked in an aside) into some place where she can be one of the family. Could anything be better, Tom? It will be just fine to have the girls with us! Oh, no, dear, don't put it that way," as Tanner muttered his objection to roomers and outsiders; "just friends, dear! Then think of getting away from here and having a rent, figuring on what the girls will pay, no higher than we have in this miserble locity."

It was hard to withstand Mrs. Tanner's enthusiasm, particularly when Tanner considered that he was very fond of Sue and knew Becky to be an awfully good sort. Very shortly, therefore, he had forgotten his qualms about roomers and outsiders, and cheerfully accompanying his wife to the longed for apartment, fell under the glamor of of the pretentious marble entrance, the lovely large living room, with its beamed ceiling and splendid placement of lights, and on the spot made a deposit. Later Becky was written to and little Mrs. Tanner made absolutely happy.

After the moving the settling period in the new home was excitingly happy. Sue and Becky had come at once and were "perfectly lovely" in helping, a la Mrs. Tanner. "They are so dear," she informed Tanner, "and I feel so awfully at home with them I'm going to do what they've been begging me to; let them have their breakfasts and dinners with us."

Accordingly, when everything was beautifully in order, instead of two sitting down in the cozy, intimate way of the happily married, on either side of the table was a smiling young creature keeping up a ceaseless chatter. Becky was enraptured with her studies and talked on subjects with high sounding, unpronounceable titles which made Mrs. Tanner dizzy. She rattled along about stocks and bonds, and exacting managers, the Tanners doing well if they got a word in edgeways.

At first they were hugely amused. Then gradually—just when it first dawned upon her Mrs. Tanner could not say—all the old privacy seemed being swept away, and with its going she realized how infinitely precious it had been.

After a time—quite in the natural order of things, they tried to assure themselves—Sue and Becky began to have company. Of course the living room was given up to them. For a time the Tanners rather enjoyed the group around the piano singing snatches of all the popular songs. But before long it began to pall. Mrs. Tanner became painfully conscious that the gayety in the front room was getting on Tom's nerves. Furthermore, he missed his easy chair, he missed his reading lamp, he fidgeted under the inadequate light from the dome over the dining table. Finally he made no attempt to conceal from the eyes watching him anxiously the frowns of impatience which flitted across his face as the noise in the living room proved an irritating disturber to a quiet evening over a pipe and the late magazines.

Then, in the morning, if the exasperation of the night before had vanished and he assured his wife, penitently, that he knew he would "settle down soon and get used to it," immediately her unvarying reminder came in a flurried little way, "Tom, please hurry with your cold plunge, dear; you know Sue to have this morning—" His brows drew together in the fierce little scowl Mrs. Tanner had begun to dread, and so the day began unpropitiously.

Gradually lines of worry began to plow their way into Mrs. Tanner's pretty little face. She realized to the full that her idolized Tom was utterly miserable under the new conditions she had brought into their home life; that, indeed, they were both paying the price for her way to the beautiful flat in the beautiful neighborhood, which she began to wish she had never heard of.

Suddenly she told Tom so. It was on a day in spring, when the air was soft and sweet, and breathed of innumerable growing things. Sue and Becky were going out to dinner in a suburb. Tanner's face had clouded at the word suburb. Nevertheless he had looked at his wife eagerly when the announcement had been made, and whispered as they stood at the door alone, "Have dinner early, little woman, so our evening alone may be as long as possible."

All day she had gone about the flat with a song on her lips. It was a perfect joy to plan a menu for Tom alone. To make little dishes he liked, which had never made a hit with Sue or Becky. Then when Tom came in with a big bunch of tulips one of the boys had brought from his suburban home, and smiled at her from the head of the table with the old Tom smile, exclaiming in his happiness at absolute freedom from restraint, "Great Scott, Beth, this being alone is great!" adding instantly in his old thoughtful way for her, "But we won't talk about that, dear; we've got to enjoy this perfect time given us," she went around to him suddenly.

Standing behind him with her chin resting on his shoulder she said, softly: "Tom, we only have a six months' lease here, haven't we?"

Tanner looked up at her quickly. "Yes, Beth. Why?"

"Because—because—oh, Tom, dear, I'd rather go back to the pokey old neighborhood than live this way any longer!"

Quickly Tanner drew her down to him. "You don't mean that, Beth?"

"But I do, I do. Sue and Becky are dears; but I want you and our own little home, in the old way, once more, Tom."

As he held her close in complete understanding, her eyes traveled to the tulips. "And, Tom, my way has proven so disappointing, don't you think we should try yours? The suburbs must look lovely now, dear, at the budding season!"

Atlanta Women WIN SUCCESS IN BUSINESS

MISS LEILA WILBURN

MISS ADELAIDE MEAD

MRS. C. L. BOVARD

MISS HENRIETTA C. DOZIER - AND - HER HEAD DRAUGHTSMAN

BY WARD S. GREENE.

THE old bubble that the north is a better field of business for a woman than the south has been decidedly potted."

So speaks the woman architect of Atlanta. Another one backs her up, a woman photographer joins her voice in the assertion, a female real estate agent drives it into one ear and tries to sell you a lot through the other, a half a dozen doctors and dentists of the "weaker" sex agree with them.

They do not have to put it into words. It can be seen with half an eye. It is visible in the crowded anterooms of the women doctors, in the beautiful pictures in the photographer's windows, in the scores of blue prints overflowing the architect's table.

When a woman succeeds in a woman's work it is not surprising. When a man succeeds in a woman's work the world is not astonished. But the woman winning success in business which is properly a man's, is another matter.

It will not be long, however, before it will be impossible for women to gain distinction in a masculine project, for it is only a question of time when there will be no typically masculine projects. The women are making them their own.

SOUTHERN BUSINESS WOMEN.

In the north and east, even in the west, women have been breaking into business for the last quarter of a century. In the south, in Atlanta, a real business woman is still enough of a rarity to win the public gaze and incidentally the public patronage.

Business women who have tried their hand in Atlanta and have tired their hand in the north as well, will tell you that there is no place like the south. Their slogan is an adaptation of Horace Greely's "Young girls, come south"

There is Miss Henrietta Dozier, the woman architect who has had all the business she could handle for the last eleven years. She has had offices in the Peters building for eleven years, she has been in the south but eleven years, she has been successful eleven years.

Not that Miss Dozier is advising any girl to go to work.

"It is a hard life," she says, "and if I had a daughter I wouldn't want her to do architectural or any other kind of work."

Atlanta should feel proud of Miss Dozier. She is a graduate of the Girls' High school and has made her name one of the foremost in American architectural circles.

Nearly fifteen years ago Miss Dozier graduated from Boston Tech, a full-fledged architect. She had accomplished the dream of her girlhood, fulfilled the ambition which was born in her when she used to build houses of A B C blocks and which clung to her all through her High school days.

First, she tried architecture in Boston, and the result is the very reason she likes Atlanta better. South she came, was in Jacksonville for eighteen months, and then reached Atlanta, where she was in the office of Walter T. Downing for another eighteen months.

PIONEER FOR WOMEN.

Eleven years ago she went into business for herself. At the time there was not another woman practising architecture south of Mason and Dixon's line. Miss Dozier was the pioneer who blazed the way.

"It was left for me to open a pathway where other women shall reap success," said Miss Dozier.

Her own success has been far-reaching. Among the best work she has done is on the Nelson Hall school for girls, soon to be erected on Peachtree road; a shooting box for Mrs. Ernest Lorillard in Buford, S. C.; the Southern Ruralist building in Atlanta, an office building at Buchanan, W. Va.; churches in Jacksonville, Fitzgerald, Gainesville, Barnesville; and numerous residences, among them Mr. Blackmar's in Columbus, Ga., Bishop Nelson's and Arnold Broyles' in Atlanta, Dr. W. A. Turner's in Newnan.

Miss Dozier is still the only woman architect in Atlanta, with one exception.

The exception is Miss Leila Wilburn. She, too, has offices in the Peters building and is making a huge success of her work. Miss Wilburn is almost what one might call a self-made woman, for she never had the opportunity of studying her profession at a college. She is a former student of the Girls' High school, although she left the first grade to enter the office of a local contractor, where she picked up the rudiments of her trade.

Miss Wilburn has been engaged in business for herself for about five years. Some of her best work has been on the Roslyn and Shelverton apartments, three buildings at G. M. A., and a number of residences about Atlanta.

WOMAN IN REAL ESTATE.

On the door of another office in the Peters building is the very simple caption, "C. L. Bovard, Building, Real Estate, Loans." There is no hint of femininity about it and not until one enters the room is he aware that C. L. Bovard is no other than Mrs. Clara L. Bovard, perhaps the only woman in Georgia who is a member of the bar.

Miss Bovard is not a member of the Georgia bar, for in this state women are excluded from practicing law. Fifteen years ago she took the examination for the Florida bar and passed them up.

She never practised the profession there, but came to Atlanta soon afterward, becoming secretary to the late Peter Francisco Smith When Mr. Smith died, Mrs. Bovard continued the real estate operations which she had started when she first came to Atlanta.

That she is a shrewd business woman is proved by the fact that she has, in her time, built as many as thirty-five houses in Atlanta and later sold them, and that right now she owns three hundred acres of fine apple-orchard land in Rabun county.

"It wasn't easy to succeed," says Mrs. Bovard. "Conditions have changed since I first came to Atlanta. Fifteen years ago there was some prejudice shown against a woman who had the audacity to compete with men in their own business, but all that is different now, and a woman has just as good a chance as a man has to attain success in real estate or any other field of endeavor."

Women doctors and dentists in Atlanta entertain the same views that Mrs. Bovard does. There are a number here and there is not a physican of the opposite sex in the city who surpasses some of them in reputation and popularity.

"Medicine is the coming profession for women in the south," says one whose sucess in it has been swift and brilliant. "We, the pioneers of the calling in Atlanta, know it as does no one else. What blind opposition there once might have been against women doctors has long ago disappeared, and if anything they are more popular in the south, where they are fewer, than in the larger cities of the east. If there is anything that I could say to influence the woman of today to take up medicine, I would say it. They are needed as they have never been needed before, for the woman doctor fills a certain need in the medical world which no other can. An educated, capable woman will find in medicine an opportunity to succeed and to benfit others by her success which she will discover nowhere else."

WOMEN AS PHOTOGRAPHERS.

It is a peculiar fact that there is but one professional photographic firm in Atlanta conducted by women, for photography is a work which is peculiarly adapted to the female sex.

Miss Adelaide Mead and Miss Lotta Mead have ranked among Atlanta's leading photographers for fifteen years, and yet not once have they had any competition with another of their sex.

These two women love photography and are enthusiastic in naming it the ideal profession for a woman.

In their studio on Peachtree street they handle every bit of the work. No man enters there, except to have his picture taken.

"There is not a detail in photography," says Miss Lotta Mead, "which a woman can not handle. My sister and I have done all of our work ever since we came here from New York fifteen years ago. We really love it, and actually hate for holidays to come and keep us away from it. Why there are no more women photographers than there are, I fail to see. Many people come to us who say that they are glad to find a woman photographer. Children and other women very often seek our studio in preference to that of a man's. It is a saying that a woman has no patience, but that very quality has helped us time and again to take pictures of children which other photographers have failed to get."

The Mead sisters do not make photography a business, but an art. They once studied art in New York, and declare that it has helped them a great deal in photographic work.

A VISITOR FROM HOLLAND.

If these women's experiences are interesting, these American ladies, daughters of the south, is it not far more wonderful to near of what success has befallen a foreigner, one who came to Atlanta fresh from Holland and have built up a fortune double the one she already had?"

She is a dear old Dutch lady, is Miss Jacqueline Van Raden. Never were eyes so blue or hair so white as hers, and the smile that brightens her sweet face is like a glimpse of heaven. Her friends say that no words are too good for her.

Fourteen years ago Jacqueline Van Raden sailed from Holland, an independent woman with a fortune of 20,000 guilders. She intended to tour America, but one of her first stops was her last one. She liked Atlanta's people, she liked Atlanta's climate, and here Miss Van Raden and her 20,000 guilders agred to call a halt.

At first she started work as a bookkeeper, but later shrewdly invested in a storage and transfer company. When she sold out five years ago, she had enough money to establish the Eagle Multigraphing company. At the same time she acquired an interest in the Eagle Stamp works.

This Holland woman, who had never even signed her name to a check when she left the old country, entered into the work of multigraphing, a new and untried scheme with such strength and wisdom that she made it a complete success. She is now sole proprietor of the Multigraphing company and president of the stamp works corporation. Her fortune is a considerable one and her holdings of Atlanta real estate are numerous.

"Ah, this country," says Miss Jacqueline, her face shining with happiness. "It is the place for a woman. I like it because I have succeeded here, but any one can do it who will stick to her work and try hard enough."

NANCY FELL IN LOVE WITH THE "WAR LORD'S" DUKE

And Now the Kaiser May Chase Her Dad Out of Germany.

Emperor Bill, of Germany, is as mad as a crew of aroused hornets. Here's little Nancy Leishman gone and got one of Bill's real royal dukes to fall in love with her, and she's in love with him; and they're going to get married!

Which explains why Miss Nancy, daughter of John G. Leishman, United States ambassador to Germany, is in Paris with her mother, buying those intimate things of which mere men know nothing.

For Miss Nancy is to marry the duke of Croy, against whom the only serious indictment is that he is a royal person. The duke hails from Westphalia, where they put up fine hams. The Almanac de Gotha doesn't tell that the duke is in the packing business, although he is wealthy enough to be mistaken for one of the beef magnates.

Official Washington is having the jimmies because Ambassador Leishman "permitted" his daughter to become engaged to the duke (as if he could help it), for the kaiser threatens to ask for the recall of Papa Leishman unless he induces Miss Nancy to change her mind, which, if he was really so smart as he wants us to believe, the kaiser would know "can't be done!"

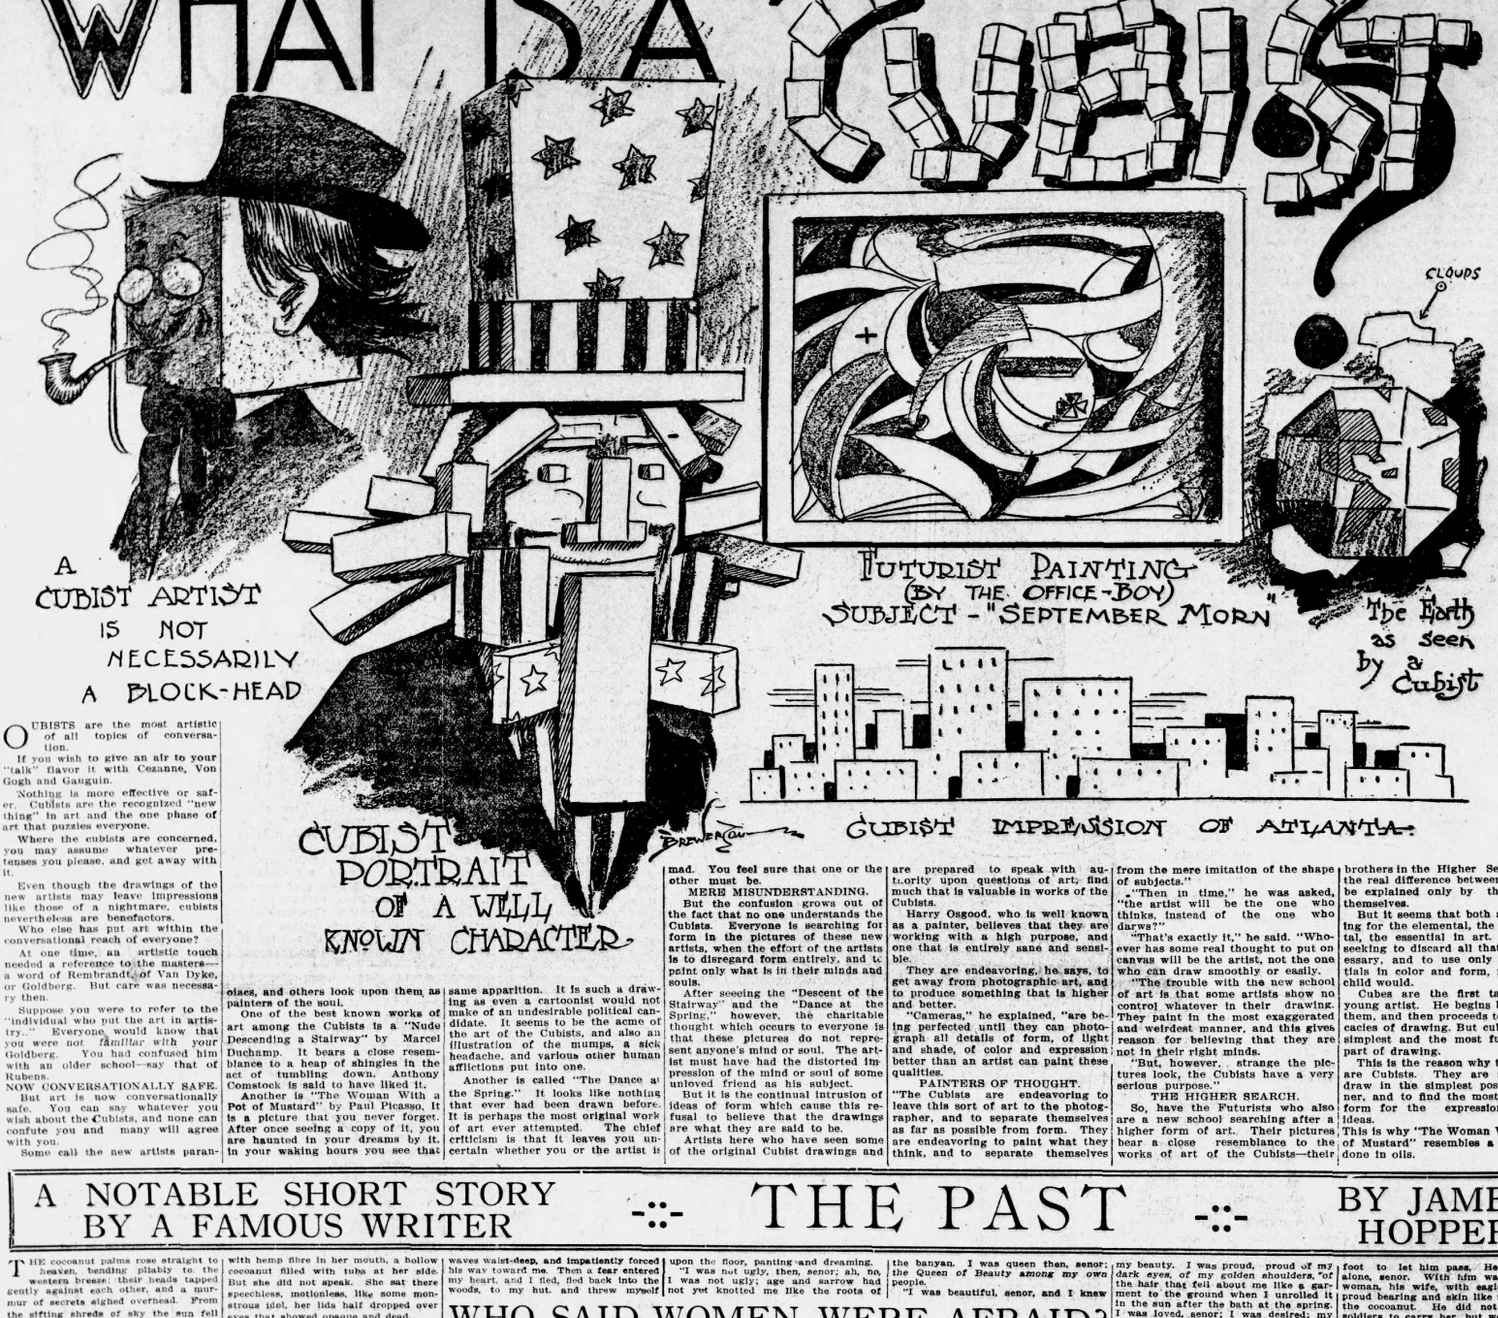
It sure ries Wilhelm that the courtship should have reached the public betrothal stage before they told him. He hasn't been so het up since the crown prince threatened to marry an American prima donna.

No one in this country believes for a moment that Ambassador Leishman will permit his daughter to make a morganatic marriage, so if the young people persist in their course, and indications are that they will, the duke of Croy will lose his royal privileges, such as his commission in the Garde Du Corps, the right to call the emperor by his first name and borrow a pipeful from him.

As a regular fellow, Charles-Rudolph-Engelbert-Phillippe-Leon, duke of Croy, should be relieved to shed himself of empirical snobbery and become the husband of a pretty American girl.

Miss Leishman isn't known in this country, having lived abroad since she was a child. The duke is twenty-four and, as has been said, is immensely wealthy and comes from the district where they make good hams.

WHAT IS A CUBIST?



CUBISTS are the most artistic of all topics of conversation.

If you wish to give an air to your "talk" flavor it with Cezanne, Von Gogh and Gauguin.

Nothing is more effective or safer. Cubists are the recognized "new thing" in art and the one phase of art that puzzles everyone.

Where the cubists are concerned, you may assume whatever pretenses you please, and get away with it.

Even though the drawings of the new artists may leave impressions like those of a nightmare, cubists nevertheless are benefactors.

Who else has put art within the conversational reach of everyone?

At one time, an artistic touch needed a reference to the masters—a word of Rembrandt, of Van Dyke, or Goldberg. But care was necessary then.

Suppose you were to refer to the "individual who put the art in artistry." Everyone would know that you were not familiar with your Goldberg. You had confused him with an older school—say that of Rubens.

NOW CONVERSATIONALLY SAFE.

But art is now conversationally safe. You can say whatever you wish about the Cubists, and none can confute you and many will agree with you.

Some call the new artists paranoiacs, and others look upon them as painters of the soul.

One of the best known works of art among the Cubists is a "Nude Descending a Stairway" by Marcel Duchamp. It bears a close resemblance to a heap of shingles in the act of tumbling down. Anthony Comstock is said to have liked it.

Another is "The Woman With a Pot of Mustard" by Paul Picasso. It is a picture that you never forget. After once seeing a copy of it, you are haunted in your dreams by it. In your waking hours you see that same apparition. It is such a drawing as even a cartoonist would not make of an undesirable political candidate. It seems to be the acme of the art of the Cubists, and also an illustration of the mumps, a sick headache, and various other human afflictions put into one.

Another is called "The Dance at the Spring." It looks like nothing that ever had been drawn before. It is perhaps the most original work of art ever attempted. The chief criticism is that it leaves you uncertain whether you or the artist is mad. You feel sure that one or the other must be.

MERE MISUNDERSTANDING.

But the confusion grows out of the fact that no one understands the Cubists. Everyone is searching for form in the pictures of these new artists, when the effort of the artists is to disregard form entirely, and to paint only what is in their minds and souls.

After seeing the "Descent of the Stairway" and the "Dance at the Spring," however, the charitable thought which occurs to everyone is that these pictures do not represent anyone's mind or soul. The artist must have had the distorted impression of the mind or soul of some unloved friend as his subject.

But it is the continual intrusion of ideas of form which cause this refusal to believe that the drawings are what they are said to be.

Artists here who have seen some of the original Cubist drawings and are prepared to speak with authority upon questions of art, find much that is valuable in works of the Cubists.

Harry Osgood, who is well known as a painter, believes that they are working with a high purpose, and one that is entirely sane and sensible.

They are endeavoring, he says, to get away from photographic art, and to produce something that is higher and better.

"Cameras," he explained, "are being perfected until they can photograph all details of form, of light and shade, of color and expression better than an artist can paint these qualities.

PAINTERS OF THOUGHT.

"The Cubists are endeavoring to leave this sort of art to the photographer, and to separate themselves as far as possible from form. They are endeavoring to paint what they think, and to separate themselves from the mere imitation of the shape of subjects."

"Then in time," he was asked, "the artist will be the one who thinks, instead of the one who darws?"

"That's exactly it," he said. "Whoever has some real thought to put on canvas will be the artist, not the one who can draw smoothly or easily.

"The trouble with the new school of art is that some artists show no control whatever in their drawing. They paint in the most exaggerated and weirdest manner, and this gives reason for believing that they are not in their right minds.

"But, however, strange the pictures look, the Cubists have a very serious purpose."

THE HIGHER SEARCH.

So, have the Futurists who also are a new school searching after a higher form of art. Their pictures bear a close resemblance to the works of art of the Cubists—their brothers in the Higher Search; and the real difference between them can be explained only by the schools themselves.

But it seems that both are searching for the elemental, the fundamental, the essential in art. They are seeking to discard all that is unnecessary, and to use only the essentials in color and form, much as a child would.

Cubes are the first task of the young artist. He begins by drawing them, and then proceeds to the intricacies of drawing. But cubes are the simplest and the most fundamental part of drawing.

This is the reason why the Cubists are Cubists. They are seeking to draw in the simplest possible manner, and to find the most elemental form for the expression of their ideas.

This is why "The Woman With a Pot of Mustard" resembles a nightmare done in oils.

A NOTABLE SHORT STORY BY A FAMOUS WRITER

THE PAST

BY JAMES HOPPER

THE cocoanut palms rose straight to heaven, bending pliably to the western breeze; their heads tapped gently against each other, and a murmur of secrets sighed overhead. From the sifting shreds of sky the sun fell upon the sands in heavy gold spots. To the east, through the lithe, silver trunks, the vivid green of the rice fields flashed; to the west a tanway of beach banked up the rippling tide.

In the darkness of the recess a frail hut of nipa leaves and bamboo slowly shaped itself as I advanced, and suddenly a shrill voice pierced the place of the place. In the doorway, at the head of the can ladder, old Marietta was gesticulating.

"Oh, senor," she called asthmatically, "pray come in; visit your humble servant. The house is yours, the tuba is fresh, and cocoanuts are in the trees."

"Not today, Marietta; not today," I called back with a smile. "I'm going on to Suay; I can't stop."

She threw her arms up in consternation.

"To Suay, senor; to Suay? Jose-Maria! do you not see the bagui coming? Soon it will be upon you, the trees will bend, the cocoanuts will fall, and you will die!"

The typhoon of the Philippines is not to be disdained. A picture formed in my mind of falling trees, rent bridges, melted roads. I stopped, hesitating, looked up at the blue sky above, listened to the regular breath of the wind.

"Nonsense!" I said, and just then a sudden gust screeched overhead; the cocoanuts bent in half circles, snapped back, bent again with weird elasticity. Before my mind could fairly seize them these manifestations ceased. The wind fell dead, the trees came back to equilibrium. A heavy torpor descended upon the land.

"I'll come in, Marietta," I decided, "and you'll tell me more of the Negritos of the hills."

She did not answer, but waited for me at the head of the bamboo ladder—a weird, dried up mummy of a woman, with teeth corroded by the betel nut and eyes that flashed hard beneath the heavy, yellow folds of the lids. Inside, I sat down upon the bench by the window while she squatted upon the bamboo strip floor, a big sheroot tied up with hemp fibre in her mouth, a hollow cocoanut filled with tuba at her side. But she did not speak. She sat there speechless, motionless, like some monstrous idol, her lids half dropped over eyes that showed opaque and dead.

"Well, Marietta," I said at length, "what about that cocoanut milk you promised me?"

"Oh, senor, pardon me; pardon your servant. 'Tis the bagui. When I feel the bagui coming I forget; I think of other days."

She had risen, then sank again upon her heels, her mind refusing to stay with the present.

"For there were other days, senor," she said gently; "ah, yes, far other days!"

She rocked herself slowly to and fro, her face in her hands. Outside the heavy torpor was suddenly torn by a shriek in the upper layers of air. A few great drops pattered resoundingly upon the nipa roof, then heat and silence reigned again.

Curiously, I looked upon the old crone. She sat there rocking gently from side to side, her lips bubbling in meaningless mutters. Then her yellow paw crept down her arid bosom and reappeared with something in it that flashed gold. She pressed it to her withered lips—and I saw that it was a locket—pressed it to her withered lips with a singular intensity of passion—and that sudden flash of something long gone, of a spark, which in that ruined body should have been long out, moved me with uneasiness.

But she dropped her hands upon her lap in a gesture of infinite hopelessness, and she began to speak in a queer singsong, a monotonous chant, like some religious recital of her Malay ancestors.

"Ah, he was beautiful, senor; he was beautiful. He was tall and straight, like the cocoa tree, and his eyes were deep and soft like the pools of the Cabancaian. He came to me from over the seas, senor; from far-away Spain. I was standing on the beach, right over there. There were many boatloads of soldiers landing, and he was on the foremost prau. It came straight to me foaming with eagerness, flying over the waves, and he stood at the bow. His cap was in his hand; the wind blew his hair of gold into a halo like that of the Christ of the Santa Iglesia; the sun beat down upon his white suit and he glistened like a god. Straight for the spot where I stood, senor, the prau steered from afar, and not a palm's breath either way did it turn as it foamed toward me. And when it ground in the shallows and ten men jumped out into the water to carry him ashore, he motioned them off, sprang himself into the waves waist-deep, and impatiently forced his way toward me. Then a fear entered my heart, and I fled, fled back into the woods, to my hut, and threw myself upon the floor, panting and dreaming.

"I was not ugly, then, senor; ah, no, I was not ugly; age and sorrow had not yet knotted me like the roots of the banyan. I was queen then, senor; the Queen of Beauty among my own people.

"I was beautiful, senor, and I knew my beauty. I was proud, proud of my dark eyes, of my golden shoulders, of the hair that fell about me like a garment to the ground when I unrolled it in the sun after the bath at the spring. I was loved, senor; I was desired; my fame was all over Negros and had no boundaries but the sea; but I, I loved no one, I loved no one, till he came.

"Then, senor, all things hard and mean died within me, and I felt my heart open, bloom, till it seemed my breast would not hold it. Ah, those were happy days, senor; days of beauty. He was my sun, and the warmth and the beauty of him entered my heart till it burst into bloom like the purple moon-flower. We were of different race, but he taught me. He taught me, ah, many things, but what are they, senor, what is anything, compared to love. And he taught me to love. In the evenings, after sundown, we roamed the groves together, in the pale moonshine—ah, senor, senor, why do these things stay with us; why, when they pass, do they not leave us, not stay and stay and stay and torment and torture, hooked to our hearts with double barbs—senor, you who know so many things can you tell me that?

"Listen, senor! Over there, where the river goes into the sea he built a little nipa house. And it was ours, ours, all our own; and it was there that we lived. Lived, you understand; it is true that some of his time was passed elsewhere; he had the cuartel and his soldiers, but it was here that he lived, for it was here that he loved. Senor, in that little house by the side of the sea, it was there that happiness dwelled, happiness such as there never had been, such as there never will be. Senor, I was beautiful then—now I am old and dried; I chew betel; I drink tuba; I spit. But this is not all the work of years. I might have grown old as the corn grows old—golden-ripe, but now, you see, I do not care. He taught me, then he left me, and my heart fell back like a rock, aye and lower than he had found it.

"For, of course, he left me, senor, I have learned since it is the way—you whites, you always leave. He went back to his Spain. He was to return in a year. The year passed, then another and another. It was many years before he returned. The little hut in the bamboo by the river sagged, drooped, rotted; till there was nothing left but the four big corner-posts, standing upright, with between them a little mound like a grave, the grave of our love. I grew old with the waiting, the longing; my heart was all alone; and when he landed again, in the green dawn, one day, he did not know the woman squatting on the beach so near that one of his soldiers pushed her away with his foot to let him pass. He came not alone, senor. With him was a white woman, his wife, with eagle nose and proud bearing and skin like the flesh of the cocoanut. He did not allow his soldiers to carry her, but went in himself, all booted, to the hips in the surf. His arm went around her waist; but, senor, she only looked that her dress would not touch the water. And I knew within me that when he had forsaken me for her, love had died.

"I did not die, senor, although I thought I would. I went back to my hut and lived. I lived as others; I married, I bore children. These children have borne children. I lived, but I did not love.

"And he, he also lived, and his wife had children. He lived, but he did not love, senor.

"And time year passed after year. I saw him little. Once, at sundown, as I was crossing the plaza the portals of his stone mansion clanged open and his carriage rolled out. I saw them pass, he and his wife, she straight and proud, he leaning forward a little, as if tired, but both looking straight ahead—far, far ahead, as if seeking something—and not once at each other. And he, he saw me not at all.

"One night, senor, the bagulo swept the land, as it will today soon. There were shrieks all night, and the sea roar and the tree roar filled the darkness.

"And in the morning, senor, as the sun rose upon the ruins of the night there was noise and crying. Band of soldiers tramped about, taos beat the bush, and bloodhounds sniffed the ground. People whispered that the commandante had left his house in the evening and had not yet returned.

"They found him, senor, in the bamboo by the river, midst the rotting remains of an old hut. One of the big corner posts had fallen upon him, and he lay there dead, stretched across the grass-grown mound that looked like a grave.

"But I had found him first, senor. And in his hand there was a locket, and in the locket there was a whisp of hair. And the hair was not of his wife."

Marietta stopped. Her mouth twisted in a convulsive grimace and two glistening things ran down the lines of her cheek.

And outside with a long-drawn wail the bagulo at length swooped down upon us. The hut shuddered like a live thing, the trees clashed, the sea pounded and hissed. But in the dark, silent, immovable, squatty in infinite lassitude of posture, Marietta wept, wept over he past, the past, gone beyond recallag, beyond amendment, but still with her, ever with her, with its double-barbed fortune.

WHO SAID WOMEN WERE AFRAID?

MRS. TOM WALDEN.

BERRYVILLE, Ark.—When Mrs. Tom Walden, wife of the Carrol county sheriff, saw her husband lying prostrate on the floor of the county jail and eight maddened prisoners making an effort to escape and free a condemned murderer, what do you suppose she did?

Well, this is what she did:

She grabbed her fallen husband's six-shooter, forced every prisoner at the point of the gun to return to his cell. Then she dragged her husband outside the room, locked the door and sent for help.

Mrs. Walden was in the living apartments of the jail when she heard a thud on the floor below. Her husband had just left her to deliver a belated meal to a prisoner. Within the past month two attempts had been made by the inmates to saw their way out of the jail. Both attempts were detected by the sheriff and the offenders were placed in solitary confinement. This caused much ill feeling among the prisoners and for several days they had been unruly.

Rallying that something unusual had happened in the jail below Mrs. Walden fled down a flight of stairs and arrived in the jail just in time to see Merle Smith, a prisoner, attempt to raise a chair to again strike the unconscious man.

"Coward!" cried Mrs. Walden as she leaped to her husband's side and grabbed his gun from its holster in a twinkling.

"The first man who takes a step toward me will die," she said, flourishing the big weapon.

There was a snap in her expression and fire blazed from her eyes. Not a man moved until Mrs. Walden commanded them to go to their cells. They went.

A prisoner confessed to the sheriff that the attack was part of a plot whereby Odus Davidson, under sentence of death, hoped to escape. Davidson was recently convicted on a charge of killing Miss Ella Barham, pretty daughter of a farmer of Pleasant Ridge. One night last November her dismembered body was found in a hog pen. She had been knocked from her pony in broad daylight and choked to death. Her body was cut to pieces with an axe and saw.

The prisoner making the confession said it was arranged that Smith should beat the sheriff unconscious or kill him and then take his keys and open Davidson's cell.

CONVICT CAMPS ARE SCHOOLS of CORRUPTION

PHILIP WELTNER

BY PHILIP WELTNER,
Secretary of the Prison Association of Georgia.

SOME people are like the husband who, with gun in hand, was on the lookout ready to pump the hobo full of buckshot. Other people are like his wife who was feeding the hobo the family's best on the back porch, while her husband was standing guard on the front. Some people would say to every offender: "Away to the gallows." Others say, "Oh, let the poor devil go." Many well intentioned folk bear gifts to murderers, weep over burglars and cry out against the punishment of wife beaters. They have so wrought upon their emotional strain that the offender comes to look upon his incarceration as a grave misdemeanor, the work of vengeful police, vicious state's attorneys and spiteful judges. Under the bountiful sympathy, gratuitously bestowed, they forget their wrongdoing and only have mind for their wrongs.

The extremes to which some would go drive others to an antipodal position. The two camps hiss and bark at each other, nothing is accomplished and civilization halts in its tracks. The clamor of voices is abroad in the land. We are torn hither and thither. Out of the turmoil comes confusion worse confounded. There is, however, one hopeful sign: the people of Geor[illegible] want to advance, they mean to do the right thing.

The Prison Association does not condone the crime of the felon. The Prison Association insists upon the necessity of society separating from itself those whom it would be unsafe to harbor in our midst. But the Prison Association lays equal stress on the obligation of the State towards those in its custody to do its utmost to improve them, mentally, physically and morally. This is common sense; this is right. It is just; it is expedient. A penal system that leaves the offender at the end of his sentence an unbettered, unstrengthened man is a menace to the very community it is supposed to protect. Let there be no doubt of this.

Christianity does not say to the malefactor, "Go thy way and sin no more," if the new liberty will be the very occasion of stumbling. Christianity says to the malefactor, "Come and I will make thee strong to sin no more."

THE OUTWORN SYSTEM.

The prison system that gives no thought to the betterment of the prisoner is a relic of an outworn barbarism, whose motive power was a hate fed by arrogant ignorance. There is no use to mince matters. A spade is a spade despite refinements. Georgia has put an end to the practice of bartering away her convicts for the price of gold. But Georgia still plunders their strength to build smooth roads, and leaves them, when their term of imprisonment is ended, helpless, hopeless, bittered men.

This statement gives no warrant for the assumption that road work is not the most practical form of employment that could be devised. It is. But a system that confines the first offender with the hardened criminal, that gives no incentive to the convict to acquit himself of his task but the lash, that furnishes the overseer with no other means to work his men but the strap, that robs a family of its only means of support by putting its breadwinner in stripes, without compensating those dependent upon his labors, that discriminates between rich and poor in the matter of payment of fines, that indulges in the useless humiliation of convicts by clothing them in stripes—such a system is stupidity itself. No wonder that many lose their poise and cry aloud their execrations. It is ghastly enough to think of the things that go on in the prison camps, how overcome by force of circumstance the young are debauched by soulless villains to suffer nameless shame. For those who feel the white iron of injustice pierce their souls it is well to remember that the night of Calvary was dispelled, not by a curse from the God on the Cross, but the pardoning words: "Forgive them, for they know not what they do." The system is no one's fault, except those who would tolerate its continuance. It has been handed down from father to son through countless generations, improved a bit here and added to there, but overhauled never.

It needs thorough overhauling, because it is wrong to its very foundation. Our penal system does not adapt itself to what the prisoner is, but is constructed upon what an ignorant age thought him to be. That conception pictures the law-breaker as a low-browed, skulking, terrible demon, when, as a matter of fact, he is an erring human, sometimes headstrong, more often weak, with faculties untrained and many times unsound. He is not the creature of great cunning, daring and desperate. For the most part he is a bad boy, only grown up. The criminal, nearly always, is a man without ability to concentrate his efforts. He was probably brought up where he was not required to exercise any control. Because of this lack of training, he drifted into a social stratum without moral tone, without a proper conception of thine and mine, a social stratum given to habits of drink, sexual indulgence and vice. Leaving out of count those whose mentality is deficient, the criminal is merely a man gone wrong, who might have gone right. For seventy-five per cent of the men in stripes the hour of redemption has not yet ticked to an end. But, when Georgia's prison system gets through with him, the hour of redemption has sped by for good and all.

Philip Weltner, as secretary of the Prison Association of Georgia, has made a study of prison conditions. A bill looking to various prison reforms will be urged upon the Georgia legislature this year by the prison association.

The new penology does not care what the methods are, if they adapt themselves to the needs of the prisoners. Its key-thought is discipline, applied to work the correction of the offender. Georgia has committed herself to the policy of working her convicts on the public roads. In Georgia, then, the task of building roads and building men is one and the same. This must be the central principle guiding all our penal policies. The convicts are to be used to build good roads; the roads are to be used to build better men. If this cannot be said of the system now in vogue, then the system is a failure.

GREAT WASTE OF MONEY.

Great sums of money are wasted in Georgia every year by most of the counties in their abortive efforts to make good roads. The staggering percentage of those who on leaving the penitentiary commit subsequent crimes proves that our prison camps are schools of corruption, rather than schools of correction. The reason is not difficult to find. People usually conclude that the trouble is with the type of men employed as guards and wardens. Certainly the right type is too rarely found. But the system is such that it is well-nigh impossible to secure men of the right type to take service with conditions as they are.

The real trouble is that, inasmuch as the convict finds it to his advantage to shirk his work as much as he dares, the system finds it necessary to employ the sort of overseers who bring upon Georgia a nation-wide reproach. As matters now stand the guards must be continually on the alert, the wardens in constant readiness with the lash. This spirit, so inimical to ordinary business, is equally baneful to the business of building roads and bettering men.

The clue to practical reform lies in a reversal of this condition of affairs. We must initiate a system which will encourage the convict to do his best. We must make it to his interest to build good roads and to make a man of himself. There are a number of expedients, which can bring this about, all of them of tried and proven worth.

First, the abolition of the zebra-suit, or stripes. Plain blue jeans are just as serviceable and just as cheap. To make men ridiculous, to lower their self respect will result only in making them more dangerous. Stripes can then be used as punishment for the recalcitrant. Once they are reserved as a mark of especial dishonor, the men will do all in their power to escape their disgrace.

Second, a more liberal policy in trusting the men off the chain. Trust engenders loyalty, and hate is returned with interest. A wise administration of the honor system, in bettering the condition of the men, makes them less willing to escape. At present the convicts are watched with all the precautions required for the least trustworthy man in the camp. And "the trusties" are usually old offenders, men who have become so hardened to the life that they are incapable of feeling its humiliation, who are cognizant of the extreme dangers of an attempt to escape, and who get the "soft jobs" because of their familiarity with the authorities.

An efficient "honor system" requires that those who are incapable of responding to its influence must be housed and cared for in a separate prison plant. Indeed this is provided for by the "Penology Act of 1908," which contemplated the establishment of a central penitentiary or prison farm.

Third, a small day's wage for faithful performance of a day's work. This has proven a great stimulus wherever tried. The money expended is really trifling with the results achieved. The money earned is a deposit in the bank of character, in which the prisoner takes a pride, and out of which he can help those who without it are at the mercy of the doubtful charity of the street. The money, turned over to him on his release, is the capital on which he is to build his new fortunes. The wage should be fixed by the amount he would have earned at day labor, if free, less the cost of prison maintenance and court machinery.

Fourth, an indeterminate sentence. The convict ought to be made to understand that his folly brought him into prison toils and that he must win his way to liberty. Character is the resultant of the worthy aims men strive to attain, and the prisoner's efforts to regain his freedom will correct evil habits and reshape his character into the mold of worthy citizenship.

Fifth, the employment of an expert state high-

The State's Problem of Insanity

DIRECTORS of the state sanitarium at Milledgeville have recommended that efforts be made to prevent the transmission of insanity. Since 1883, the number of insane patients in the care of the state has increased from 900 to 3,400. The institution at Milledgeville has grown from a hospital to a community, and now requires a fund of $500,000 a year for its support. The proportion of insanity, according to Dr. Jones, superintendent of the sanitarium, is 1 out of every 700 or 800 people in the state. To lessen this number, directors advise that the incurably insane be sterilized. They hope that if the state adopts this measure, laws will follow in time which will prohibit the marriage of the unfit. Records of the sanitarium show that heredity is the chief cause of insanity, and alienists believe that laws preventing the marriage of the unfit are the chief means toward preventing mental disorder. Among the patients at the state sanitarium are 50 or more little children. They inherited their great affliction and must suffer from it throughout their days. It is for the purpose of preventing such misfortune that the directors urge the sterilization of the incurably insane. The plan of the directors is that a commission be appointed, and that this commission shall have authority to decide what insane patients in the care of the state are incurable.

ONE of the great problems of the state of Georgia is the increase of insanity.

Since 1883, the number of insane patients in the care of the state has grown from 900 to 3,400.

The increase in population partly explains the increase in insanity. But the growth of the state has not been proportional to the increase in insane patients.

The sanitarium at Milledgeville, which was a hospital in the beginning, has grown into a community. Thirty-four hundred patients are being treated; the buildings cover a great stretch of grounds; and the annual cost of maintainance, by the latest report, exceeds $500,000.

The records extending from 1883 to 1912 show a steady increase in insanity. The number of patients who make up that community at the state sanitarium yearly grows larger.

It is true that the records show a percentage of cures.

According to the latest available report of the sanitarium: "The percentage of patients discharged as restored or improved, based on the number received during the year, was 33 6-10 per cent."

PREVENTION IS URGED.

But the board of directors believe that efforts to cure patients received at the sanitarium are but a part of what the state should do.

The success of the treatment is sufficient to restore 33 6-10 per cent of the patients, but the increase of insanity continues.

The recommendation of the directors is that the state go beyond its care of patients and, not only try to cure, but also to prevent, insanity.

Mental sickness, for the most part, is inherited. It is a sorrow that goes from father to son. One generation transmits it to another.

Directors believe that if this inheritance can be prevented, insanity will become an occasional infliction, an infrequent burden of humanity. If the state can prevent one generation from handing this inheritance on to generations to come, directors believe that the problem of insanity will be solved as far as the state can find a solution.

TREATMENT OF THE INCURABLE

They recommend that the incurably insane be sterilized to prevent the transmisson of their insanity.

This recommendation is a part of the report made to the governor by the directors. It is general in its wording, and is intended chiefly as the beginning of an effort toward the prevention of insanity.

The opinion of the directors is that a commission should be appointed to determine what insane patients are incurable, and that the state should act upon the decision of this commission.

Such a course would be effective only in the instance of incurable patients confined at the sanitarium, and would do nothing toward restricting the marriage of the weak-minded or those otherwise unfit, who have not come into the care of the state.

But the directors believe that a law to sterilize those who are incurable insane would lead in time to laws preventing the marriage of the unfit. They hope that eventually a certificate of health will be as necessary to marriage as the license which the state now requires.

Such a restriction, in the opinion of alienists, is the chief means by which insanity may be lessened.

CHILDREN OF THE SANITARIUM.

Among the inmates of the state sanitarium are fifty or more children who are incurable. A few may be trained in simple ways, but none can be returned to health.

These little children came by an inheritance of sorrow, and must suffer always from this inheritance.

Their condition is one of the reasons why the directors urge that the state take measures to prevent, as well as to treat, insanity.

In other states the means of prevention advised by the directors have been adopted and seem to have met with success. Commissions have been appointed in those states, and have had authority to decide what insane patients are incurable.

In Chicago, an agreement has been reached among clergymen not to marry those whom they consider unfit to marry; and associations of men and women in various other cities are urging that health be made a condition of marriage.

Until heed is given to such advice, directors at the sanitarium believe that little progress will be made in the prevention of insanity. They urge, first, that the state adopt an extreme course in the instance of the incurably insane. Afterward, it is the hope of alienists that the unfit will be prohibited from marriage.

THE EXTENT OF INSANITY.

In discussing the problem that insanity has become in Georgia, Dr. L. M. Jones, superintendent of the state sanitarium said:

"One out of every 300 people in New York state is insane. That is startling. But one out of every 700 or 800 in our state is insane. That is a great problem, and one that grows more serious.

"In New York many instances of insanity are found among the foreign population. Here, a third of the patients are negroes.

"When the war closed, only one negro patient was in the state asylum. Now, there are 1,000.

"Undoubtedly fast living and dissipation have had something to do with the increase in insanity. But heredity is the principal cause. Most of those who are being treated here, inherited their sickness. The prevalence of pellagra also is adding to the number of cases."

In the latest published report of the sanitarium, 1,064 patients are classified. This classification gives the following statistics in regard to the civil condition or patients:

RAISING OF CHILDREN.

Among the accompanying photographs is shown one of the little children at the sanitarium, and also the teacher who is instructing those who are capable of being taught.

In one instance she has spent the last six months teaching a child to arrange pegs in a little board. Some she has taught to string beads or to throw a ball, others to read.

In her opinion, much progress could be made if indestructible playthings were furnished for the children. She finds that their impulse is to tear, to destroy; and it is her opinion that each card that is torn and each toy that is broken encourages the wayward impulse. She is sure that with playthings which could neither be torn nor broken, greater progress could be made.

She also needs the Montessori equipment for the training of children. With such simple means, she is sure that much could be done for these little ones.

Another part of the work at the sanitarium is the tilling done by inmates of the "cottages." These patients are negroes who are strong physically despite their mental sickness. Under the guidance of attendants, this community of the insane tills a farm of 2,000 acres. None is forced to work, but all are found to improve in health. This course of treatment is one of the most efficacious tried at the sanitarium. It is something like the treatment in several European sanitariums where insane patients are cured by living under much the same conditions as though they were sane.

BRAID-TRIMMED FROCKS OF COTTON CREPE

COTTON crepes in cool, attractive weaves are the favorites this season. They need not be the thick crepes that we associate with pale blue and pink kimonos, No, indeed! They are semitransparent, "rice-flaked," soft, lending themselves to fashionable drapery, and are procurable in plain or flowered patterns. The crepon frock especially is suitable for children, for it does not show creases, and, therefore, presents a little tot in as good condition after playtime as before.

One noticeable trimming on children's frocks of cotton crepe is soutache braid. In Paris it has taken the summer dress by storm. It is washable, easily applied and wears far longer than lace or embroidery. And besides—it's new!

The little girl at the side shows a white crepon frock decorated with a conventional rose in blue and green. The material is soft and falls in soft lines from the kimono-cut shoulders. Sleeves are elbow length, and a plain pink crepon band is used at the edge of each sleeve and as an applied hem. On these pink hems and around the collar line is pink soutache. It is arranged in an easy design of three points and a curve. This braid can be put on by the machine. Mark your design on a piece of tissue paper, baste the paper on the dress and sew through it and the braid, tearing away the paper afterward.

In the next little frock pale-rose crepon is used. Here is the favorite Paris color alliance of pink and blue, for old-blue linen is the trimming at the collar, cuffs and on the edge of the hem. A sash of white ribbon with a pink flower design, a band of blue satin on the end, finishes the front tab, which hangs from a knot at one side. Soutache in blue is applied in long and short curves. The fullness in the skirt gives freedom and a becomingness of line.

For an older girl the white dress in the center of the sketch is trimmed with raspberry-pink soutache. The collar is edged with a single row of it in a serpentine line. A front box pleat is similarly ornamented, while on each side is a decoration of braid in points with serpentine central lines. Dropped armholes on the long sleeves are still seen. The pointed cuffs are braid-trimmed. Fullness in the skirt is again here, the waist line being defined by a wide pink suede belt. An applied fold decorates the lower edge of the skirt.

In the little coat white crepon of a heavy weave is trimmed with white soutache. The collar is a sailor collar with a narrow base, a serpentine border ending in a scroll in the center. Around the edge of the coat a narrow hem is suggested by double edges of braid with a central serpentine band. Cuffs on the long, full sleeves are decorated in the same way.

Pale-blue cotton crepe forms the last frock for a young girl. It has a triple skirt suggested by the application of three folds on the lower half. White soutache in a simple line trims the edge of each fold. The bodice is fastened in front with a double row of buttons along the front. Soutache trims the broad collar with a dark blue linen upper collar. The kimono sleeves are elbow length, with dropped armholes and braid-trimmed cuffs. A leather belt encircles the waist.

Crepon is the material of the moment. It is here shown in combination with braid, the trimming most favored. The two bid for your approval. It is a foregone conclusion that they will receive it and a timely exploitation in the Juvenile wardrobe.

The Fichu Revived

ON MANY of the lingerie gowns the fichu has been used to advantage, and the woman who admires this dainty form of trimming will welcome the fact.

They vary in form, some models having long points which extend below the girdle; others fold over on one side and disappear beneath the waist belt.

The handsomest fichus are fashioned of real lace, Bohemian, chantilly, alencon and valenciennes being the favored varieties. From Bohemian lace is made a wide fichu, which extends well over the shoulders and is adorned with oval medallions of embroidered net. Bias folds of white mousseline de sole are used to border the fichu, and a row of embroidered buttons trim the left side.

To wear over a gown of soft silk or sheer wash material is a charming fichu of mallines lace. The lace is draped in soft folds across the back and over the shoulders, and is tucked beneath the girdle at the left side.

Finely tucked net forms the foundation of another charming fichu, cut in flat-collar form over the back and shoulders and gradually sloping toward the front, where it terminates in two sharp points. Bands of lace insertion are used to border the fichu, and to this is joined a frill of lace.

Many pretty fichus are fashioned of sheer linen and elaborately embroidered with eyelet or satin stitch. One design of this variety is embroidered with a combination of eyelet and solid stitches. A pointed edging of filet lace is joined to the outside edge of the linen, and frequently Irish crochet or cluny is substituted for the filet.

Fichus of embroidered net, chiffon and mousseline de sole are extensively used on evening gowns.

On a charming model of pale-yellow satin with an overdrapery of chantilly lace a fichu of cream chiffon is draped scarflike over the shoulders and is tied in a soft knot at the corsage. The ends are then drawn about the waist to the center of the back, and from there hang in two long ends to form the train.

Since Paris approves of the fichu, the modish midsummer frock will be adorned with this graceful form of trimming. The tub frocks of French crepe, especially in the floor-sprigged designs, are most effective if trimmed with the fichu.

THE BUTTERFLY IN FASHION

Of Beaded Net — Adorns the Hat — The Butterfly Girdle

THIS season finds the butterfly much in evidence. It poises lightly on the crown of the hat or nestles against the chiffon folds of the corsage. Materials show butterflies in all the gorgeous coloring of the insect. Rich embroideries introducing the vivid oriental hues, jewel studded and outlined with metal threads, have the butterfly as a central motif. Bandeaux are adorned with butterflies, fashioned of gauze and covered with sequins, which flutter naturally with each motion of milady's head. Tortoiseshell combs are carved in butterfly designs, and jewelers have successfully used this insect as the inspiration of many exquisite pieces.

Butterflies of lace or gauze will be used extensively to trim the lingerie hats this season. Butterfly bows of maline are a favorite decoration for the hair and gown.

On one pretty evening costume the butterfly is effectively used. Chiffon over satin are the materials combined, and the wide folded girdle is ornamented with a butterfly of beaded net, crystal and emerald beads forming the insect.

Milliners recognize the great possibilities of the butterfly for decorative purposes and employ this colorful creature in every conceivable form.

A chic model of navy-blue hemp with an upturned brim has a varicolored butterfly of silk poised at the side. White, red and blue are the hues emphasized in this butterfly.

The dainty maidens of the Flowery Kingdom tie their obis in butterfly bows, and this season Paris has appropriated this charming fashion.

Many of the smartest gowns have a butterfly bow finishing the girdle at the back. These vary in proportions from the small bow with a buckle center to that of huge dimensions extending almost to the shoulder blades.

With the smile of fashion's approval by using the butterfly on your hat or frock.

FRENCH FASHION NOTES

PARIS, June 5.

FLOWERS, flowers everywhere! would be the impression gained by the sojourner in Paris at the present time. The lovely city and its environs are a glowing mass of color. This flowery background is a fit setting for the exquisite gowns and millinery adorning fashionable Parisiennes who attend the races, lunch at Armenonville, sip tea at Colombin's or shop at the leading magasins.

The semi-tailored coat suit of silk has replaced the one of worsted material and appears in many phases. There are jackets of moire, with skirts of charmeuse or crepe de chine. Coats of flowered taffeta or crepe de chine are worn with skirts of a contrasting color and material, and with skirts of striped and checked designs are worn coats of plain colors. The silk moire, crepe and poplin suits are especially favored, and as a rule have vests, collars and cuffs of a contrasting color.

Poiret is responsible for a stunning suit of taupe-colored silk. The skirt is of charmeuse, slightly draped across the front, and the jacket is of moire, with a vest of white moire elaborately braided.

A broad girdle of Chinese-blue satin with a flat buckled bow in front finishes the waist line.

Designed to wear with this costume is a hat of taupe-colored milan straw trimmed with Chinese-blue paradise plumage and a small bow of moire.

At the races the manikins sent by Callot Soeurs, Drecoll and Paquin are the cynosure of all eyes. One wore a costume of white crepe de chine trimmed with bands of black chiffon and alencon lace. A coatee of black chiffon lined with white completed the toilette.

Another was attired in a gown of navy-blue crepe de chine, with a bolero jacket tied in front with narrow bands of the material. The collar and cuffs are of blue-and-white checked taffeta, and the upper portion of the skirt is draped over a foundation of taffeta.

The frocks of heavy linen no longer enjoy the popularity of former years, and the light-weight materials, such as crepe, voile, etamine and the sheer linens, are used instead.

Pretty one-piece frocks fashioned from these fabrics are suitable for almost any occasion. A model of tan etamine crash has a band of Bulgarian embroidery forming the vest and the upper portion of the skirt panel. Long sleeves are finished with cuffs of the same brilliant coloring.

The lovely French crepes in plain and embroidered designs are delightfully cool and will be much worn on hot summer days.

A dainty frock is fashioned of flaked white crepe and has a two-tiered skirt braided with coral embroidered crepe. The blouse fastens to the left side, and a pleated frill of coral crepe outlines the fastening and finishes the collar and cuffs.

The separate blouse of white chiffon has been launched by Premet. Some models are finely tucked, others embroidered in white or colors, and the woman who admires dainti ers will find them irresistible. These blouses are durable and withstand dampness and strain to a surprising degree.

Frocks for the "jeune fille" grow more beautiful as the season advances. Tub frocks of flowered cotton crepe, pique, linen or voile are trimmed with lace or embroidered in dainty designs.

An attractive hat for a young girl is of white pique with a border and facing of dark blue straw. A rosette of white soutache braid trims this smart and simple model.

Flowers are extensively employed to adorn the hats of straw, chiffon, crepe and lace designed for dress occasions. Poppies, field flowers, geraniums and roses are the favored varieties.

Pansies are used to trim a lovely model of white straw. Dark purple velvet is used to face the brim.

A novel collar to wear with summer gowns is of sheer white linen edged with a narrow pleating of lemon-yellow linen.

Lovely jabots of ecru tulle are shown, and these have cravats of colored moire or taffeta.

Moire parasols are being carried by the promenaders through the Bois. One of lemon-yellow is trimmed with five narrow ruffles of black chiffon.

Over gowns of mousseline de soie are worn short coats and bolero jackets of charmeuse, taffeta or satin.

A charming evening gown designed by Worth has for the upper portion of a pale pink satin, the bodice fashioned of white mousseline de soie. A wide girdle, with long sash ends of gray tulle and velvet combination, confines the fullness at the waist line.

A smart three-quarter length manteau of slate-gray ottoman silk has draped revers and cuffs of deep violet mousseline de soie.

Sashes of flowered mousseline de soie are used on many lingerie frocks.

Smart long gloves of silk for warm-weather wear are elaborately embroidered or trimmed with bands of lace.

The newest offerings in silk stockings are those elaborately jeweled with white or colored brilliants.

A handsome negligee of pervenche-blue brocaded crepe de chine is trimmed with narrow bands of white ostrich plumage.

Scarfs of Bohemian, chantilly and duchess lace are worn with the evening costume.

ELOISE.

Fashion Flashlights

HATS are growing larger, the drooping garden variety being very prominent for afternoon.

There is a decided vogue of checked materials in combination with plain. Especially stylish is this alliance in linen and the loosely woven fabrics such as ratine, agaric and eponge.

By all means have a bolero effect in your summer dress. Incorporate it with an underblouse of net or lace. Prevent the little jacket from riding up by fastening it to the bodice.

Maline on hats is one of the revivals that hint of airy, transparent lightness. It is used in crisp, pleated frills around the crown, on the edge of the brim and in huge rosettes around flower centers.

The summer bathing cap is just as ornate as many afternoon shapes. It is large. Put a becoming brim of silk and rejoices in flowers and ornaments of braid or ribbon. Of course, it is of rubberized silk and should be worn over a tightly fitted cap of protective rubber to make assurance doubly sure.

Fichu lines in vests and gimpes are here. They are suggested in crossed net, tulle and soft mull.

A snakeskin serge is new. It is in dark gray, with dots of red, black and blue over its surface. For outing and traveling it is the favorite.

A long oval side panel on a new skirt is weighted down by a long silk tassel.

Bullet buttons are seen on all light-weight cloth suits.

Pink and blue is the combination for summer.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ARRANGING YOUR HAIR

The Side Part is Youthful

Close-to-the-Head Style

Doing Away with Short Ends

For the Girl of Nineteen

"HOW shall I arrange my hair?" is a cry that comes to me very frequently, and to solve this problem for my many readers a variety of styles are shown today. Among the different forms there must be one to suit every individual. The secret of a well-groomed head, or I should say one of the secrets, is the selection of a becoming style. The girl who twists her hair into the latest mode without viewing the result from all sides is a sad failure if the style is not suitable to her features.

For the head which is inclined to be flat or to slant in at the back the low psyche is most worthy of adoption. In the illustration the hair is slightly waved, arranged in a low pompadour in the front and held in place by a comb. It is then drawn to the center of the back, where it is coiled over the finger, just as you used to handle your hair to make puffs. When your finger reaches the head the hair is pulled into a curved roll, pinned at the top and bottom and at the sides. In this instance a pompadour comb is added to increase the beauty of the hairdressing. The tail of the bird follows the line of the knot in a most graceful manner.

The hair pinned at the nape of the neck is generally becoming to the youthful face. Part the hair at the side and draw it very loosely to the back. Divide it in two strands and then twist these about each other. When the ends of the strands are reached twist the coil into a figure similar to the once so popular "figure eight." Be sure to pin the hair securely if you wish your head to present a tidy appearance. Place a comb at the top of the figure.

If you are troubled with short ends of hairs, as many people are after an illness where there has been great fever, part the hair slightly at the side and use plenty of invisible pins to hold the ends in place; but be sure to let the hair lie loosely. The tight arrangement is seldom, if ever, becoming to a face.

The part at the side of the head gives a youthful and boyish appearance to the features. The part should be continued well toward the back of the head and the hair combed over the sides of the head all along the dividing line. Arrange it loosely and well down over the ears, and at the back divide it in three strands. Roll each strand into a little coil and pin the coils safely into position at the lower part of the head.

A mode of dressing the hair which is particularly suited to the little hats so much in favor just now is to part the hair in the middle, arrange it low over the forehead and down over the ears. The ears and the forehead must be well covered this season. Roll the ends of the hair into a bun to complete the close-fitting appearance of the hair.

To follow any one of these suggestions it is necessary that the hair be in good condition. Not much can be done with hair which is lifeless, too dry or too oily. Every day massage the scalp for five or ten minutes with the finger tips and then brush the hair thoroughly. Once you have formed the habit, you will not think of letting a day go by without this attention. The treatment will be sure to put life into the hair and scalp. Should the hair be too dry, castor oil or vaseline can be rubbed into the scalp two or three times a week. For hair which is inclined to be too oily the lotion for which I am giving the recipe should be used as directed.

Lotion for Oily, Damp Hair

Powdered bicarbonate of soda	¼ ounce
Borate of soda, powdered	¼ ounce
Eau de cologne	1 fluid ounce
Alcohol	2 fluid ounces
Distilled water	16 fluid ounces

Mix and agitate until solution is complete. If used daily, it tends to produce a crispy condition.

You can spray your hair with a favorite scent before arranging it should you care to give it a delicate odor.

Do you want to know a quick way to shampoo the hair when there is no time for a soap-and-water cleansing? Separate the white of an egg from the yolk and beat the white. Then rub it well into the hair. After the rubbing brush the hair thoroughly and it will be as light and fluffy as you could wish it.

There is no excuse for a disagreeable oily odor about the head, for there are so many ways of making the head sweet and clean.

As a final word of advice, let me warn you to select a style of hairdressing that will bring out the best features of your face and conceal the worst.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters sent to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Face Is Too Thin

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I am a young man with a tolerably good physique, but my face is too thin. I understand that manicure will cause flutter will fill out the face. What do you think about it? PERPLEXED.

Cocoa butter is very good for filling out unnaturally thin faces. It should be applied in a liberal quantity and rubbed into the skin with a rotary motion. If your features are small you cannot hope to have a very full face.

To Remove Freckles

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Please give me a cure for freckles so that they will never come back even if the sun does get on the face. A READER.

Lemon juice will remove freckles. The only way you can prevent the face from becoming freckled is to protect it from the sun by carrying a parasol or by covering the face with cold cream and powder before going out.

A High Stomach

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I have been a reader of your columns for a good many years and this is my first question. How can I reduce a very high stomach? I am slender with this exception. O LINDA.

I think that constant exercise will reduce the stomach. It is also important to stand correctly and to avoid an excess of sweet and starchy foods.

In standing position, clasp the hands over the abdomen. Contract the muscles of the abdomen and bend at the hips six times, keeping the muscles well contracted throughout the bending. Rest by taking three deep breaths between each exercise.

Baby's Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Can you tell me what I could use to make my baby's hair light? He is three months old and has very dark hair.

Will lemon juice whiten the skin?

MILLIE G.

Do not put anything on the baby's hair to make it light. He may be most ungrateful to you when he grows up for doing anything to change the color.

Lemon juice applied occasionally will whiten the skin.

A Rouge and a Hair Tonic

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly give me the recipe for a rouge and a hair tonic? S. F. G.

Here are the recipes you desire:

Liquid Bloom of Roses

Carmine	30 grains
Ammonia water	1 fluid ounce
Rosewater	1 fluid ounce
Spirit of roses	1 fluid dram

Tonic for Falling Hair

Phenol	½ dram
Tincture nux vomica	75 grains
Tincture cinchona	1 ounce
Tincture of cantharides	½ dram
Cologne	4 ounces
Sweet almond oil	4 ounces

Apply to the roots of the hair with a soft sponge once or twice a day. This lotion is especially good for very dry hair.

High Color in Face

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I have an extremely high color and my face often burns for two and three hours each day. This is very annoying and also embarrassing. EDITH.

It may be that the burning sensation is due to the soap you use. Change the brand, or, better still, discontinue using soap for a time. Cleanse the face with a cold cream instead. Excessive color in the face is very often due to nervousness. If this is your trouble I advise you to go to a competent physician for treatment.

A Walnut Stain

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I should like to give my hair a brown tint, and ask you to publish the recipe for a walnut stain. C. P.

Walnut stain is made of four ounces of walnut skins, beaten to a pulp, to which is added pure alcohol, 16 ounces. Let stand eight days and strain. Then apply to the hair with a small brush.

Perspiring Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Kindly give me the recipe for a lotion which I may use on my hands, which perspire profusely. EDNA.

Following is the recipe you desire:

Boric acid	80 grains
Borax	120 grains
Salicylic acid	150 grains
Glycerin	2 ounces

Rub on the hands four or five times a day. Wash the hands in warm water before applying and dry carefully. Shake well. If the glycerin is heated, it will increase the solubility of the preparation.

Hollow Cheeks

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Please tell me what I may do to fill out hollow cheeks. It is not a lack of teeth that caused them to sink in.

A READER.

To make thin cheeks plump, rub a good skin food in with the following movements. To treat the right cheek, place the thumb of the left hand just beyond the corner of the mouth on the left cheek as a brace. Make rotary movements upward and outward, beginning at the corner of the mouth and making three diverging lines of manipulation over the cheek. With the right hand treat the left cheek.

A Hairy Mole

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I have an ugly hairy mole on my face and wish to know what I can do to get rid of it. BLANCHE.

Nothing but electrolysis should be employed to remove a mole. Surely in or near your vicinity you can find a reliable operator.

The Cuticle Around the Nails

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please tell me what I may do to prevent the skin from growing up over the nails. MADGE J.

The cuticle surrounding the nails must be pushed back daily with an orange stick. If it is difficult to push it back it can be softened with olive oil, vaseline or cold cream.

Ugly Elbows

Dear Mrs. Symes.

What can I do for my elbows, which are so rough and unattractive? I like to wear short sleeves, but dislike to do so when my elbows are so ugly.

GRETCHEN.

First of all let me urge you not to use the elbows as props. The habit of leaning on the elbows is one which nearly every girl has formed. The weight pressing on them is bound to make the skin hard and rough. Every day bathe the skin in olive oil, and at night before retiring apply a liberal quantity of cold cream. Bandage the arms so that the bedclothes will not be soiled.

Shoulders Are Curved

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I am a stenographer and find that my shoulders are dreadfully curved. I want to be very straight. What can I do?

HELEN.

While seated at your desk you can practice deep breathing, which will correct the trouble, and you can exercise your shoulders, moving them in a rotary motion, going from the front to the back. Do not sleep on a pillow at night, if you wish to keep the shoulders straight.

Head Itches

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Kindly tell me what to do for my head, which itches a great deal.

BEUNICE.

A daily massage of the scalp will relieve the itching. After rubbing the scalp for ten minutes, brush the hair thoroughly from the crown down to the very ends of the hair.

Before Being Photographed

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Do you think it advisable to rouge the lips and use the pencil on the brows before having one's photograph taken?

ETHEL U.

Yes, if the lips are inclined to be pale, and the brows very unattractive.

The Vaucaire Tablets

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Kindly let me know what you think of the Vaucaire tablets for developing the bust. Do you think it would be better to use cocoa butter instead? M. J. D.

The Vaucaire tablets are splendid for developing the bust. In connection with these the cocoa butter may be used. Rub it into the skin with a *gentle rotary motion. Deep breath*ing will also help to develop the bust.

Soap for the Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Tell me what is the best soap to use on the hair. (Mrs.) J. D. G.

Castile, green, sulphur and tar soaps are splendid for the hair. The sulphur and tar are especially satisfactory if the hair is inclined to be very oily.

A Red Nose

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Some time ago you published a recipe for relieving a red nose. Will the formula be put you to please print it again. (Mrs.) A. F.

Following is the recipe you desire:

Lotion for Red Nose

Powdered calamine	1 dram
Zinc oxide	30 grains
Glycerin	½ dram
Cherry laurel water	2 ounces

The lotion should be well shaken before it is swapped on the nose. It may be used both morning and evening.

To Reduce Superfluous Fat

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly suggest some method for reducing the fat on the thighs? Also tell me what will stimulate the growth of the lashes. R. G.

Rolling exercises will reduce the fundament. When practicing these no tight clothing should be worn. Hill climbing and running are other means of getting rid of the superfluous fat.

A scarcity in eyelashes is sometimes due to a weak condition of the eyes, and until proper treatment is given to them the lashes will not grow in. You should consult an oculist and rub on the eyelids melted vaseline.

The Electric Vibrator

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Please tell me through your paper if an electric vibrator thickens the hair? If not, is used should the scalp be massaged with the hands alone?

Please give me a cure for dandruff. I do not care to use the sulphur because my hair is light. J. D. G.

The electric vibrator is excellent for making the hair thick and better in every way. It will be necessary to give a hand massage in connection with this treatment.

The vibrator will have a good effect on the dandruff. It may be well, however, for you to apply vaseline to the scalp once a week in order to soften the scales so that they may be easily brushed away.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams most cordially invites for friends to bring to her these Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time.

[If a personal reply is desired, a self-addressed stamped envelope should be inclosed.]

THE WEDDING GUEST

IF YOU are invited to attend a church wedding, you should wear a gown appropriate for a formal occasion, with hat and white gloves. Extreme evening dress is not permissible, unless a wrap be worn over it and kept on in church.

Above all, do not be late. You should calculate your time and arrive not later than five minutes before the ceremony. If late, you should quietly take a place near the entrance so as not to disturb the services. Even though you have been placed above the white ribbon by the bride in her apportioning of the guests, you must forfeit this honor.

The ushers will generally ask you when you enter if you are a friend of the bride or bridegroom. Your answer will determine the side of the church on which you will sit. If you are to be placed above the white ribbon with the immediate family or friends, you should mention the fact with your name to avoid confusion.

Never force yourself into any of the pews that have been reserved for others. Do not complain about your place, as if you were in a theater, and by all means do not push forward or stand out of place to get a better view. All these are marks of ill-breeding. No guest should leave his seat until the bridal party has passed down the aisle.

If you have been invited to a wedding breakfast or reception, you should proceed to the hostess' home immediately after the ceremony. Here the women place their wraps in a room designated. They keep on the hats and gloves. The men lay aside their hats, coats and canes. With the right-hand glove drawn off the gentlemen should enter the reception room after the ladies whom they have accompanied, and in a polite line approach the receiving party.

If you do not know the bride or bridegroom, you are privileged to ask one of the ushers to introduce you, as they are considered masters of ceremony, whose duty it is to make every one comfortable.

Express your good wishes to the bride. Wish her happiness in her new life. Do not congratulate her on being successful in having a man marry her. This is a "faux pas"—a social blunder. Your congratulations are extended to the bridegroom. He is to be congratulated on his good fortune at having such a charming lifemate.

When a great crowd of guests is in the reception room you should not linger, but should make way for others. Speak to the bride's parents, who are there to attend the occasion, and, if you wish, move to the dining room for refreshments. When toasts are proposed glasses are touched. Wedding cake in boxes should be taken only by each guest, and cards left in the receiver if you have not placed them there on your arrival. A woman leaves one of her cards and two of her husband's.

Solutions to Social Problems

Inviting Her to Call

DEAR Mrs. Adams.

I should like to know if it is proper to invite a woman to call upon meeting her the first time in a public place.

On meeting a woman at a friend's house and I leave first, what should I say to her on leaving? Is it my duty to call on the woman I have just met? RUTH.

If you wish to continue the acquaintance and you have exchanged more than the formal words of recognition of the introduction to her, you can extend the invitation.

You may bid her goodby and express words of pleasure at having met her. If the woman has invited you to call on her and you desire to do so, you may follow your inclinations about the matter.

Sending Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When one lives in a town of about 2500 should cards be sent to friends in town or just those out of town announce the birth of a child? How soon should the cards be sent? A READER.

Yes; the cards may be sent to the friends in town. They can be mailed the day or the day after the child is born.

Name on a Card

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I am going to get visiting cards shortly and wish to know if it is necessary to have the full name on the card or the first two should be sufficiently long. Should the name be engraved or printed? What size should the cards be, and is it proper to have the address on the card? THEODORA.

Cards of the most approved type give the full christian name or names. The stationer will tell you if your full name is too long for the card. The cards should be engraved, and on them should be the address. The average card for a woman measures two and one-quarter inches by three inches. Of course the styles change in cards as well as in everything else. Your stationer will be able to give you the correct size.

Eating Toast

Dear Mrs. Adams.

1. How is toast eaten?

2. On menu cards one often sees "a la carte." What does this term mean?

3. In an ice cream parlor should a girl remove her gloves?

4. When I am introduced to any one, should I bow and smile, or should I extend my hand?

5. Should one thank a servant for doing little things that are his duty?

6. I am going away on a business trip with my husband. Among my friends are several bridal brides. Of course I expect to receive invitations from them, but as I cannot dress so well as they I do not care to accept the invitations from them. How can I refuse them? SLIGHTED.

1. With the fingers. Of course, if chicken, asparagus or any other foods are served on toast then the fork is used.

2. "A la carte" means according to the bill of fare.

3. Yes, if she wishes to do so.

4. When introduced to one who is of your own age and in the same station of life, you may offer your hand. Otherwise, it would be better to let the other person take the initiative.

5. It is not necessary to express thanks every time anything is done for you, but an amiable "thank you" now and then may be offered when a service has been performed.

6. Possibly you entertain queer imaginations about your dress. I think that very often we are inclined to think too much about this subject instead of the interesting people we can have an opportunity to meet. Think on the matter over seriously. If you really do not care to accept invitations from the women, you can decline on the pretense of having another engagement.

Mail or Messenger

Dear Mrs. Adams.

What is the correct form to send one's visiting card by mail or bearer, on receipt of an At Home card? R. W. B.

Either.

At a Reception

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you please answer the following questions?

1. Should cards be left for the hostess and guest of honor at a reception?

2. Is it proper to shake hands with the receiving line when departing?

3. Is it necessary to reply to invitations to any social function when a reply is not requested?

4. How long is one expected to stay at a formal reception?

5. When one has a friend who is in trouble or who is very ill and cannot see any one, how should one let the unfortunate one know that she is being thought of?

6. How should a reply to a formal reception be worded if one expects to attend? How, if one cannot accept?

AN EARNEST READER.

1. Yes.

2. No. At a very crowded reception it is sometimes impossible to bid farewell to the hostess on account of the friends who demand her attention.

3. Yes; especially to those affairs which necessitate a great deal of preparation before planning, and where the absence of a guest may make a great difference in the plans of the hostess.

4. Twenty or thirty minutes is ample.

5. You can leave your card for the one who is in distress. On the lower left-hand corner of the card write in pencil "to inquire." A bouquet of flowers, a book or magazine may be sent to her. Such remembrances are always appreciated.

6. No written declination or acceptance is necessary on receipt of an invitation to a reception. You merely send one accepts by attending the function. If it is impossible for you to attend the proper thing to do is to send a visiting card in an envelope so that it will reach the hostess if possible, while the reception is in progress. A husband and wife, if unable to accept, should send one card only when the invitation has been extended in the name of the hostess only. If extended in the name of the hostess and a daughter, two cards which would be sent and returned. When several members of a family are invited to a reception and but one of the group is able to attend, and that person is a woman, she can, by leaving the cards of the others along with her own on the tray in the hostess' hall, obviate the necessity of posting cards as directed above.

To Spell a Name

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you please advise me how to spell Genevieve?

The correct spelling of the name is Geneviève.

Eating Chicken

Dear Mrs. Adams.

1. To settle a argument will you please tell me if it is proper to eat chicken with the fingers?

2. Should cake and ice cream be eaten with forks?

3. I am ill and not married. When being introduced to any one when should I rise?

4. If a lady or gentleman whom I do not know speaks to the person with whom I am walking, am I supposed to speak over the top of the head?

5. Sometimes when talking at the table I rest my wrist on the table and hold my fork in my hand. A READER.

1. Chicken should never be eaten with the fingers. The knife and fork are used to remove the meat from the bones and to cut it.

2. Cake may be broken, piece by piece, and conveyed to the mouth with the fingers, or it may be eaten with a fork. A fork or spoon may be used for ice cream.

3. A hostess invariably rises to accept an introduction to either a man or woman. A woman, while a guest at a tea, does not rise when introduced to her; nor when she is one of a group to which a woman is introduced, unless it is one who is somewhat older than herself or a person of distinction, or unless she is seated beside her hostess, who naturally, rises to greet a newcomer. In all other circumstances, a woman rises to receive an invitation to one of her own sex.

4. Yes. It is better to lay the fork on the plate when it is not in active service.

A Quiet Wedding

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I cannot afford to have a large wedding, and therefore write to ask if it would be proper to write informal notes to my most intimate friends to witness the ceremony. PEGGY.

It would be quite correct to do as you suggest. The notes should be written in the name of your mother.

Leaving Cards on Gifts

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When wedding gifts are displayed for exhibition, do you think it advisable to leave the card of each donator on every gift?

BRIDE-TO-BE.

Personally, I think it is better to remove all cards. Their presence seems only to gratify idle curiosity.

For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

By ADELAIDE BYRD

A CHERRY CENTER-PIECE

Designed by E. J. Duckman

CENTERPIECES will never go out of style, and here is a particularly attractive one for your summer work. It is lovely in the finished form, and although the design is well covered, the work is easy, for very little of it is solid.

You will see that the portions between the design and the edge are marked for punched work, the favorite openwork with embroiderers.

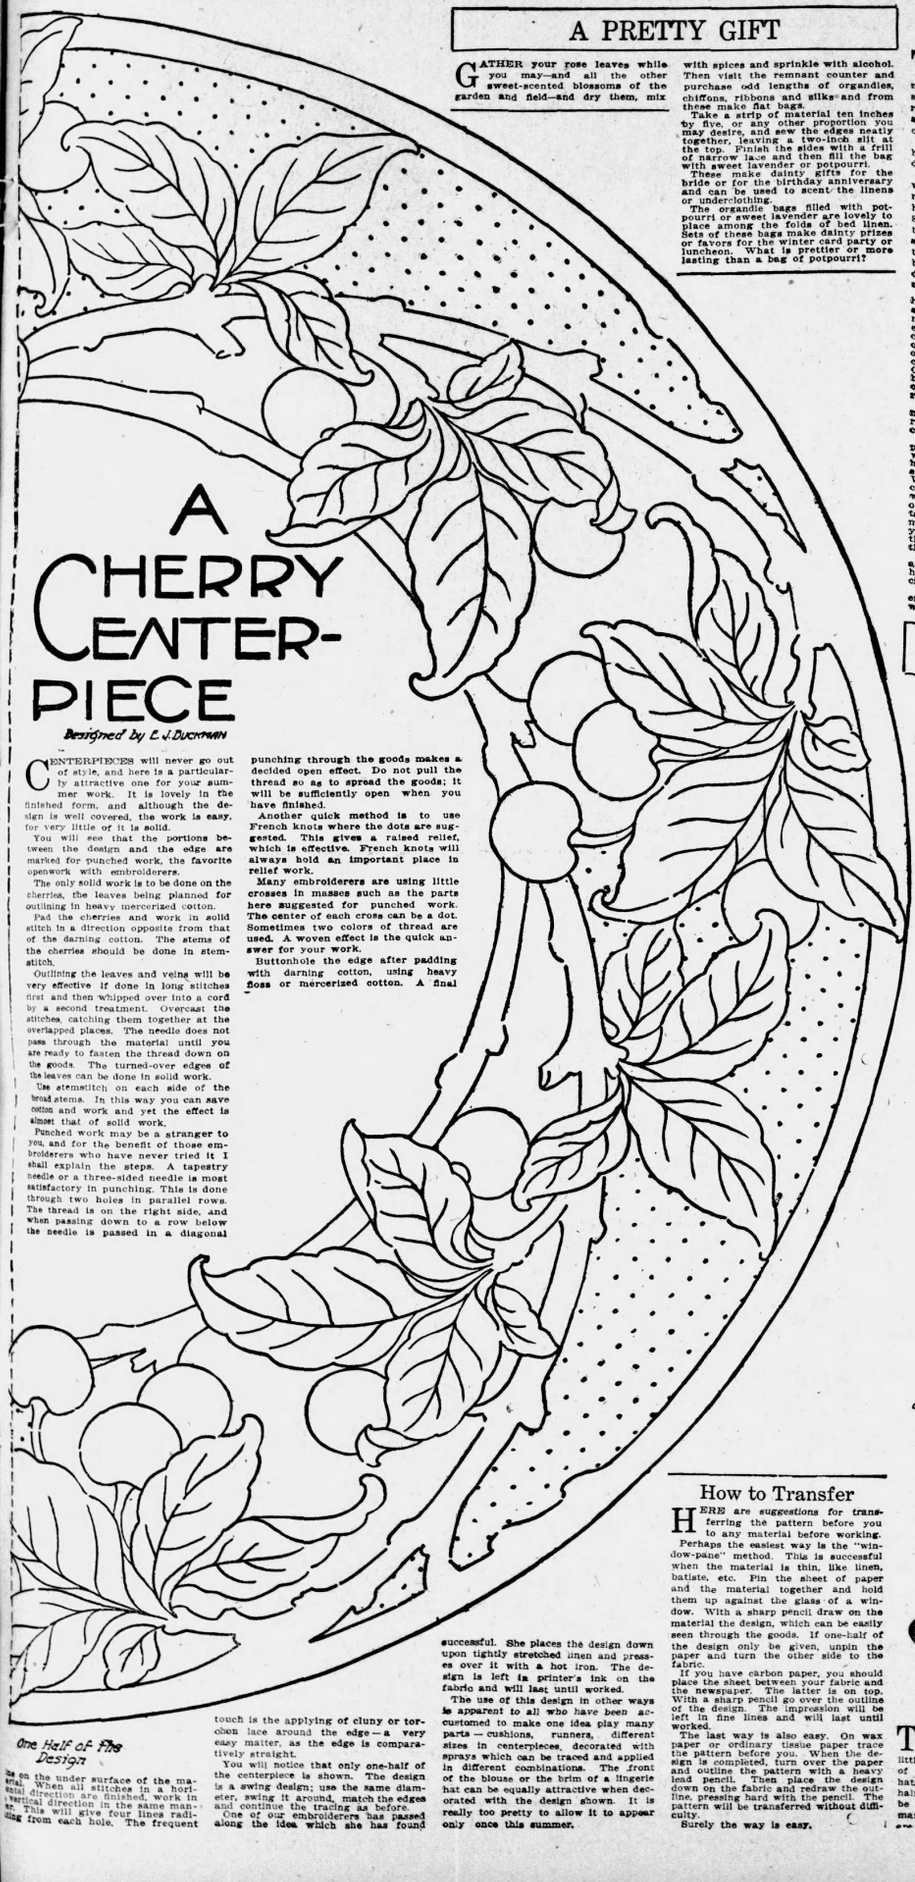
The only solid work is to be done on the cherries, the leaves being planned for outlining in heavy mercerized cotton.

Pad the cherries and work in solid stitch in a direction opposite from that of the darning cotton. The stems of the cherries should be done in stem-stitch.

Outlining the leaves and veins will be very effective if done in long stitches first and then whipped over into a cord by a second treatment. Overcast the stitches, catching them together at the overlapped places. The needle does not pass through the material until you are ready to fasten the thread down on the goods. The turned-over edges of the leaves can be done in solid work.

Use stemstitch on each side of the bread stems. In this way you can save cotton and work and yet the effect is almost that of solid work.

Punched work may be a stranger to you, and for the benefit of those embroiderers who have never tried it I shall explain the steps. A tapestry needle or a three-sided needle is most satisfactory in punching. This is done through two holes in parallel rows. The thread is on the right side, and when passing down to a row below the needle is passed in a diagonal



One Half of the Design

Use on the under surface of the material. When all stitches in a horizontal direction are finished, work in a vertical direction in the same manner. This will give four lines radiating from each hole. The frequent punching through the goods makes a decided open effect. Do not pull the thread so as to spread the goods; it will be sufficiently open when you have finished.

Another quick method is to use French knots where the dots are suggested. This gives a raised relief, which is effective. French knots will always hold an important place in relief work.

Many embroiderers are using little crosses in masses such as the parts here suggested for punched work. The center of each cross can be a dot. Sometimes two colors of thread are used. A woven effect is the quick answer for your work.

Buttonhole the edge after padding with darning cotton, using heavy floss or mercerized cotton. A final touch is the applying of cluny or torchon lace around the edge—a very easy matter, as the edge is comparatively straight.

You will notice that only one-half of the centerpiece is shown. The design is a swing design; use the same diameter, swing it around, match the edges and continue the tracing as before.

One of our embroiderers has passed along the idea which she has found successful. She places the design down upon tightly stretched linen and presses over it with a hot iron. The design is left in printer's ink on the fabric and will last until worked.

The use of this design in other ways is apparent to all who have been accustomed to make one idea play many parts—cushions, runners, different sizes in centerpieces, decorated with sprays which can be traced and applied in different combinations. The front of the blouse or the brim of a lingerie hat can be equally attractive when decorated with the design shown. It is really too pretty to allow it to appear only once this summer.

A PRETTY GIFT

GATHER your rose leaves while you may—and all the other sweet-scented blossoms of the garden and field—and dry them, mix with spices and sprinkle with alcohol. Then visit the remnant counter and purchase odd lengths of organdies, chiffons, ribbons and silks and from these make flat bags.

Take a strip of material ten inches by five, or any other proportion you may desire, and sew the edges neatly together, leaving a two-inch slit at the top. Finish the sides with a frill of narrow lace and then fill the bag with sweet lavender or potpourri.

These make dainty gifts for the bride or for the birthday anniversary and can be used to scent the linens or underclothing.

The organdie bags filled with potpourri or sweet lavender are lovely to place among the folds of bed linen. Sets of these bags make dainty prizes or favors for the winter card party or luncheon. What is prettier or more lasting than a bag of potpourri?

Other Uses for Handkerchiefs

THE handkerchief plays quite an important role in the realm of needlework, for it is used to make many articles, from an apron to a bedspread. Of course, the latter article requires many handkerchiefs; but there are dainty bits of needlework which only require one or two.

This year the shops are selling many handkerchiefs with colored borders and designs through the center.

One attractive needlework bag in which to keep your summer sewing is made by stitching together two large handkerchiefs with a colored border. Select the same design and see that the colors are equally bright on both sides. A bias strip a half inch wide is then stitched two inches below the top border of the bag, and through this is drawn a gathering string of inch-wide ribbon to match the color of the border.

A dainty sachet is made from two handkerchiefs, of the ordinary ladies' size, of a fine quality. Cut two thicknesses of cotton wadding, a trifle smaller than the two handkerchiefs, and cover them with pale pink, blue, yellow or white china silk, sprinkling a generous quantity of sachet powder over the cotton before closing the fourth side. Over this foundation whipstitch the handkerchiefs together and decorate one corner with a flat bow of satin ribbon.

Bedroom sets are very pretty when made of handkerchiefs, and it does not require an expert needlewoman to successfully fashion them.

Select white linen handkerchiefs of a pretty design and join them together with lace insertion. The number of handkerchiefs required varies with the size of your bureau and dressing table. Whipstitch the lace to the handkerchiefs and border the strip thus formed with a row of insertion and a frill of lace edging. The bedspread and tablecover can be made in the same material, and if a lining of pale blue, yellow or pink sateen is placed beneath the scarfs, tablecover and bedspread, the effect is even more beautiful.

Lingerie pillows and pincushions can also be made from the fine white handkerchiefs combined with valenciennes lace.

If you do not embroider, this is an effective way to provide your bedroom with dainty accessories.

THE LINGERIE SLIP

THE princess slip of sheer material, lace-trimmed or embroidered, is a necessity these days, when all extra fullness must be eliminated from the undergarments. These can easily be made at home of nainsook, longcloth, lawn, crepe de chine or china silk.

Purchase a pattern the correct size and, using this as a guide, cut out the material. If you decide to embroider it, transfer a neat design about the top and, using mercerized cotton, fill in the leaves and foliage with satin stitch. Join the sections with French seams, stitching them by hand. This requires a little more time, but the slip will be far more dainty than if sewn on the machine. To the top and about the armholes stitch a row of lace beading and to this a gathered or pleated frill of valenciennes lace.

The flounce of the slip is the most important part, and this should be of valenciennes lace, twelve inches wide, attached to a strip of the material and finely pleated. Join the flounce to the skirt with a strip of beading, and through this run ribbon. If desired, the flounce can be made of the material with insets of lace, or it can be trimmed with rows of narrow insertion and the lower edge finished with lace. Gather this scantily, for the flounce dare not be full enough to interfere with the draping of the skirt about the ankles.

The slips purchased in the shops do not fit perfectly, therefore it is to your advantage if you make them at home.

If you prefer a flounceless slip, then form a panel of tucks and insertion down the front and edge the bottom with a narrow flounce of lace.

The plain flounce with a scalloped edge is practical, and if the neck line and armholes are scalloped the slip requires no other trimming. Embroider eyelets through which to run the ribbon.

Short puff sleeves or sleeves of the kimono type are an excellent addition to the slip, if the owner wears shields, for they can be attached to the slip instead of the gown.

The slips of white, pink or blue crepe de chine are very much favored at present, as the soft, clinging qualities of the silk insures that the lines of the gown will not be interfered with. Valenciennes lace is used to trim these slips, and they are far nicer if stitched by hand.

Make two, three or a half dozen slips to replace the white petticoat. You will be greatly pleased with the result, for it makes less underclothing necessary.

Cardcases of Linen

THE daintily embroidered cardcase of linen belongs among the necessary accessories, and the woman who does not already possess one should immediately begin to embroider the linen.

The needlework shops sell a variety of designs stamped on coarse or fine linen, according to the work you desire to place on it.

The thin lingerie frock demands a cardcase of handkerchief linen, embroidered with a very fine design; those done in eyelet embroidery are the most effective. If you do the tiny flowers and foliage in solid work, pad the petals first with darning cotton and cover this with fine mercerized cotton. Scallop the edges, using the buttonhole stitch, and whipstitch the sides together.

With the one-piece frock or tailored costume should be carried a cardcase of heavy linen. The design is not so fine on these and can be done with white or colors.

For instance, if you choose a cardcase of natural-colored linen, the design can be effectively done in white, brown or dark blue. There are a few designs to be worked with the Bulgarian colors, and these are extremely effective when done in the brilliant hues on a background of tan linen.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked.

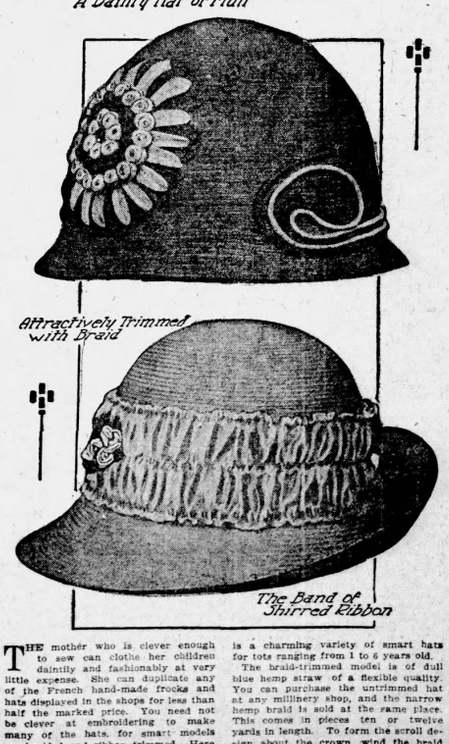
The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

SUMMER HATS FOR TINY TOTS

A Dainty Hat of Mull

Of Albatross Embroidered with Roses



Attractively Trimmed with Braid

The Band of Shirred Ribbon

THE mother who is clever enough to sew can clothe her children daintily and fashionably at very little expense. She can duplicate any of the French hand-made frocks and hats displayed in the shops for less than half the marked price. You need not be clever at embroidering to make many of the hats, for smart models are braided and ribbon trimmed. Here is a charming variety of smart hats for tots ranging from 1 to 6 years old.

The braid-trimmed model is of dull blue hemp straw of a flexible quality. You can purchase the untrimmed hat at any millinery shop, and the narrow hemp braid is sold at the same place. This comes in pieces ten or twelve yards in length. To form the scroll design about the crown wind the braid over a cord and then sew it to the hat. Blue and white are the colors used for this model. The large flower is formed by first making the center of blue braid, swirled around six times until it resembles a compact rosebud. Seven white roses are made in the same manner and are stitched to the hat, forming a circle about the blue one. Alternate circles of blue and white are formed until the center is as large as you desire. From this blue and white petals formed of the braid radiate in all directions, so that the flower, when completed, much resembles a sunflower. Red-and-white and brown-and-white are pretty combinations for this model.

The baby bonnet is dainty and sweet, just the proper design for a very young baby. White albatross is the material used, and it can be purchased already stamped at the needlework shop, or you can draw the design at home. The band of embroidery framing the face is made by buttonhole-stitching two rows of very fine scallops. Through the center is then embroidered a design of pink roses and foliage. The raised roses are done with heavy silk in tones of rose and the leaves with dull green. A wealth of the same design adorns the crown of the cap. The cap is then gathered at the bottom and bound with narrow white satin ribbon. Rosettes of the same ribbon adorn each side of the cap.

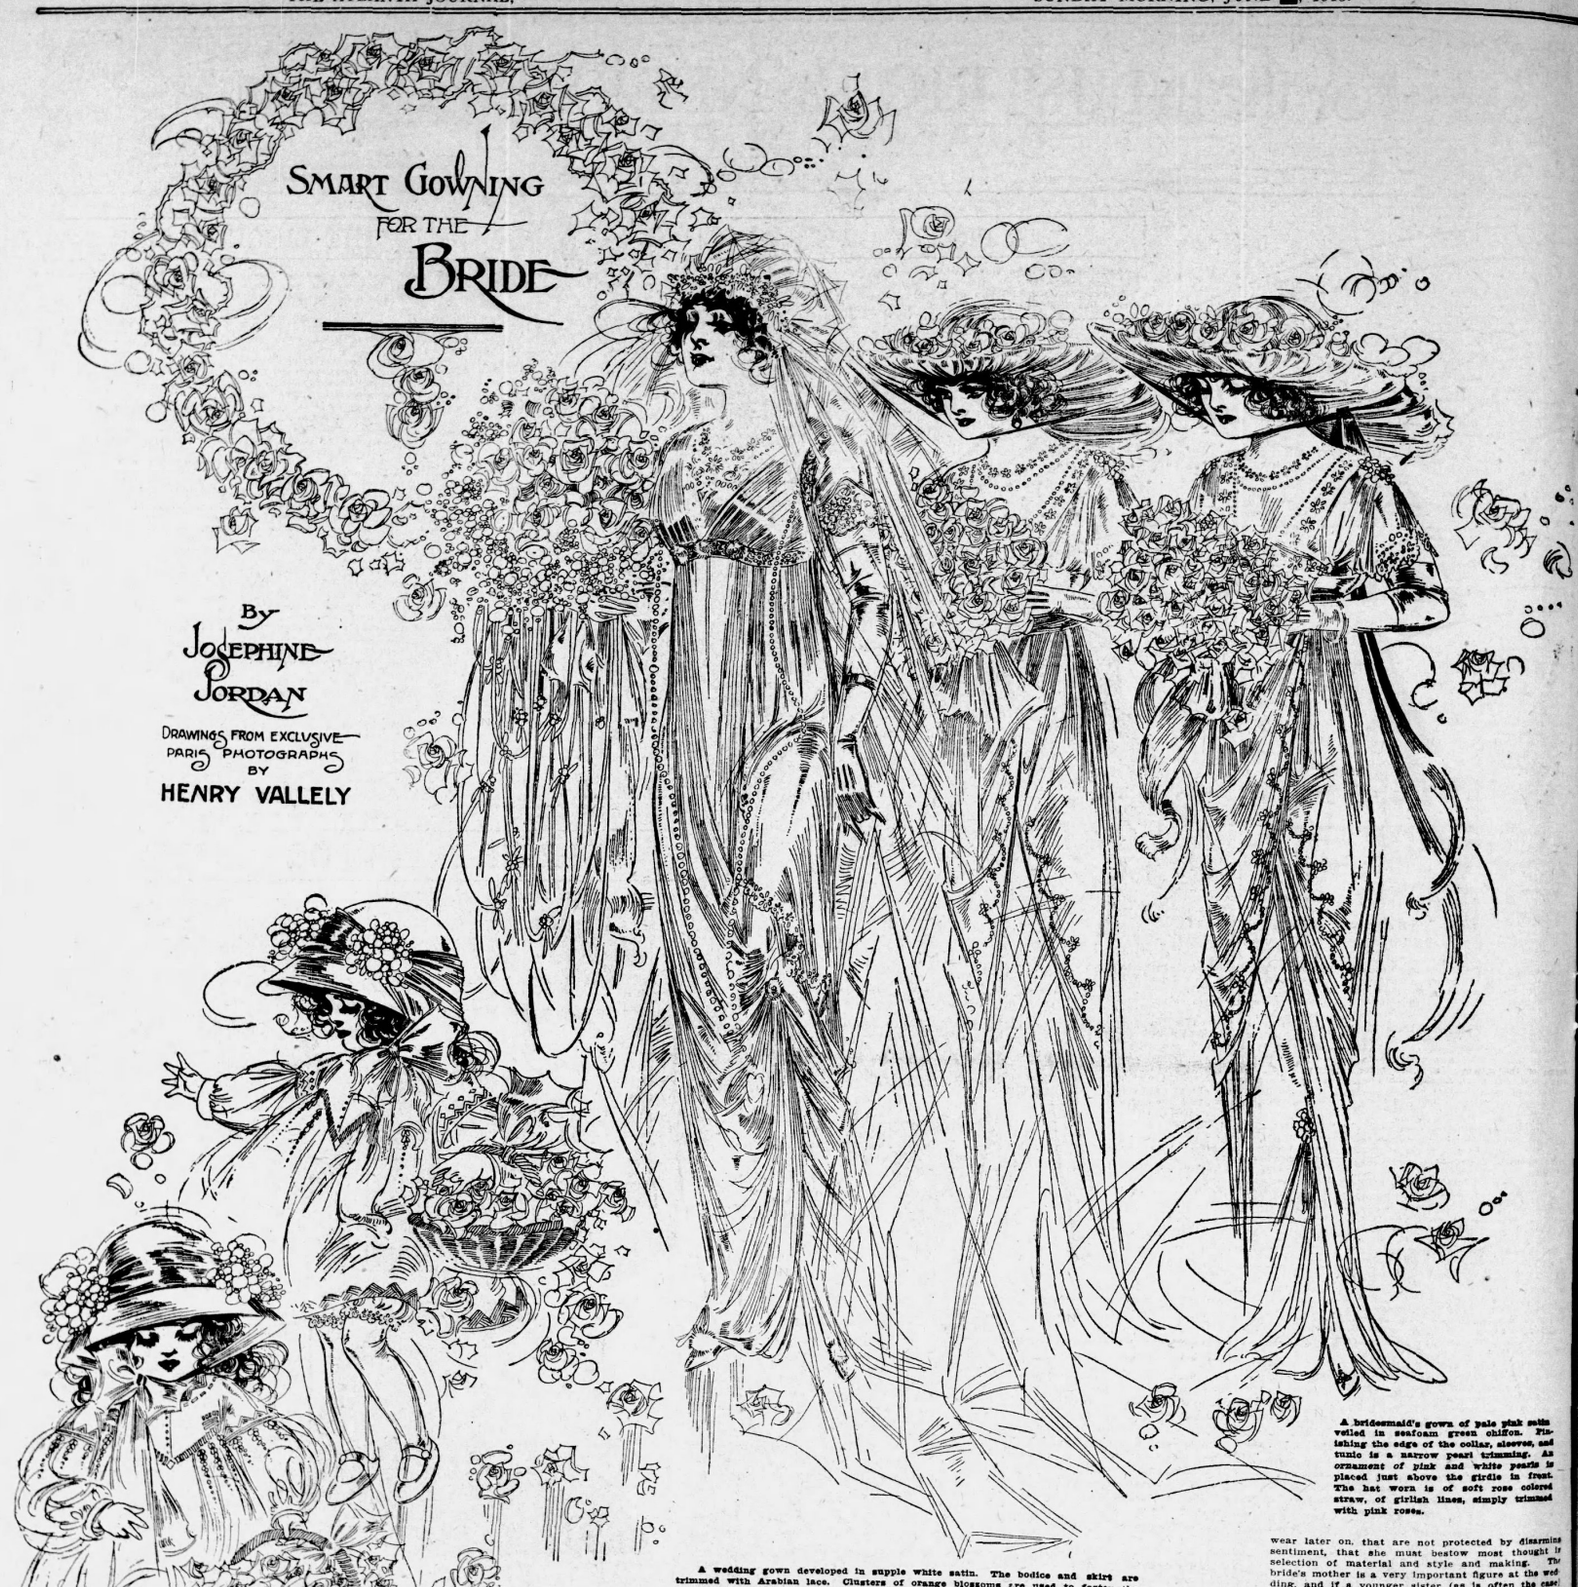
The charming little hat of white hemp has a band of shirred ribbon about the crown. For this purpose take a strip of pale pink messaline ribbon four inches wide and run a gathering string through the top, bottom and center. Join this neatly at the side of the crown, and from pale blue and deep rose-colored satin make a cluster of roses. With these combine several leaves and place a bouquet at each side of the crown. The foliage is purchasable at the milliner's.

For the tiny girl of three or four years there is nothing more becoming than the bonnet of sairred mull. Purchase a wire frame the shape desired, and over this shir the white mull. Finish the lower edge with a full ruching of lace, which can be found at the trimming counter, and about the crown sew a scant frill of narrow lace. Now take a strip of four-inch pale blue messaline ribbon and draw it about the crown, making two long loops, an end and three short loops at the side. Build a piece of ribbon through the center and make a swiveled rose and join this to three leaves made of dark green silk. This is a lovely bonnet for best wear, and every child should have one for her lingerie frocks.

SMART GOWNING FOR THE BRIDE

By JOSEPHINE JORDAN

DRAWINGS FROM EXCLUSIVE PARIS PHOTOGRAPHS BY HENRY VALLELY



A bridesmaid's gown of pale pink satin veiled in seafoam green chiffon. Finishing the edge of the collar, sleeves, and tunic is a narrow pearl trimming. An ornament of pink and white pearls is placed just above the girdle in front. The hat worn is of soft rose colored straw, of girlish lines, simply trimmed with pink roses.

A wedding gown developed in supple white satin. The bodice and skirt are trimmed with Arabian lace. Clusters of orange blossoms are used to fasten the drapery of both skirt and bodice. The veil is of finest silk net, held in place with orange blossoms. The simplicity of the treatment shows the richness of the fabric.

WHEN the great question, "Of what should a modern bride's trousseau consist?" is asked, it is always understood that it refers to the problem as applied to the woman of means and fashion. The less fortunate ones have to be content with what they can afford. But with the favorites of fortune this is not so, and yet the problem exists, and is a very vital one, for upon it may hang a great deal of the bride's peace of mind for the near future.

In my opinion the young bride should take with her into the married state sufficient clothes for the season, so that for the first season, at any rate, the husband will not have to be consulted upon matters of dress.

This is a point to remember.

But as the fashions change, and no young bride wants to look "demode," no more clothes should be bought than can be used in the one season. Thus, one tailor made for each day in the week will be quite sufficient, with eight or ten afternoon and visiting dresses. As she will be invited out a great deal, and many things will be given in her honor, there should be at least as many evening dresses. At times when the bride entertains or is entertained, as usual, the latter will have to be increased.

* *

I always prefer, when making the bridal dress, to use old family lace. It adds distinction to the gown, quite apart from the matter of sentiment attaching to it. In the sketch I have shown how I would use old lace for a bride's dress for this season. White should always be the tone. I am not much in favor of the pale pinks and blues that have endeavored to invade the domains of the traditional white. White is the most becoming to the bride; if color is required there is ample scope for the display in the toilettes of the bridesmaids and matrons of honor.

The under linen should be of sufficient quantity to last at least a year. Nowadays no smart woman would think of having her linen made in dozens, with each an exact copy of the other. Instead, underclothing is made in "sets," a set comprising the chemise, the knickers, and the petticoat bodice.

Each set is different and carefully chosen from amongst the dozens of models that have to be made for the modern bride. Perhaps in this respect luxury has never attained such heights as today. The straight loose fitting garment has gone.

* *

Each garment, whether chemise or night dress, and especially the petticoat bodice, is as carefully fitted as would be a dress or a cloak, and a special staff of cutters and fitters is now necessary in all the big houses. The very finest of batiste is used, or a new kind of "voile linon" that is very fine and washes well.

The chemise is very finely tucked and often takes the empire shape. It is trimmed with fine Valenciennes lace and insertion, with little motifs of the finest hand embroidery set in. Everything is the finest possible.

The night robe can, and often does, have a modified kimono top and short sleeves. It is tucked at the hem and again trimmed with lace and insertion to match.

Three or four "sauts-de-lit" of varying thickness for the weather are necessary. Three or four breakfast wraps and matinées of different styles and three or four very smart tea gowns should also be included.

* *

In addition, the bride should possess a varied selection of those charming and very feminine accessories, the "breakfast in bed" caps, to which the fashionable woman has taken such a great fancy because they enable her always to present a neat and dainty appearance by quickly tucking way her tumbled locks. These caps are made in lace and fancy ribbons for the boudoir; later on when they are to be worn in conjunction with the house gown, they are more elaborate.

Underskirts must not be forgotten, because they are an important item in an elegant trousseau, not on account of the place they take—quite the contrary—for all are thin and of the lightest possible weight.

Now that skirts are so often slashed up in front or at the side, the underskirt must, of course, follow suit. This allows for all manner of pretty fancies in the trimmings, but, as I said before, everything is thin and fine and close fitting, so that not a seam nor a crease adds to the bulk of the figure or interferes with the perfect set of the gown over the hips.

Actually, the bride's wedding dress is the least important gown in her trousseau. So long as it is white and simple it fulfills requirements. Tradition and later day romance make all brides beautiful, and for that one day, at least, she may trust to the occasion to disarm hypercriticism. It is on the gowns she will wear later on, that are not protected by disarming sentiment, that she must bestow most thought in selection of material and style and making. The bride's mother is a very important figure at the wedding, and if a younger sister (as is often the case) is to be bridesmaid, or an older sister maid or matron of honor, with perhaps a small niece as flower girl dresses for the occasion will loom large in the plans of the entire family.

* *

Daytime is so much more popular for weddings that night that it is daytime dresses we shall consider. Whether it be morning or afternoon matters to the men of the party only, and even upon them it is not obligatory to make distinction. Evening, which is supposed to begin at 6 o'clock, requires for all formal occasions formal evening dress for men and women—low cut gowns for the women, and for the men the euphoniously called swallowtail or clawhammer coat with, of course, matching trousers (always black), and a low cut waistcoat of the same cloth, or some vesting material, usually piqué linen or a fancy but unobtrusive silk. If the wedding is before 12 o'clock noon, the men (including the groom) may wear colored cloth suits with cutaway coat, very much on the lines of what we call an every day business suit. Or they may wear, even at the morning wedding, the regulation afternoon dress of a man of leisure—black frock coat, gray or gray striped trousers, fancy vest, white shirt, standing collar, and Ascot tie. Strictly afternoon dress is the only sort to be worn by the women at either a morning or afternoon wedding.

Custom seems to have made gray the favorite color for the bride's mother's dress, though there is no hard and fast rule, and individual taste must guide her—but she must not wear black. Even if in mourning, black must be laid aside for this occasion and replaced by lavender or gray. White, to be sure, is quite as much a mourning color, since it is literally an absence of all color, but white is the bride's own, and any one else should hesitate to wear it, except in combination with some other color. Charmeuse is the silk of the hour. It is beautifully soft and lustrous, and may be found [illegible]

Stage Letter

By Norman

NEW YORK, June 7.—Nazimova has an ambition. Its realization will mean a great deal of hard work outside the dramatic field. But she says she is in earnest and will gladly undertake the labor involved.

"I want to make a world tour," she says, "and play in each country I visit in the language of that country. Bernhardt, Duse and other actresses have made world tours, but Bernhardt played only in French, Duse only in Italian, and so on. I want to play in French in Paris, in Italian in Rome, in Spanish in Madrid, in Russian in St. Petersburg. That will be something no other actress has ever done."

Nazimova will close her season in "Bella Donna" at Los Angeles in July and will then go to Europe for a visit, during which she will put in many hours in the study of languages.

* * *

Moving pictures without a screen; movies in which the characters really move about the stage like living persons—this doesn't quite seem possible, does it?

But just such a novelty has been on exhibition in the cities of Europe for several months. It is called "Kinoplastikon," and it will be seen in this country in the fall. Lee Shubert has obtained the American rights.

* * *

Sarah Bernhardt, who closed her American tour here this week, had many amusing stories to tell of her trip.

One of them was about a "mash note." She got it in a small town out west. "It was so funny," she said. "The man wrote, 'You are adorable and I would send you orchids if I could get them, but in this one-horse town I am reduced to molasses candy, of which I send you a two-pound box. Will you take supper with me tonight? If you consent blow your nose on the stage and I will understand.'

"And the dreadful part was," concluded Sarah "that I had that night, eh, such a bad cold and I could not blow my nose!"

No new show was offered this week. Soon the summer reviews and roof productions will begin. Just now all is stagnation—outwardly. But underneath the surface there is great activity. Every producer in New York is looking for material for next fall, and it is currently reported that never in theatrical history was there such a scarcity.

The stand-bys among American playwrights seem to be in the doldrums, new geniuses are not turning up in overwhelming numbers, and reports from abroad, where half a dozen of the big managers have been nosing about for several weeks, are to the effect that there are few things which give any promise of success in this country.

* * *

Ray Comstock was lurking about the lobby of the Princess theater a few evenings ago as the curtain went up on "Any Night," the rather lurid little drama of the streets. In a few minutes a man burst out, hauling his evidently unwilling wife after him.

The man proceeded to tell Comstock his opinion of the playlet. He thought it most immoral and scandalous. He particularly objected to his wife's having been exposed to its contaminating influence. Comstock advised his patron at least to see the piece through and then form his opinion.

The man angrily refused, then turned to his wife to take her out. She was gone. She had percolated back into the theater to see the play. The man dashed in after her. He did not come out. "Ho, hum!" quoth Mr. Comstock.

Lew Fields, rehearsing for the summer show at the Weber and Fields Music hall, takes a taxi from his office each morning, though the distance is but three blocks.

"I save $4.25," he says. "The taxi ride costs me 75 cents. If I walked I would get touched for at least $5 by theatrical friends of mine who are out of work and whom I would meet in those three blocks."

ENTERTAINMENT CLOSES SUCCESSFUL YEAR AT PEEPLES STREET

As we write this, our last letter from Peeples street, we wish to thank The Journal for their kindness in allowing us space to tell our weekly doings in the school page. It has certainly done the schools a great service, and helped them to keep in touch with one another. We hope that it will be as successful next year as it has been this, and that it will always be the key which will open the door of Atlanta's schooldom to the outside world. Through it, those interested in the Atlanta schools can get a glimpse of our daily school life, our joys and sorrows, and our daily tasks and triumphs. The public schools are Atlanta's pride, and in them the citizens of tomorrow are growing up. It is therefore important that the people who today make Atlanta the "empire city" should be in touch with the little generation, and The Journal's school page makes this possible.

The Junior Civic club of Peeples street school is one of the results of this year. The club was organized with a view to making the school and the district in which we live more beautiful, improving the conditions of the school, and bringing the members together for a discussion of school needs and for an enjoyable program, twice a month. The club is composed of the eighth grade and two representatives from each room. It will be carried on by the ninth grade next year, and each succeeding year, and we hope it will continue to achieve as much as it has so far. Ten subjects have been debated by the members of the eighth grade. These debates, although a new feature in the school, have proved very profitable and interesting, and have enlightened us very much on several live questions.

The school grounds have been made more beautiful by the school improvement committee, as soft green grass now covers our front yard instead of red clay, and many other things have been improved. One end of the hall has been transformed into a cozy little club room by the efforts of the club room committee, and the children have been made stronger and healthier by the interest of the athletic committee.

Baseball and basketball have figured prominently in our school life this year. The baseball team has done good work, and we wish to thank each and every boy who has so faithfully and well played for "dear old Peeples." Cornet ball and basketball have also been new features in the athletic work, and many a good tussle have we had over the old basketball.

And now the last week of school has come and several of the rooms are giving "farewell" entertainments. The entertainment committee of the fifth grade arranged a very attractive porgram, as follows:

Declamation—Joel Rankin.
"Captain Joe," in two acts—Cast: "Captain Joe," Lucile Price; "Kate," Catherine Hackett; "June," Mary Brittain; "Sue," Rosa Nash; "Pat," Nellie Sheffield; "Mildred," Grace Cook.
Team Girls, etc. "The Third Man From the End," taken from "Just Patty." Taking part are fifteen girls.
Declamation—Newton McEachern.
Recitation—Rosa Nash.

In the dialogue "Before the War," all the parts are taken by boys and the result is very amusing. Cast: "Uncle Reefe," Warren Pollard; "Aunt Sukey," Thomas Stokes; "Eva," William Disbro; "Lazy Bill," Howard Grumley; "Rose Geranium," Harris White; "Pete," Jerome Jones; "Dandy Jim," I. M. Sheffield; "Lew," Raymond Browne.

The seventh grade also held a very enjoyable entertainment. The program was:

Declamation—Tom Long.
Piano Duet—Jane Riley and Helen Stuart.
Recitation—Lucy Swann.
Dialogue—Seven girls.
Recitation—Catherine Whitehead.
Dialogue—Four boys.
Song—By class.

We hope everyone will enjoy vacation to the utmost, and return to school in the fall refreshed and energetic. But what of those who will come back no more? What of the eighth grade, who have spent the happiest years of their lives at Peeples Street? Every child in the eighth grade achieved promotion, and although some of us may meet again in high school next year, we will be scattered, and will look back with fondest memories to those happy days spent with the teachers we love in the school of our childhood days.

Again we have carried off the honors as prize essayists. The latest addition to our roll of honor is Miss Louise Woodruff, of the eighth grade, who has been awarded the prize offered by the chamber of commerce on "Fly Prevention." We welcome her to our "Hall of Fame" and crown her as a true daughter of Peeples street.

CATHERINE HACKETT.

An entertaining bill of vaudeville is assured to theatergoers when the Forsyth starts its seventh week on Monday afternoon.

The management promises a program that will be on a par with the most pleasing entertainment that has been seen in local vaudeville.

The headliner is to be Bud Fisher, the cartoonist who created "Mutt and Jeff." Bud Fisher is a young man. He started his career in the west, and soon was induced to make Chicago his home. There he entered newspaper work. Then he found his way on a wave of fame to New York, and with "Mutt and Jeff" as his card of introduction soon was classed with the most popular of modern cartoonists. Three years ago he accepted a theatrical engagement in New York City, and since then he has played at selected points. Last summer he played a week at the Forsyth. During the engagement he met many people who became his friends, and who have followed his work and his successes ever since.

Bud Fisher is going to show "Mutt and Jeff" in some original stunts, and in addition will do some sketching that will have a keen interesting value.

Pauline Welch is on the same bill. Miss Welch is Mrs. Bud Fisher. She met the artist while playing here last summer. She was then a member of a singing and dancing act, and scored one of the hits of the bill, because of her splendid ability to sing and dance and be "cute." She introduced some of the best song hits that have been heard at the Forsyth, and returning now as a single star she is to sing some new numbers that not yet have been heard here.

The Three Leightons will be stars of the comedy part of the show. There are two excellent singers and dancers in the combination, and the third member is a young fellow who has won as much laughter as any individual in the theatrical profession.

Karl Emmy and his pets, the best trained-dog act in vaudeville, will be a special treat for the ladies and children. Emmy has been most patient with his charges, and they have been taught to perform some stunts that are unique and original. The act is one of the recognized features of modern vaudeville and has never failed to draw attention.

Eva Taylor and company, a troupe of four clever entertainers, will present "After the Wedding," said to be a scream from start to finish. It is original, and has won attention for months in the Keith theaters in the east. Whitefield and Ireland, with a new idea in comedy, will occupy an important place in the show; and one of the big features [illegible] Vaudeville [illegible] of the bill will be Adonis and "the doll that Adonis is a clever gymnast who has won a position in vaudeville that is very much envied. He has put together an act that is excellent and unique.

There is little doubt that the Forsyth is to be busier than usual and that the house is going to be crowded all the week.

The summer season is now at full height, and some of the greatest acts of the Keith fold are being booked for early appearance. Following this week will come beautiful Gertrude Vanderbilt and her partner, George Moore; and very soon, Mike Bernard and Willie Weston will set out to make an attendance record.

"The Duke of Durham," conceded to be a clever tabloid-vaudeville-musical comedy, will be the attraction at the Bijou this week. The program starts with matinee on Monday, and there will follow the regular schedule of performances all the week, including an extra afternoon performance on both Monday and Saturday.

This style of entertainment has become popular at the Bijou. For five years the theatre had worked in building up a following for popular vaudeville, and when the clientele showed that it had grown weary of such amusement for the time being, the management hesitated between a policy of melodrama and tabloid musical comedy. The tabloid policy was adopted and from the first week scored a success that has eclipsed everything that has been offered in the theatre since it was transformed from the "Columbia," eleven years ago into the "Bijou."

Half a dozen tabloid shows have been presented and each seems to have been better than the preceding. The attendance has grown with a stride that means that the theatre is not going to be large enough to take care of all demands, and with the coming of "The Duke of Durham" it is believed that big attendance figures will be recorded. "The Duke of Durham," with a cast of excellent principals and a pretty chorus, will make Bijou patrons glad that they live in Atlanta. "The Duke of Durham" was built for laugh-making purposes, and in Richmond, Norfolk, Savannah, Birmingham, Charleston, Jacksonville and other southern cities in the circuit, following some shows that were accredited wit hthe local hit of the season, won more applause and laughter and played to more people.

There are entertainers in the company who are not known now. Their names would carry but little value until after the Monday performance; and then they will be known.

"The Duke of Durham" is crowded with all sorts of original and interesting comedy. A series of songs that have been staged by a director of unusual note will make up the program of music; and a musical director who has been identified with some of the most brilliant successes will be in direct charge of the orchestra.

The show is expected to score one of the successes of the season. The prices continue at 10 cents admission, with 10 cents extra for reserved seats.

CONVICT CAMPS ARE SCHOOLS OF CORRUPTION

way engineer. The inspectors now employed to visit the camps of Georgia were not chosen with any idea of their skill as road supervisors. They ought to be taught the best methods of road construction, so that they in turn might be capable of passing upon the road work done by the separate counties, encouraging them to greater efficiency in building roads, as well as in building men. One of the chief reasons for road inefficiency is the lack of road machinery. A steam shovel, for example, can do the work of thirty convicts. But the smaller counties cannot afford to equip themselves with high-priced machinery. The solution of the difficulty may be found in the "Penology Act of 1908," which makes it possible for two or more counties to unite in the purchase of machinery and the construction of their roads. This would affect a tremendous economy in the cost of prison maintenance and road work. But to bring this consolidation about would require the presence of a road expert who could educate the county authorities to realize the value of consolidation and carry through the necessary correlation of their efforts.

Sixth, a better parole law and the after-care of prisoners. There ought to be a grading and classification system under which the men can demonstrate their fitness for release. Wher men secure release by their own efforts, they have no grounds for complaint against the administration, and they are inspired to do their best.

As far as possible, all prisoners should have work found for them before discharge. Otherwise they are penniless soon after release, and are under great temptation to repeat their crimes. No questions are asked about the millions appropriated for police, court and prisons, why then grudge a few thousands for the restoration of those who have been imprisoned. This is common sense, dictated by self interest as well as humanitarian considerations.

The number of prison inspectors should be enlarged, so that, having smaller districts under their supervision, they would be able to supervise in person the men paroled by the State and assist those who come away from our prisons in re-establishing themselves in an honorable way.

In conclusion, it is well to repeat that the best way is the cheapest way. The system that shackles the manhood of her convicts and unshackles the beast in the men is bound to bring doom to our civilization. We must save the men by husbanding their self-respect, by giving them something noble towards which to work, by placing over them men to whom they can look for helping hand, instead of a closed fist.

With the foregoing suggestions carried into operation, we may confidently look for the following results:

First, an improvement in the moral life of the convicts;

Second, an increase in the quantity and quality of the output.

Third, a decrease in the cost of guarding the men and building roads.

Fourth, a greater readiness on the part of experts to take service under Georgia's penal system.

Fifth, a decrease in the volume of crime.

WALKER STREET SCHOOL.

We hope that each one will endeavor to come back to school in September studying harder and with more energy than they have ever done before. The eighth graders will say farewell to dear old Walker June 6, nearly all of them will go to high school in September.

The two thirds, two fourths and fifth grades had a picnic at Grant Park Tuesday afternoon of last week. All had a delightful time with the exception of one boy who was very unfortunate and broke his arm. He had broken it once before and it was just getting well again.

The little second grade children enjoyed a most delightful picnic last week at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Connally. They spread their dinner upon the grassy lawn, and after they had eaten they went to the spring which is just at the foot of a hill below the house, they enjoyed this very much.

We were grieved Monday morning when we walked into the school yard and discovered that one of the young trees had been blown down by the strong winds that swept through the city Saturday. No other damage was done around our building.

We were delighted when we learned that our school had won a basketball on Field day, for having such good attendance on the part of those who took part on this occasion. Nearly every grade has had an opportunity to play with it, and each game was enjoyed by everyone.

We are very much pleased with some of the seventh grade pupils who have led their class in different studies this term. Mollie Bressler has made 100 in spelling, arithmetic geography, history and hygiene for the year. She has led her class with Bessie Evans as a close second. B. P. Wood has led the boys for the year. Margaret Ennis has made the greatest improvement in the class this year, and James Allen has done the best work in drawing.

The flowers in the windows of the seventh grade furnished by Bessie Evans and Bessie Harrison have done much to brighten their room throughout the year.

Era Hughes, Stanley Ford and Herman Ewing have not been absent or tardy for the entire year.

True Bryant, of the fourth grade, won the prize for having the greatest number of perfect spelling papers for the year.

Soon, very soon, the places which know us now and have known us for eight long years, shall soon know us again no more forever. We are going where most all these girls and boys from Walker have gone, which is to High school.

MARY LOW HUMPHRIES.

FORMWALT SCHOOL

On Thursday the final contest for the medals in elocution and oratory offered by the teacher of the seventh grade of Formwalt school took place. The judges were Colonel R. W. Martin, Roy Manning and Ernest Lowenthal. We felt especially happy in having Roy with us, as he is one of our old Formwalt boys, and as he made one of the speeches at the graduating exercises of the Boys' High school, we felt that he was a very competent judge of our efforts. All of the contestants deserved great credit. Colonel Martin said that he had been a judge in many contests, but had never attended one before where everybody did so well. Nellie Reynolds and Isadore Sater were the successful contestants and we congratulate them on their victory.

Keeping Central Park Clean

(New York Mail.)

Warning! Don't throw paper or fruit skins on the park lawn if you want to avoid arrest.

Thousands of circulars printed in English, Hebrew and Italian containing this advice will be distributed to visitors to Central parks Sunday. This action is the result of Mayor Gaynor's statement that summary action must be taken to prevent the parks from being made dumping grounds.

Commissioner Stover conferred with Mayor Gaynor and then announced that Central park would be the first in which the mayor's edict would be enforced.

Commissioner Stover will post guns at each of the twenty-two entrances to distribute copies of the warning. Signs will be placed at each entrance containing the same notice. It is thought that a few arrests will set an example and compel observance of the order.

Stover will carry out the same plan in the other boroughs as soon as the Queens and Bronx park commissioners will institute the reform in their boroughs.

The Highest Attainment of Humanity

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

The late Dean Farrar, who made an exhaustive study of the spiritual condition of some of the noblest men of the Roman world, said: "Are there five men in the whole circle of ancient history and ancient literature to whom he could, without a sense of incongruity, accord the title of 'holy'? When we have mentioned Socrates, Epictetus, and Marcus Aurelius, we hardly know of another. It may be doubted if the term "holy" could be applied to the three great heathen named by Dean Farrar. Holiness was a quality unknown to the heathen world of ancient times, and it is not found in the heathen world of modern times. One looks in vain, outside the ancient Hebrew faith and the Christian religion, to find a holy person.

Holiness is the highest attainment of humanity. It has never been attained except through the revelation of the Holy God and by his helpful grace. Indeed, holiness is none too common among them who profess and call themselves Christians. It ought to be a matter of every-day experience among Christian people, and it would be, if men were as zealous for spiritual things as they are covetous of material things. It is the one thing that our Saviour absolutely assures to men who seek it. He does not promise us wealth, or health, or learning if we seek them; but He says, "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." No man in all these Christian centuries has failed to attain to holiness who has hungered and thirsted after it. It has been found by men in all the walks of life. Statesmen like Wilberforce and Francis Horner have lived boldly in political life. Philosophers, like Sir Isaac Newton, have exemplified it while engaged in ancient history and men of war like Chinese Gordon and Stonewall Jackson have practiced it in the field. Merchants and mechanics have illustrated it amid their commonplace toils. The friends of Sir Isaac Newton were accustomed to call him "The whitest soul they had ever known," and this tribute was paid to the holiness of his pious life. He put his personal character above all else and sought holiness with more zeal than he prosecuted even his scientific studies.

For the same manner, Jonathan Edwards attained to great sanctity of life. Here is a resolution which he recorded in his journal: "On the supposition that there never was to be but one individual in the world, at any one time, who was properly a complete Christian, in all respects of a right stamp, having Christianity always shining in its true lustre, and appearing excellent and lovely from whatever part and under whatever character viewed—Resolved to act just as I would do, if I strove with all my might to be that one, who should live in my time." Such a purpose resolutely carried out could not fail of attaining to the highest heights of personal goodness.

It is to be doubted if any other country has produced few men who conceived and executed such a heavenly ambition. America has produced great statesmen, great scholars, great writers, great artists, and multiplied millionaires; but it has produced few saints. American religion is no more than average goodness.—"low middling." We sometimes lament that our new country has no great libraries and art collections which equal those of Europe. We covet, in vain, some of the priceless manuscripts and pictures and statues which are held in European cities. But we could do without all these and suffer no serious loss, if we could only show saints like Fletcher of Madeley and others whose lives glorify the pages of the religious history of Europe.

BISHOP W. A. CANDLER.

Doubtless there have been in our country, many of the most saintly people. Most of them, however, have lived and died in obscurity, and their lives are recorded in "the short and simple annals of the poor." Certainly saintliness has not been very characteristic of American life. Our nation is the richest nation in the world in the mere matter of material goods, but it is poor in the matter of heavenly treasures.

It is rather saddening to believe that saintly men and women are so rarely found in our churches today as they were in the days of the last generation. We have a great number of nervously active Christian workers, running hither and thither, attending conventions, making speeches, arranging programs, and carrying out all sorts of humane schemes. But we have few of whom one could say, as the Scriptures say of Enoch, "he walked with God." It may be doubted if saintliness of character is greatly admired by most of the professedly Christian people of today; they seem to regard it as morbid and Puritanic thing. They talk more of what they call "service" than they do of saintliness. Current piety carries a fidgety and wearied look in its face; it seems to be quite out of breath and exhausted by its own activities; it needs a more healthful glow, more red blood of Spiritual life in its veins. No man's Christian work can ever be greater or better than his personal life. When a man's religious labor outgrows his religious life, it is fatal to both; and it is to be feared that we have many so-called Christian workers among us who have too little faith for the tasks which they have assumed. Their piety is in danger of breaking down, under a sort of nervous prostration, from having put forth more effort than it had life to sustain.

We read, in the Gospels, of how the twelve apostles fell into this perilous condition on one occasion. They returned from a mission upon which the Master had sent them, saying, in evident excitement, "even the devils are subject to us." Jesus saw their spiritual life needed replenishing, and so he said to them, "Notwithstanding that the devils are subject to you, but that your names are written in heaven." Having thus directed their attention to the fact that a Christian's being is more important than his doing. He said to them, "Come ye apart into the desert place and rest awhile." They needed a retreat for a season, in order to avert a decline of spiritual life. In like manner, many modern disciples need to go apart into the desert, in quiet communion with Him, find refreshment for their overworked powers.

It is quite true that the demands for Christian activity are very many and very urgent in our day. In both the Home and Foreign fields much work needs to be done. But it can not be done by men and women whose own spiritual powers have been strained to utter exhaustion. Christian workers can not impart more Christian life than they possess, and if they attempt efforts beyond their own spiritual resources, they will only propagate a low type of piety. The temptation of one who is enfeebled in his own soul is to substitute some humane scheme, or reform program for real spiritual work. Many have succumbed to this subtle temptation and, hence, we see a flimsy and super-serviceable type of Christian workers in our land. They wish to do everything except to lead men and women to Christ. Settlement work, education, and all sorts of sociological devices appeal to them more strngly than does the distinctive mission of the Church—the business of repentance and perfect holiness in the fear of God. It would be a calamity to mankind if the work of Foreign Missions should become limited with this evil spirit. The heathen world needs to be Christianized, not civilized only, or Americanized. It does not need any modern discipline of the heathen nations have philosophic system already. The Confucianism of the Chinese is about as good an ethical system as the Spencerian philosophy of the English. The philosophy, whether ancient or modern, never produced a saint. The heathen world needs holiness, not culture or refinement merely. When the ancient Greeks and Romans were most cultured they were furthest removed from saintliness; and modern heathendom, both in our own and pagan lands, has not been saved from its corruption by worldly culture. If the Christian Churches, engaged in Foreign Mission work, can not make saints in heathen lands, they might as well abandon their missionary enterprises. The heathen, themselves, by natural processes can make anything except a holy man. The production of holiness can only be accomplished by supernatural power, and this is the power required by the Church for its work; it is the power of God unto salvation, not a power unto refinement, or culture, or civilization. If the Church can not promote holiness in men, it will bring to pass all the good; but if it can not, through the gospel, create saints, the coming of anything else is not worth its effort.

If it can not accomplish the object for which our Lord founded it, no other object need engage its exercises. When the Church can not promote holiness in the earth, it should wind up its affairs, and go out of business. But it will not go out of business, therefore let it strive to make saints of sinners. This should be its supreme purpose.

The Glory of the Guillotine

BY SMITH CLAYTON

From Red Blood Rose the Rights of Man
Paris Held the Center of the Stage

SMITH CLAYTON.

War is as old as the world.

War will end with the end of the world.

It matters not who sings peans of peace.

The eagles of war have always plumed their pinions for bloody flight. And always will.

Such is the teaching of history in every age, and that is all that the world has to learn from. And the teaching of history is simply the repeating of history.

TRUE OF ALL HISTORY.

This is true whether the history be sacred or secular. Beginning with the alleged oldest written record, the books of Moses, the sword of Gideon was unsheathed, and it was rarely returned to the scabbard during the period covered by the Pentateuch. There were the Canaanites and the Moabites and the Midianites. There were the ineffable crimes of that bloody warrior, David, and the singular atrocities of a score of devotees of Moloch.

TALK:

There was talk of universal peace even under the theocracy, as there has been under every kingdom, every democracy, every republic, every limited monarchy, every absolute monarchy, every empire which has flourished since.

EVEN NOW.

And as there is even now, when war is brewing from the Orient to the Occident.

Why, according to that lofty authority, John Milton, whom the gentlemen who cry "Peace! peace! but there is no peace," are fond of quoting, there was a war between the devils and angels in the very courts of heaven, Lucifer fell, and he has been very, very bloodily busy in this mundane sphere ever since.

Sydney Smith said that no man discovers a new passion, thereby showing that the human mind was the same in all ages.

NO CHANGE.

Yes, and until there shall come a change in the warlike human mind as now constituted there will be "wars and rumors of wars," and it is absolutely idle to talk of universal peace for this present or indeed to the end of time.

But why war?

Because it is by revolutions of blood and fire that the world advances. As the fabled soldiers sprang from the seed of dragon's teeth, so progress arising from the crimson germ of strife mounts her triumphal car.

THE OBJECT LESSON.

I write today of the most illustrious illustration of modern times, or any times, of the greatest good flowing from the greatest revolutions. From this great revolution was born the babe of the rights of man. If men do not believe that that revolution, and its consequents, multiplied that human liberty ever enjoyed, that it did not only the greatest good to the greatest number, but the greatest good to France and by example to all modern nations, just compare the condition of France today with her condition three ages ago; compare the rights and powers enjoyed by the people of England, of Germany, of Italy, of Spain, of Russia, of South America, of North America, even of Russia, with the lack of liberty suffered by them 125 years ago.

Then, all, at once, came the French revolution, the common people all over the world have been coming into their own. That revolution was the signal for the poor, the peers of the rich and powerful under God, in the enjoyment of earth, air, sunshine and water, every natural right, to beat down the iron edge of privilege.

ANALYSIS.

In its last analysis the French revolution was simply the honest rights of poverty against the dishonest power of privilege.

That was all.

Their only hope of success was in changing existing conditions. These conditions had been wrought about by the first estate, the kings and the nobles, and the second estate, the clergy. These conditions were unbearable.

PANIC IN FRANCE.

Paris, the heart of France, starved just before the revolution and then feasted. The robbery of the common people by the first and second estates through six centuries could not last always.

There must come a day of reckoning.

There was only one way for the people to reckon with the privileged classes. It was to make demands through the states general in which they held a majority. This representative body was subject to the call of the king. Falling in their demands, the only alternative was blood, or more degarding, slavery, deeper, even more damning insults than had yet been heaped upon the families of yeoman by ribald and lustful nobleman.

FIGHT.

It was to fight, or be further enslaved. Who would dare to say that slavery is better than even the bloodiest revolution? And yet there came a time in France when unless existing conditions were attacked there could be no progress for the people at large; were not only attacked but overthrown, today would be to invite deeper enslavement, more glaring infamy.

NOTHING.

Nothing was left but to fight to the last bloody ditch. And that very thing happens at times to individuals as well as nations.

"If you have nature in you, hear it not!" said the ghost of his kingly father to Hamlet. Some things are worse than death, and such, and even a ghost thought that one of them was "to kill a king and marry with his brother!" as the utterly vile Gertrude had done.

YES, SIR!

Yes, sir, hungry men are tigers and the men of Paris got hungry. They went to Versailles and asked for bread. Royalty gave them a stone. That was the limit. Right there Marie Antoinette, the Silly Queen, not only fleered her own death warrant, but that of foolish old Louis XVI. Both showed that they did not know the people. True royalty made some concessions later, but they came too late.

IN THE NAME.

In the name of progress, in the name of liberty, in the name of common justice, nay, in the name of Christ, the Third Estate, the people got very busy.

Who will say that the long downtrodden, the most outrageously unjust were not right in attacking existing conditions? Who will say that they were not right in removing the causes of existing conditions, the obstacles, the Ilon in the path which led to the rights of man?

GETTING ON.

By attacking the whispering gallery we got the telegraph, then the telephone; by attacking the pinekno, the tallow dip, we got the electric light; by attacking the ox cart we got the carriage and later the steam engine and automobile.

ITS HIGHEST.

Progress finds its highest, last, best development in successful onslaught upon existing conditions. And just as wars in Greece made the fierce democracy possible; just as religious wars in Europe made religious liberty possible; just as wars in Rome made Julius Caesar possible, and his conquest of Gaul made France possible.

So the red hand of the people, supplemented by the red mouth of the guillotine, made the rights of man possible, and to-day in Paris, and in France, but throughout the modern world.

OH, NO.

It is not claimed that the national convention did not make mistakes. It is not claimed that the committee of safety did not commit blunders. It is not claimed that even the directory did not steep itself in stupendous errors.

Oh, no; but even Jupiter sometimes nods Shakespeare repeats, and no system under the sun was ever perfect.

AN "IDEA."

But as Victor Hugo grandly said, "The Revolution was an idea!"

Yes, an idea that could not be stopped, but went marching on, sometimes walking straight. Sometimes staggering. Sometimes blundering along but always with an eye single to the goal —the rights of man!

And today in the light of that idea we read the most prosperous and freest nation in the world—France—and it shines over the whole modern world in the advancement along all progressive lines of the nations, the enhancement of the liberties of all people!

YES, ALL!

Yes, the convention, the committee of safety, the directory, all led at length to a republic even if that did pass through an empire which indeed smacked more of Democracy in its salient features, and results than of imperialism.

"I am the state!" declared Louis XIV.

NOT MUCH!

"We are the state! replied a great Frenchman, meaning the people!

The grandiose, grandiloquent, grand old rascal of a man, although claiming to reign by divine might, by his extravagance and luxurious methods bankrupted France.

His policy made the peasantry eat oats, and the terrible unequality of taxes which he imposed and increased paved the way to the revolution through which the national property of the state of which the common people had been robbed was wrestled from the privileged order by the third estate, or middle class and sold at low prices to all of the people, bringing, throughout France hundreds of thousands of acres of land under cultivation which before had produced nothing, thereby opening the avenues of industry to the millions of unemployed on the brink of starvation! HOW DIFFICULT.

Yes, the peasants of Normandy dressed in skins, in Beance, the granary of Paris, the former begged a part of the year—they were obliged to make bread of ferns!

A MAKE-BELIEVE.

When I was child there was a make-believe Bastile was on the site, in which for 1 franc were shown in wax the horrible tortures which the unfortunates suffered before the enormity of the construction of that awful prison on that ever memorable 14th of July, in which even the universal sympathy of large children of Paris nobly assisted the men. It was razed to the ground, and the prisoners freed!

SOME DAY.

Some day I will describe that methods of torture used in that hell, death by slow starvation, death on the wheel, death by the strap and hot water, and so on.

WELL!

Well, as I walked along the Rue Roquette, a narrow street leading to the cemetery of Pere La Chaise, I saw in a grove fronting the Prison of the Condemned, a guillotine. This prison is for those only awaiting the execution of the death sentence. Across the street is a grand building, a home and workhouse for the reclamation of boys without judgment who are taken from the streets.

Many of these homeless waifs are made good and useful men. It is well that the guillotine frowns in the grove across the way.

It no doubt inspires in the bosom of these boys of the city a wholesome respect for law and order. It is a good thing, even if this gloomy instrument of death should enter one boy from the commission of a single crime.

VERY!

It is convenient, too, this guillotine for the safety of the public, in the grandest cemetery of Paris, repose the most famous men of France.

ONE WILL DO.

Many chapters might be written showing the glory of the guillotine—how this keen, red instrument of death was the handmaiden of the idea as it marched to the tune of universal Liberty—but one will suffice.

AN OMEN.

To make this memorable work of the guillotine more interesting, I will introduce it with a contrast which took place on May 30, 1789.

During the rejoicings in honor of the marriage of Louis XVI, one of the events that rendered the Place do la Concorde the grandest public square of Europe, if not the world, was inaugurated by a discharge of fireworks there on the above date, by the people taking a panic in consequence of carrying large fields of the vast throng, and rushing toward the Rue Royal, where the ground had been broken up for building.

Twelve thousand persons were trampled to death and 2,000 seriously injured.

Now, then, knowing something of all this I will have the pleasure in walking from the site of the old Bastile long ago demolished along the Rue Roquette. The Bastile was simply a four-tur retted circular castle which was afterwards turned into a prison.

This was an ominous beginning of reptile life, to be succeeded by the guillotine of royal martial bonds, mind you, to be cut by the people's guillotine.

1793.

For here Louis XVI suffered death January 21, 1793, his head rolling into the basket which stood in the center of the "place" and the statue of the horses of Marley. Here, between the center and the gate of the Tuilleries the fair neck of Marie Antoinette felt the keen blade of the guillotine. This was on October 16, 1793. During the same year Charlotte Corday died for the murder of Marat, July 17, Brissot October 2 and 29 of his colleagues; Philippe Joseph Egolite, duke of Orleans, November 14.

1794.

In that year were guillotined here the Hebratists, the Manatiats and the Orleanists, April 16 the Athelste composed of Chammotte, Anachorris Cloots the wives of Camille Desmaulius of Hebert, etc. May 12, Elizabeth Marie Helene, of France, sister of Louis XVI died here; July 28, Robespierre and his brother, Dumas, St. Just and Conthon, members of the committee of safety; July 22, 70 members of the commune of Paris; July 12, other members.

LISTEN.

Listen: From January 21, 1793, to May 3, 1795, more than 2,800 persons were executed here.

I neglected to say that the heads of Danton, Callille Desmunlins and other Dantonists rolled in the basket here April 8, 1794.

IMPARTIAL.

Of course that distinguished list does not include anything like all the work of the guillotine during the terror.

QUITE.

But it is quite enough to show two things, towit, the most celebrated victims, and the perfect impartiality of the guillotine. Robespierre, Danton, Marat were leaders of the people at first. Marat was killed by Charlotte Cordoy before he had time to change. Robespierre and Danton both changed. That is to say they both tried to check the overturning on IDEA and therefore, they met the same fate as the leading opponents of the revolution.

AFTER ALL.

But after all it has been said it must be said that the work of the French revolution is not yet complete.

It will be said that the glorious work, until the great body of the common people in the world which God has given a perfect equality in the enjoyment of natural rights of earth, air, sunlight and water, until these freemen under God wring from privilege wherever it is found, wherever it robs the last vestige of power unjustly stolen from the people and corruptly withheld from them.

AND ONE OR TWO.

It will take one or two more revolutions like that in France to give the rights of men to those who have a natural right to them.

And he is but a shallow student of history who can not see that what is called "the reign of terror," of which I spoken of by Victor Hugo will include in the line of march some of the Western Hemisphere.

Fertilizers For the Orchard

BY DR ANDREW M. SOULE

Upon the proper fertilization of the orchard will depend in large measure the profit derived by the owner. The day has long since passed when the mere setting of trees on a given area of land constitutes successful orchard practice. The invasion of the trees by various insect and fungous diseases necessitates their careful spraying. The production of a desirable quality of fruit and the insurance of a satisfactory yield mean that the trees must be carefully pruned. Since fruit trees are rather exhausting to the food supply of the soil and an orchard should properly be regarded as a fairly permanent investment, it is quite evident that though trees be set on land usually well supplied with what are regarded as the necessary elements of plant food there comes a day rather early in the history of the orchard when supplemental plant foods must be supplied or the yield will decrease, the quality of the fruit be impaired and even the life and vigor of the tree endangered.

While it is impossible to secure accurate information relative to the amount of plant food removed from an acre of land, it is safe to conclude that the minimum amount of nitrogen removed will as a rule not be less than thirty pounds and may exceed seventy-five pounds; the minimum amount of phosphoric acid seven pounds and may exceed twenty pounds; the minimum amount of potash thirty-three pounds and may exceed seventy-two pounds. It thus appears that while phosphoric acid is essential to the well-being of the fruit tree and its continued productiveness, nitrogen and potash are the two elements which are most likely to be the first exhausted, and which should therefore be supplied in the largest amount.

Since fruit trees have relatively a long period of growth, it is not essential that quickly available forms of plant food be applied in the orchard as with field crops. Therefore, the nitrogen may be derived from quite a variety of sources and probably the organic form should be most largely used. Especially is this true in those sections of the country where the ground is not frozen very deeply during the winter season and where the tree is absolutely dormant but for a comparatively short time. In these sections there is often a desire to fertilize during the late fall or early part of the winter, and certainly the more northern part of the country where ice and snow hold sway for several months organic nitrogen may also be used with advantage as it can be put on relatively early in the spring, but it is possible that in those sections a part of the nitrogen should consist of a rather quickly available form. While the phosphorus may be derived from various materials as bone meals or tankage, the acid phosphate of commerce will furnish this material in a cheap form and may be relied upon as one of the principal sources of this material.

Several grades of potash may be used with advantage in the orchard though high-grade chloride of sulphate when ordinarily be given preference, especially by those who desire a high-grade formula. The sulphate has a good advantage in the orchard also and may often prove the most desirable source of potash.

Formulas for the orchard should run relatively high in plant food, and in spite of the fact that there is rather a heavy draft on the phosphorus supply owing to the fact that many orchard soils are markedly deficient in this element, it will be wise to use a formula containing a rather liberal amount of this element. A basic mixture for orchards on land which have been well protected by leguminous cover crops and are above the average in fertility should contain from 4 to 6 per cent of nitrogen, 8 per cent of phosphoric acid and 10 per cent of potash. As the soil decreases in vegetable matter or where the owner has failed to grow cover crops, the nitrogen supply should increase. Probably 4 per cent would be the maximum, and this only on lands unusually low in plant food and where the tree growth has been stunted. Of course, the oversupply of nitrogen is to be avoided as growth may be stimulated at the expense of fruit. In the absence of a liberal nitrogen supply, however, satisfactory crops of fruit will certainly not be obtained. The phosphorus supply may be increased to 8 per cent on some locations to advantage, and the potash to even 12 per cent, but for average orchards, probably 2 to 3 per cent of nitrogen, 5 to 7 per cent of phosphoric acid and 6 per cent of potash will be found about right.

In applying fertilizers several methods may be followed, but probably the most satisfactory is to plow the land and clean around the trees thoroughly except on sloping locations where the cover crop should be allowed to remain during the growing season. Put from 2 to 5 or more pounds of fertilizer around the tree. If the orchard is young the smaller application will be sufficient; where it has reached middle life the larger application should be used. It has borne exceptionally heavy crops for several years in succession, use as much as 10 pounds of fertilizer. The fertilizer had best be put in a circle around the tree corresponding to the spread of the branches. It should certainly not be placed closer than in a circle with a diameter of three to four feet. The size of the circle will depend a good deal on the age of the trees. This method of applying fertilizer is the most satisfactory with which we are acquainted, and if formulas of the above character are judiciously used on our orchards a larger return of marketable fruit of good color, quality and flavor will be obtained.

HEADED RYE AS FOOD FOR HORSES

A. H. B., Wallace, Ala., writes: Is headed rye good for horses to eat? I have a nice piece that was cut too late for it would not do for feed after it was ripe. Will it do to turn stock on for fall? Nothing I do will keep them off, and would like your advice in the matter.

Rye makes only a fair quality of hay if it is not so desirable as that derived from oats or wheat. The value of rye hay for feeding to horses depends considerably on when it is cut and how it is cured. It should cut in the early dough stage in order to make it palatable and to insure its containing the highest per cent of nutrients allowed to become hard and weedy and fairly well ripened before cutting its feeding value is lessened as well as its palatability. Where rye is cut too late it should be bound in sheaves and kept as free from dust as possible. It is very desirable to handle it whenever this can be accomplished so it will cure without rain falling on it.

The best way to keep ticksoff the mare about which you write is with the use of a curry comb. If she is thoroughly curried and rubbed every morning as she should be in order to keep the coat free from dirt and trash and stimulate the circulation of the blood, the ticks can be held in check without serious difficulty. A little greasing of the limbs will be helpful. For this purpose any of the tickicides may be used or crude cottonseed oil.

A FREE MILKER.

J. C. L., Ozark, Ala., writes: I would like to know what to do for my cow to make her hold her milk. She is free out. Is there any remedy for this trouble?

In cases such as you refer to very little can be done. The chances are that the sphincter muscle which surrounds the bottom of the teat and prevents leaking under normal conditions has become relaxed from some cause. Frequent milking is about all that can be suggested in a case of this character. If the cow is an exceptionally good animal you can probably afford to keep her unless the leakage is very great, but ordinarily it would be good practice to dispose of her as the trouble is one which is liable to become more and more aggravated and can not be treated satisfactorily for the reason assigned.

BLIGHT OR WILT IN CORN.

T. G. H., Bonifay, Fla., writes: I have a neighbor that has a field of corn that has blight or something. The leaves turn streaked and dry up, and the pith of the stalks turn black. The black color starts at the root and runs up the stalk. This land has been in corn for several years and has produced fine crops. 600 pounds of 10-2-2 fertilizer was used. Will you please tell me what is the cause of this trouble and what to do for it.

We judge from the description in your letter that the corn referred to has been attacked by what is known as blight or wilt disease. This is a bacterial disease of corn most commonly met with in sweet corn. The exterior and interior symptoms of the disease are very similar to those described in your letter, and this leads us to believe that there can hardly be a mistake in identification. A remedy for this trouble has never been discovered as yet. There is a good difference in the matter of susceptibility on the part of different varieties of corn, and, therefore, attention should be given to the selection of plants which seem to resist this trouble most completely. If your neighbor finds a number of plants growing in his corn field not attacked by the disease he should save grain therefrom for seed. Of course, crop rotation should be practiced as a precautionary measure and seed grain produced from an uninfested region should be employed. These are about the only suggestions which can be made that are likely to be of service under the circumstances.

FERTILIZING SPANISH PEANUTS.

V. C. Jackson, Ga., writes: I would like to be informed in regard to the fertilization of Spanish peanuts.

The best fertilizer to use on Spanish peanuts will be determined largely by the soil type on which they are to be planted. On soils containing some clay a 9-1-2 goods should give good results. For sandy soils a 10-2-10 may often be used to advantage. All leguminous crops should be liberally supplied with phosphorous and potash, a little nitrogen is desirable to promote an early and vigorous growth. We think the above formulas should be used at the rate of 600 pounds and upward. O ften 800 to 1,000 pounds of fertilizers can be used on land intended for peanuts. It is also desirable that lime be used on land intended for peanuts. A good application will be 1,000 pounds per acre of crushed raw rock scattered over the land after it has been prepared for planting and worked in with a harrow. Several days should elapse between the application of lime and fertilizer.

MANAGING SUCKERS ON CORN.

M. D. K., Ennis, Ga., writes: I have about three acres of corn that has suckered very badly. Will it pay me to take them off?

The tendency of prolific corn is to sucker and this characteristic is more marked where relatively wide planting is followed with this crop. On some varieties of corn and under certain conditions it is probably advisable to pull off the suckers. With prolific corns we doubt the wisdom of this practice, especially where the plants are reasonably close in the drill row; that is, from eight to fifteen inches apart, depending upon the richness of the land. Of course the desirability of removing suckers will be influenced by the fertilizer used. Ordinarily prolific corn should be planted in rows from 4 to 4 1-2 feet apart, according to the crop producing power of the land. Corn makes a relatively heavy draft on the soil and therefore should be fertilized quite liberally, for in securing large yields relatively thick planting is essential.

We have found in our experience and studies of corn here at the college that many of the prolific sorts produce fairly good ears and the yield has been largest in those instances where the suckers were not removed.

FEEDING VALUE OF SWEET POTATOES.

C. W. W., Homeland, Ga., writes: I bedded out 10,000 bushels of sweet potatoes last spring. Early in the weather very few sprouted. Could they be converted into cattle feed, or is there a process for making starch? Please tell me them that is simple and not too expensive?

Now that rains have fallen the chances are that your sweet potatoes will sprout quickly and you can secure enough plants therefrom to pay you fairly well. In our own experience we have frequently planted sweet potatoes as late as July 15 with most excellent results as to yield and quality. We are inclined to think that there will be a better demand for potato slips than you think as the drought throughout the state has been quite general. If you do not think it well to leave them for this purpose, however, we would suggest that you feed them to hogs. They are only fairly satisfactory for cattle at best, but hogs will eat them with relish and to good advantage. The chances are that if they have stayed in the ground for the length of time indicated that they have swelled slightly, and probably enough chemical change has taken place on this account to make the potatoes undesirable for human consumption. We judge, however, you would find it profitable to attempt to make such a small quantity, relatively speaking, into denatured alcohol.

TANKAGE AS A SOURCE OF NITROGEN.

O. R. S., Rockmart, Ga., writes: I bought six tons of tankage from a wreck at a low price. I see that good tankage runs about 11 to 12 per cent of nitrogen and would like to know what that I bought analyzes. I have been buying cotton seed meal, acid and potash and mixing for years. How much of this tankage should I put in with a 13-4 acid and potash to make a good guano? Will tankage lose any of the nitrogen if properly stored? Would like to know what the market value of this tankage is?

The value of a sample of tankage can only be determined by analysis. This material varies widely in composition according to the conditions under which it is manufactured. Concentrated tankage contains from 11 to 12 per cent of nitrogen and 1 to 2 per cent of phosphoric acid. Ordinary tankage probably contains from 5 to 6 per cent of nitrogen and 6 to 15 per cent of phosphoric acid. The only way you could accurately arrive at the composition of your tankage would be to send a sample to the state chemist, in Atlanta, and have him analyze the same for you. The law requires that all examination of fertilizers be made under his direction. Unless the tankage is sold under a guarantee that it is concentrated, we are inclined to think that it probably runs considerably lower in nitrogen than you have suggested. Of course, tankage is a good carrier of nitrogen and it will become quite available as it decays in contact with seed meal. A combination of acid, tankage and potash should certainly make a good formula for many of your farm crops. You will find it difficult to mix tankage and 10-4 acid together and make a satisfactory formula. Some of the tankage is likely to contain a considerable percentage of phosphoric acid as well, and so you will see that a mixture of this two would tend to overbalance this element. We think it would probably be better for you to mix say 200 to 300 pounds of the acid and potash with the same amount of tankage and use at at this rate per acre, putting say 300 pounds under the drill row and using 200 pounds as a side application. Tankage, like any other fertilizer, is best used as soon as convenient. Though if it is properly preserved it will not suffer as great loss as some other materials. It is impossible to say what the market value of this tankage might be without the exact analysis. You can figure the available phosphoric acid at about four cents a pound.

A Traveling Salesman at 83

James Balch, who died in his ninetieth year, seems to have been the unquestioned dean of commercial travelers. Until he was 83 he was still "on the road" visiting the south of Maryland, and it is related of him that on the last day in business he traveled in ten trains. Mr. Balch was a lifelong Congregationalist, and always arranged his journeys so as to be able to attend divine service in London on Sunday.

LOVE VS. THRONES

Is a Royal Seat Depreciating in Value? How Heirs of the Greatest Houses of Europe Are Choosing Matrimonial Happiness Rather Than Power and a Kingdom.

MANY years ago members of royalty were considered to be better and apart from common mortals, and it was considered a crime for a prince or princess to marry beneath his or her social rank. But in spite of these sharp barriers there have been many in the last few years who have renounced their titles and all claim to thrones to marry for love instead of for rank and wealth.

One of the most recent of these love matches was that of the Archduke Charles Francis Joseph of Austria and the Princess Zita of Bourbon Parma. When their engagement was announced there was almost as much comment as if the young archduke had fallen in love with a girl of low rank and was going to follow in the line of uncles and cousins and beg the Emperor Francis Joseph for a morganatic marriage.

There could be no objection on these grounds, for the Princess Zita of Bourbon Parma is of noble blood. She belongs to a branch of the Spanish Bourbon dynasty that intermarried with the Hapsburgs in the eighteenth century and acquired the Italian duchy of Parma. She shows her Spanish blood in her rich olive complexion and jet black hair and eyes. She is much above average height and has a svelt and graceful carriage. Her features are beautifully cut and her well shaped head is perfectly molded on her slender drooping shoulders.

* *

Insanity in Archduke's Family.

Her husband, the young archduke, is the son of the Archduke Otto, who died five years ago. Otto was the son of the old Emperor Francis Joseph's brother, Archduke Charles Louis, who was declared mentally irresponsible by the Vienna courts. The men of science said plainly that their marriage should not take place because of insanity that existed on both sides.

At first the emperor forbade this marriage, but the young archduke answered that he would give up his social position, wealth and everything, but he would have the woman he loved. The emperor soon realized that there was no use in objecting, and so he finally gave his consent. They were married some weeks after at the Castle Schwarzau, the home of the Bourbon Parmas in Austria.

Archduchess Isabella of Austria added her name to the long list of Hapsburgers who have favored love matches.

She is the 24 year old daughter of the Archduke Frederick, Duke of Teschen, and is one of the most beautiful and popular princesses in Europe. At one time there was a rumor to the effect that the emperor of Germany had negotiated a marriage with one of his younger sons and her through Francis Joseph of Austria. If he did the emperors were given no for an answer, for she has been in love for several years with Prince George, the favorite grandson of the prince regent of Bavaria and of the emperor of Austria. He has been so popular at the Austrian court that they had little trouble in getting the consent of Franz Joseph.

* *

Both Fond of Outdoor Sports.

They are a handsome couple, for they are both tall and blonde. Archduchess Isabella is almost as tall as her strong and athletic looking husband. They have many tastes in common, both taking little interest in court life and the conventionalities that are a part of every court. They are fond of horseback riding, skating, and all kinds of outdoor sports. The princess was recently asked by an intimate friend if she did not regret giving up her rank and claim to the Austrian and Hungarian succession.

"No. Why should I?" she said. "I should rather have George and his affection than all the titles Europe could offer me. He was my first and last choice. One of the privileges and perhaps the greatest of a princess is that she can tell the man she loves that he is her choice, while other girls have to let them find it out in more subtle and obscure ways.

"George is such a splendid and manly young fellow that my uncle, Franz Joseph, likes him almost as well as I do. The only reason I had to make the renunciation I did is because it is the law of the country that when a princess of royal blood marries below her station, as it is commonly called, she must give up her title and all claim to the throne."

Princess Zita of Parma.

* *

Renunciation Before Marriage.

This act of renunciation was made the day before the marriage in the presence of the entire court of Vienna. It was sworn to in the presence of the emperor, the royal family, and the greatest dignitaries of two realms.

One of Prince George's own sisters eloped and made a morganatic marriage with a young infantry officer, Baron Seefried. The family was incensed because of the marriage and because he was a Lutheran and refused to accept her religion. But the young girl refused to give him up even after he had been discharged from the army. They went to Austria, and the young girl begged her uncle to intercede for her. Her love and devotion moved the old emperor, who made her husband an officer in one of the Austrian regiments and gave her a liberal allowance.

But there have been a dozen or more cases in the Hapsburg family, where the men and women both have willingly given up titles and fortunes to make love matches. The emperor's youngest daughter, Valerie, is one of the princesses who would only marry the man she loved. Up to the time of her marriage she and her father were inseparable companions. All went well until one day she met Archduke Francis Salvator, a distant relative of the emperor. She at once fell desperately in love with him. She refused to listen to her father's arguments, and within a year's time was married to the archduke, renouncing her rank and rights as the daughter of the reigning house of Austria for the man she loved.

* *

Elizabeth Proposes an Elopement.

Even more romantic was the courtship of the emperor's granddaughter, Elizabeth, who fell in love with Prince Otto. This prince has large estates and a long genealogical tree, but unfortunately comes from one of the minor branches. They managed to meet at balls and at hunts, and in a short time the courtship was under way. Elizabeth was so deeply in love with her young suitor and fearing that she would not be able to get her grandfather's consent, she suggested that they elope. But her young knight insisted on winning his lady love by fairer means.

Finally the girl confessed to her royal grandfather and she pleaded her case so well that he only demanded that they wait six months' time, so she could see if she had not made a mistake in her choice. At the end of the probationary period she said that their love was stronger than ever, and so they were married. It was not, strictly speaking, a morganatic marriage, for she is still received at court, and was given a large sum of money as a wedding portion, besides a yearly income.

When the old emperor dies it is likely that his nephew, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, will come to the throne, but his wife, Countess Sophie Chotek, will not share the title of empress.

* *

Countess of Lower Rank.

The countess comes of a noble house, but not of equal rank with that of her husband. It was quite by accident that somebody at court picked up a locket she wore, and found in it the picture of the archduke. It was taken to the emperor, who sent for his nephew and asked for an explanation, which he got in the words that the archduke was going to marry for love and not for position. The emperor finally consented with these words:

"Animated by a desire to do my best for the members of my house, and in order to give my nephew a special mark of my love and favor, I have given my consent to his marriage with Countess Sophie Chotek, who comes of a noble house, but not one which, according to the statutes of our dynasty, can be considered of equal birth. As only wives of equal birth can be considered as members of our house, this marriage must be a morganatic union, and any children which by the blessing of God are born in this royal wedlock can not share the rights of this house. My nephew will therefore take an oath which will make this certain forever and forever. He will acknowledge that this marriage is a morganatic union and that the children will not possess the rights of members of our family."

Later the court raised her to the rank of duchess. She is popular, and some say she will be made queen of Hungary.

* *

Romance of John Orth.

The most romantic and strangest of all these Austrian courtships was that of John Orth, who was the Archduke John Salvator of Tuscany, and one of the emperor's nephews. He fell in love with a pretty actress, Minnie Stubel. The girl accepted his attentions and with her family met him at picnics and the theater without ever dreaming who he really was. It was on the parade grounds one day, when he was in charge of his regiment, that she found out the identity of her lover. She fainted at the news, confident that he had been trifling with her affections. He assured her that he was as much in earnest as an archduke as he had been as John Orth.

He attempted for two years to get the emperor's consent to their marriage, but when he saw that the emperor was as stubborn as in the beginning Orth renounced all claims to the throne, sold his valuable estates, was married in London, and sailed for South America on a yacht he had purchased. It is supposed that the yacht was lost in a storm, but there have been rumors from time to time of discovery of him and his wife.

Princess Stephanie's first marriage with Rudolph, one of the emperor's sons, was unhappy. They were about to be separated when Francis Joseph entered the apartments one day, and, putting his son's hand in that of the wife, brought about a reconciliation. But it did not last long, and a short time afterwards the dead bodies of Rudolph and his sweetheart, Maria Vetsera, were found in a château near Vienna. A few years later Princess Stephanie, at a dinner in London, announced her engagement to Count Elemer Lonyay, an attaché to the embassy and a Hungarian nobleman.

* *

Love Matches in Other Families.

But there have been many of these love matches outside of the Hapsburg family. Two of the most romantic of these have come from the Spanish royal family. One was that of Princess Elvira and the other that of Princess Isabella. Princess Elvira was the daughter of Don Carlos, Duke of Madrid. While still young Elvira became acquainted and fell in love with Tolchi, a Roman artist. Unable to get her father's consent, she eloped. But she made her father forgive her with the argument that Princesses Isabella and Josephine, grandaunts of the king of Spain, had done the same thing and were happy.

Princess Isabella settled her courtship even more abruptly. She was living with her parents at Enghien, near Paris. Here she met and fell in love with Count Gurowski, a Polish count. She begged her parents to consent to her marriage and when she saw that the task was hopeless she took the affair into her own hands. She set the hour for their elopement and left the house by means of a rope ladder. There was a carriage waiting for them in the gardens which took them to Havre, where they set sail for America. But less than a year's time showed that Cupid had mated them unwisely, and they were separated some months before the count died.

A charming romance was that of Oscar Carl Auguste, Prince Bernadotte and former Duke of Gothland. At court he fell in love with Miss Munk, who was lady in waiting to the Swedish crown princess. Prince Oscar won the consent of his family with the understanding that he give up all claim to the throne. This he willingly did. They have a happy home life, with their five sons and daughters, who are recognized as counts and countesses.

* *

Marriage of Sybilla Happy.

One of the happiest of these love matches is that of Princess Sybilla of Hesse-Cassel, who was married a few years ago to Herr von Finke. She is a remarkably beautiful girl and has a large fortune in her own name. It was a real love match, for her husband has only moderate means and has the small title of "Von." She was courted by many men of wealth and rank before she accepted this man of common birth and small means for her husband.

Princess Hohenberg.

Princess Henrietta of Schleswig Holstein is another of the princesses who believe that love is worth more than crown and title. She had been used to such pretentious surroundings and gayeties of court life that the people could hardly believe that she was in earnest when she said that she was going to renounce all this for the man she loved. But she did, and her happy life at Kiel proves that she made no mistake in her choice.

One of the strangest and the saddest of all these romances is that of Louisa of Tuscany, the ex-Princess of Saxony, who sought love from her husband and his family. When they refused to give it to her she won the protection of the tutor in her family, which aroused such talk and scandal that she was separated from her children and driven out of Saxony.

Whatever may be said against her imprudent ways there are few women who sacrificed more for love than she did.

* *

Offer of Prince Ferdinand Refused.

Several royal suitors sought Louisa's hand, one of them a cousin, Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, but she refused him.

She found her prince charming in the Prince Frederick August, now the king of Saxony. The Saxon court gave their prince permission with the understanding that she make the act of renunciation, not to claim any right to the throne. This renunciation was made in the throne room at the palace in Vienna.

Their first years of married life were happy except for the interference of her parents-in-law and intriguing ministers. Even when her husband was made king several of the ministers, especially George von Metzch, plotted against her so cruelly that she was forced to get the counsel of her children's tutor, and finally fled with her brother to Switzerland.

This led to the renunciation of her position as crown princess and all future claim to her title. She turned to her parents for comfort and protection, but they did not give her either. She finally tried to find solace in a love match made with an Italian, Sig. Toselli. She says: "With that curious mania for self-effacement which sometimes seizes the Hapsburgs, I chose to marry a man who boasted no pride of ancestry and possesses no worldly wealth."

THE FOURTH "JOHN AMES-ROVER" STORY

A FLYER IN AUGERS

By George Randolph Chester

WHO is that young lady?" John Ames asked, "the one with the greyhound," and both his tone and his eyes had lost their bored expression.

"She's a live producer," the captain of the "hell-hops" enthusiastically stated. "She comes into the hotel every Wednesday afternoon for tea and she tips like the rest of the family. Her brother's the cleanest sport in town."

"Who is she?" the black-haired John Ames repeated with a smile.

The young lady was extremely tall, and slenderly graceful, and the delicately built greyhound, which kept its tapering nose an even six inches behind her right glove, was merely a part of her exquisite grey costume.

"It's Miss Greenwood," replied the mop-headed captain. "Say, she's the swellest looker that comes into the Tyler avenue hotel. Her old man used to bring her here when she was just a little kid, but he's dead. He was a good sport, too."

"Are the Greenwoods in business?" and Ames watched the attractive girl until she was lost in the maze of fashionable shoppers.

"I should say so some!" bragged the captain, who was intense in his local patriotism. "Greenwood Square Hole Auger company; half a million dollars. How do you like the town?"

"A little better," acknowledged Ames. "I think I shall stay a while."

CHAPTER II.

HAVE you any square-hole augers?" asked Ames, in the leading hardware store.

"Greenwood or Diggins?" asked the languid clerk in return.

"Which is the better?" Ames interestedly inquired.

"Not much difference," said the clerk, examining a fingernail. "Diggins' is a dollar cheaper, but it's lighter weight."

"I see," mused Ames. "Competitive proposition, eh? The Greenwood is manufactured here, I believe."

"Both," and the clerk looked wearily out of the window. "Would you like to look at them?"

"No, I think I'll take one of each," decided Ames. "You may send them around to the Tyler Avenue hotel," and he reached for his pocketbook. He pondered a moment. "Which is the larger concern?"

"Diggins," replied the clerk, yawning, as he prepared to make out a sales slip.

Ames sat up with his two square-hole augers until 4 o'clock in the morning, and when he arose, he hunted up a patent lawyer.

CHAPTER III.

CAN'T take on anything morefi just now," promptly decided President Diggins, of the Diggins Mortising Auger company, though he nevertheless cast another interested glance at the sketches Ames had made for him.

"There's nothing aida, in competition, like the addition of up-to-date devices," pleasantly urged Ames, who, however, seemed more interested in the study of Diggins than in selling his invention.

Diggins, who was a bony-faced man of forty-five, considered the argument gravely, as he did all gravely advanced suggestions.

"I'll admit that a machine like this, if it were practical, would be a good advertisement; but what we need is a dividend producer," he said, though he said it lightly, the keen-eyed Ames noted that a faint trace of concern flitted across his brow.

"That's what I consider this," argued Ames, taking a speculative survey of the office. It was severely furnished, and bore the marks of good business system and concentration. "A motor attachment for large boring would solve, what is now a difficult problem in every wooden construction. A feed wire can be cut in by the electric light company, within never over half a block from any important work."

Diggins shook his head.

"It's tempting," he admitted, "but this company is concentrated on the manufacture of ordinary square-hole augers. In fact," and he smiled, "we'd like to manufacture them all."

"Competition very keen?" suggested Ames, now covertly intent on Diggins' hard lips. He saw the lips compress.

"Pretty fierce," the man acckowledged, with vexation on his brow. "To tell the truth, there'll never be big money in the business for anyone, as long as there's two of us."

Ames reached for one of his pencil sketches, and elaborated a detail.

"Young Greenwood's new in the business, isn't he?" he observed.

"Father took him out of college, three years ago, and died shortly afterwards." Diggins replied, again with that vexation on his brow. "By George, that young fellow holds on desperately!" added Diggins determinedly.

Ames smiled as he sketched.

"He might hold on indefinitely," he stated. "Sometimes these young fellows do."

"Oftener they don't," snapped Diggins. "Young Greenwood has qualities that are bound to make the auger business artistic. The old man had kid glove methods, but the young fellow's individually extravagant; fancy labels, and embossed stationery, and such things. Why, he even has a pigskin waste basket with a gold monogram in his office. A fellow with such ideas can't be a practical business manager."

Ames laughed.

"My fancy motor auger might appeal to him," he speculated.

"Not at the price you wanted to hold me up for," chuckled Diggins. "The Greenwood company will never pay royalty and a ten thousand dollar bonus on an untried device, for which you haven't even a patent."

"The application I filed yesterday protects it," returned Ames easily. "I think I'll see him."

"Do!" urged Diggins. "Good Lord, I hope he takes it, and ties up some money in it. I might get him quicker."

CHAPTER IV.

JOHN Ames smiled as he recognized the notorious pig-skin waste basket with the gold monogram; and he smiled, to, as he inspected the immaculately groomed young Richard Greenwood, who wore a gardenia, and had a gold-mounted desk set in front of him.

"I have an improvement in square-hole boring machinery which I should like to try out," began Ames, approaching Margaret Greenwood's brother with a far different proposition from the exaggerated one he had presented to Diggins.

"Sit down," invited young Greenwood, whose manners were pleasant and whose speech was suave. Also, he had an eager eye, which Ames rather liked.

"It's a motor auger," explained Ames lightly, laying down his sketches.

Young Greenwood looked over the drawings with quick comprehension, then he passed them back.

"It might be a thoroughly practical device, though it would have a restricted sale, as compared with our regular product," he commented. "However, the Greenwood company is not now in a position to take it up."

"I don't ask you to," responded Ames. "First of all, I'm curious to satisfy myself with its possibilities. All I would propose, just now, would be to experiment, in some out of the way corner of your shop, until I can prove the thing to be mechanically feasible. Then, if you like it, we can talk business."

Young Greenwood pondered the matter carefully, meanwhile inspecting the polished Ames with a growing cordiality.

"I think we might be able to arrange that," he decided.

CHAPTER V.

LOOKS like a failure, Rick," said Ames, as they lunched in the busy grill room of the Tyler avenue hotel. "I've worked three weeks with the blooming thing, and I can't seem to simplify it."

"I wouldn't give it up, John," urged young Greenwood. "I'd feel lonesome to see your corner unoccupied."

"Hello, Ames!" hailed a solid looking grey-haired man, with stern eyebrows, and a crisp mouth. "How are you, Greenwood?"

"How d'do, Cuspard," returned both Ames and Greenwood.

"Nice chap," commented Ames. "You don't buy your tool steel from him."

"I don't believe in feeding the enemy," laughed Greenwood.

"He's the biggest gun in the tool steel game, isn't he?"

"By all odds," replied Rick Greenwood. "He's worth about three millions. Hello, Walter!"

"Hello, boys!" greeted a thin man with a network of wrinkles between his eyes. He stopped on his way to his table, and shook hands heartily with Ames. "Great billiards you played with Tullingham last night. Glad to see you beat Hal. He's too cocky about his three cushion game."

"Nice bunch of fellows on Diggins' board of directors," observed Greenwood, when Henderson had passed on. "Cuspard and Walter and Tullingham are all men with heavy interests who can still enjoy life."

"Yes," agreed Ames with a smile, and hesitated for a moment. "I've formed a very agreeable acquaintanceship here, Rick. I chum with eight fine fellows, besides yourself, and they're all on Diggins' board of directors."

Greenwood looked at him with startled speculation.

"That's curious," he said, reflecting that Ames had been given access to the Greenwood factory for three weeks; and he remembered now that Ames had asked many specific questions about the business.

"Yes," again admitted Ames. "I've been learning all I can about the square-hole auger industry."

Again Greenwood studied him critically.

"I didn't know you were interested," he observed.

"I'm interested in all business problems," Ames told him. It worries me to see a big commercial waste. Square-hole augers are a necessity. There's a constant sale for them, and nobody makes any money. That's wrong."

"By George, I don't make the condition," said Greenwood earnestly. "When my father died, we were making money; but the moment I took hold of the business, Diggins began to cut prices."

"Naturally," watched Ames. "He wanted the field to himself."

"He can't have it!" declared Greenwood sharply. "I met his reductions down to our present figure, and then I quit. Diggins cheapened his product a trifle, and went still lower; but I wouldn't do it."

"Good boy," approved Ames. "He's probably taken a lot of business from you."

"We've about held our own," asserted Greenwood, with little knots of muscles working in his jaw. "My father made the first square-hole auger, and I'll keep that business going with the same standard of quality the governor maintained, if we only turn out one auger a year; and I'll discount every bill as the governor always did."

Ames broke bread.

"You'll win," he prophesied. "Diggins is spending a barrel of money in advertising, and his agents are known as liberal entertainers. Rick, how much will you give me for ridding you of the Diggins Mortising Auger company?"

"Where do you keep it?" laughed Greenwood. "Frankly, John, even if your offer were in earnest, I'd be embarrassed. I haven't drawn but one-fourth of my salary during the past year."

"If you had control of the Diggins company, I guess you could raise a few thousands, couldn't you" smiled Ames. much as if he were still joking.

"Come on to dinner tonight and talk it over," invited Greenwood, laughing. "I have a mighty pretty sister I want you to meet."

"I accept with pleasure," replied John Ames, who for three weeks, had awaited this invitation!

CHAPTER VI.

YES, she was pretty, John Ames admitted, as the stately Margaret swept across to him. She was more than pretty; she was stunningly beautiful, and her large black eyes looked back into his own with a frank liking which was good.

"You are most welcome," she said in a low, well modulated voice, of peculiar richness, and she extended a long, tapering hand.

John Ames felt the warmth of that hand as it approached his own, and yet, as he took it, he was conscious of the lack of something indefinable. The clasp was hearty, it was sincere, it was feminine; but he was puzzled.

"I know you well through one of your most devoted admirers," he told her.

"Rick," she guessed, laughing, and her laugh had even more of that fascinating timbre which had been apparent in her greeting. "e bHores everybody in that way. He needs a girl of his own."

"You've spoiled me, Sis," Rick returned, patting her affectionately on the shoulder; and Ames noticed that she was taller than her brother.

Mrs. Greenwood entered, a merry looking woman, who seemed as if her life had been cast in pleasant places. She elevated her brows, just a trace, as she saw John Ames, and when she had greeted him, and had finished with the usual cheerful conventionalities, and the guest had gone over to the piano with Margaret, she turned to her son with sparkling enthusiasm.

"Where did you get him?" she demanded.

"Don't know him from Adam. Mum*my," Rick shamelessly confessed. "He's* never mentioned his private affairs to me, but I've been around him long enough to know that he's all right."

"Indeed he is," promptly agreed Mrs. Greenwood. "He's the handsomest thing I ever saw outside of the family. Aren't they a stunning couple, Rick?"

"At it again," teased her son. "You're always picking the scenery for Margaret."

"Well, she's so beautiful herself, that she should have a handsome man," worried Mrs. Greenwood; "and she's always going around with some homely fellow."

"That isn't fair, mother," protested Rick. "Margaret's bunch do run small to the dozen, come to think of it, but they're a corking nice lot of fellows."

"She wouldn't have them if they weren't," instantly defended Mrs. Greenwood. "Don't you know anything about him?" she eagerly whispered, and she gazed appreciatively at John Ames again.

Rick laughed so heartily that the pair at the piano glanced over, and smiled brightly.

They were discussing music most volubly over there, and Margaret had lightly run over two or three passages from memory, to show the similarity between a composition of Chopin's and one of Paderewski's.

"The similarity is there," granted Ames, "but it can't be called plagiarism, for both had their source in Bach. If you have Bach here, I think I can find the original."

She moved lightly to the well-stacked shelves, and, with eager interest brought him the volume of Bach. He found the passage, and played it for her, with a touch which had in it a surprising sureness.

"Now I'll show off," he laughed, and, taking the theme, he improvised upon it, weaving into a fantasie which fell just short of being brilliant.

"That's glorious!" she exclaimed, with a sparkle of admiration in her big eyes and in her voice.

He glanced at her quickly. That peculiar vibration in her voice had thrilled him. She caught his look, but there was no change in her.

"Of course you couldn't play it again that way," she regretted.

"I'm afraid not," he smiled, yielding the seat to her. "I know you sing."

"Simple little melodies," she admitted.

Sing him that Pretten Lassen thing, Sis," called Rick from across the room. "It's 'Mit Dein Blauen Augen'," she laughed, as she searched for it. "Will you never tire of it, Rick?"

"Not so long as I'm fond of blondes," he grinned.

She found the music and sang, simply, expressively, but with that wonderful timbre which had so held him since her first word. He stood at the corner of the piano looking down at her. She was the very embodiment of fascination, and he felt strangely attracted. Her lips were full and red, her white skin had a rich, warm undertone, and every line of her was of serious grace.

Was there a certain coldness about her? There was fire in the depths of her eyes, there was warmth in her lips, there was throbbing life in her voice; and yet, when dinner was called and he took her hand to assist her from the piano, he was puzzled again.

All through dinner he was conscious of every movement of her, every word, every glance; for John Ames had looked into many beautiful eyes—and he was still a wanderer.

She was an entertaining companion, a clever talker and a flattering listener; and they liked each other.

"Well, Rick, let's get down to business," suggested Ames, as the two young men walked into the library after dinner. "How about that $35,000?"

Young Greenwood's brow lost its boyish smoothness.

"What particular $25,000 do you mean?" he inquired, in the tone of one who has learned to regard that amount of money respectfully.

"The $25,000 for ridding you of the competition of the Diggins Mortising company."

"You do that and I'll hand you the money so quick it'll scare you," promised Rick, laughing.

"Suppose you put that offer in writing," proposed Ames quietly.

"I believe you are in earnest!" declared Greenwood surprised.

"Of course I am," answered Ames. "That's what you need, and we'll have it for you."

"Thanks," mocked Greenwood, returning to his opinion that the whole thing was a joke. "Just how will you bring this miracle about?"

"That would be telling," smiled Ames. "Will you write me that offer?"

"I think I'll have to humor you," laughed Rick, and, going to his desk wrote the letter.

When they returned to the music room, Ned Cross was there, a little light-complexioned fellow with a great fund of laughing fcolic with a great fund of chatting most gaily with him. Ames, who had found himself agreeably assorted to do with her again, watched her with pleasure and unmixed with envy. No, she was not cold.

"Are you at it may," he laughed, thrilled, as he looked into her eyes.

When Ames left that night, Margaret and he had become the best of friends.

"You'll come again," she cordially invited him.

He heard her voice; and yet, when they shook hands in parting—well, he was puzzled.

CHAPTER VII.

FROM that report, I conclude that we are to again pass our dividends!" snapped J. E. Cuspard, his irongray eyebrows bristling.

"It is still necessary," acknowledged President Diggins, looking resentfully at his board of directors. They seemed particularly unpleasant this afternoon.

"It has been necessary for nearly three years!" objected Walter Henderson, the thin director with the multiplicity of wrinkles between his eyes.

Diggins' hard-boned face became harder.

"As I have so often explained, we have been competition," he declared, again resentful. "Until that is eliminated, we can scarcely show a profit."

"At present we show a deficit!" gruffly criticised big Hal Tullingham, who was an extensive coal operator, and was impatient of any moribund proposition.

"You can't conduct a campaign of this sort without heavy expense, and some loss," argued Diggins. "We've gradually monopolized the market, and, when we have finally shut out competition, we shall be able to pay fancy dividends."

"I don't believe it," snapped Cuspard, rising, and jamming his hands in his trouser pockets. "Diggins, you started after young Greenwood's scalp two and a half year's ago, and you've been promising us, every three months, that you'd have him out of the way by the next quarterly meeting. He's still making augers!"

"He's operating at a loss," retorted Diggins. "The end has to come some time, and we can stand the strain better than he. We have more capital."

"Is it?" wheezed the asthmatic old president of the First National bank. "We have double his capitalization, but we haven't any more cash! In my opinion we have least We're in debt!"

"So is Greenwood!" growled Diggins.

"How do you know?" demanded Cuspard.

"It's impossible for him not to be," argued Diggins. "He's a wasteful young fellow, who spends money on such a fool office embellishments as pig-skin waste baskets with gold monograms!"

"Oh, hell!" he said.

"I've gone just far enough with this thing," Diggins announced Cuspard angrily, and Diggins felt a chill wave in the room; for Cusnard was the principal stockholder. "I've held so long that this fool college kid was tottering that I'm going to find out about it! I move this meeting adjourn for one hour!"

"Second the motion!" wheezed the president of the First National.

CHAPTER VIII.

NOW, Ames, I'll take that share of stock," agreed Cuspard, popping into the lobby of the Tyler Avenue Hotel. "Here's , ur hundred dollars."

"It's already assigned," replied Ames, producing the document in question. "I knew you'd be back after it."

Cuspard glanced hastily at the certificate and stowed it in his pocket.

"Come on," he said, and he led the way to his automobile. "Look here, Ames," he demanded, as they whirled down the street; "what's your interest in this?"

"Three-fold," explained Ames pleasantly, and with no hesitation. "First, I have an aversion, which amounts to a passion, to wasted business opportunities; second, I have developed a sincere admiration for Rick Greenwood; third, I'm to get $25,000 if the competition is removed from the square-hole auger business."

For the first time that day J. E. Cuspard laughed.

"That's rich," he admitted. "The boys will enjoy that when I tell them."

Young Richard Greenwood looked up in surprise as Cuspard and Ames plunged into his office.

"Young man, I want to see your books," Cuspard demanded.

"What!" gasped young Greenwood, with a look from Cuspard to his friend Ames.

"I have a right to see them," asserted Cuspard crisply. "I'm a stockholder in this company, and he tossed down his certificate.

Greenwood glared at Ames with contracted brows.

"You've done this!" he angrily charged.

"I bet you," grinned Ames; "business is business. Rick, and it's pretty coldblooded."

"I'm in a hurry," interposed Cuspard. "The Diggins company's board of directors is waiting for certain information."

Young Greenwood, with little knots working in the muscles of his jaw, fir:rang for his bookkeeper, and then decided to go himself. He came in, a moment later, with a huge armful of books, and slammed them on the desk; meanwhile glaring ferociously at John Ames.

"Help yourself!" he blurted.

"All right," accepted Cuspard with a chuckle, and coolly sat down at Greenwood's desk, while the young president of the Greenwood company went to the window and fiddled on the pane, and John Ames sat down, and smiled and smiled.

There was one thing about J. E. Cuspard. He knew a bookkeeper's book from cover to cover, with his eyes shut; and the way he sailed through the Greenwood ledger was a joy to the bookkeeper, who had followed in to hover over the process. She had streaks of gray in her hair, and she had kept those books like a set of engravings since the elder Greenwood had put them in her charge, twenty years before. Cuspard looked up once, to see her.

"Yours?" he queried.

She nodded.

"They're great!" he told her, and went on with his job. Presently he looked up again. "Let me see your balance sheets of about this date, one, two, and three years ago," he directed.

"Yes, sir," she said with alacrity, for J. E. Cuspard was a nice man unless young Greenwood didn't like him. She went to Rick to find out. "He wants to see the balance sheets!" she whispered.

"All right, Mary, show them to him," he ordered, in a queer mixture of curtness for Cuspard, and affection for Mary.

Fifteen minutes later, J. T. Cuspard folded a piece of paper and stuck it in his pocket, and stalked out of the door. John Ames, smiling serenely, *strolled out after him; for the atmos*phere of that office was too tense for a traitor.

Half an hour later, J. E. Cuspard came back, followed by the serenely smiling John Ames. Cuspard threw a huge bunch of documents on the table.

"Would you like to have this junk?" he inquired of young Greenwood, who had risen, at his desk, to resent this second intrusion.

"What is it?" blurted Greenwood, backing away from it.

"Five per cent. of the stock of the Diggins Mortising Auger company," explained Cuspard. "The boys brought it with them to the meeting today, and I just went up to make a collection of it."

"I don't understand!" faltered the young president, seeking the eyes of John Ames; but the traitor was grinning, out of the window on which Greenwood had drummed.

"Take it after Cuspard. "Consoli*date the concerns, run a bluff competi*tion with them, do anything you please. We're busy men, and tired of fussing with it."

The blood began to come back to Rick's cheeks. He drew the certificates toward him.

"I don't understand," he again faltered.

"You'll get on bye and bye," chuckled Cuspard. "Young man, I want to congratulate you," and grasping Rick's limp hand, he shook it briskly. "You've kept 6 per cent of your business, you don't owe a cent, and you're running a three-year-old automobile. Take that stock and give us ten-year notes for it."

"You could I have't capital to swing both companies," worried Greenwood.

"You can get all you want at the First-National," advised Cuspard, looking around the room. "Where's that* pig-skin waste basket with the gold monogram? Oh, yes, here it is. How did you come to buy that thing, Rick?"

"To express my attitude toward my father's business," Rick explained, smiling. "I thought I'd keep it as a reminder."

"Oh, I'd give him a good job," decided Cuspard, as he went out of the door.

Rick walked over and shook John Ames by the hand. They stood there chuckling at each other like two fools.

CHAPTER IX.

RICK'S Mummy was giving a "party" in honor of Rick's triumph. John Ames, still puzzled, watched Margaret in the midst of a group of her admirers, and suddenly realized why he had been puzzled; why there had never been between Margaret and himself the intense attraction which can ripen into love.

A dapper little friend of Ned Cross' was introduced to her; and John saw the handshake which passed between them. He saw, too, the light in her eyes which had never been in his own.

Queer he had not realized it before. This was Nature's instinct of reversion to type; Nature's eternal effort at readjustment. Something within the tall Margaret Greenwood, of which she was entirely unconscious, made it impossible for her to ever love a tall man; and something within the tall John Ames had made it impossible for him to love the beautiful and attractive Margaret Greenwood.

"I think I shall be going away to-morrow," he told her at the close of the evening.

"Oh, no!" she protested, genuinely pained. "We shall miss you. We've been such good friends!"

Again he felt the thrill of her voice, and saw the fire beneath the chill of her eyes, and noted the red fullness of her lips.

"I guess I'm doomed to be a wanderer," he lightly said, and shook hands with her in farewell.

His own hands came away willingly; but he was no longer puzzled.

She Was the Very Embodiment of Fascination; and He Felt Strangely Attracted.

"How Did You Come to Buy That Thing, Rick?" He Asked.

Shot 26 Lions in a Day

(Cape Town South African News.)

A measure for protecting lions on crown lands in British East Africa is under consideration of the legislative council. Nine hundred and fourteen lions were reported as having been killed in the past two years. Paul Rainey, who is again coursing lions with his hearhounds, has just shot his ninetieth lion in British East Africa. He holds a record of twenty-six lions in one day, these having been killed in an ostrich breeding area. Seven were killed recently on Lord Delamere's estate upcountry. The Maharajah of Datia has shot thirty-one lions during a safari of two months.

A New Lorgnette Ribbon

(From Vogue.)

To those who wear a watch or lorgnette on a narrow, black silk ribbon it will be interesting to hear of a novelty ribbon for the purpose. In place of the staid black there is now a black ribbon with a narrow white edge on either side, which quite smartens the effect of this trinket. It is just one of the little touches which count in dress.

QUO VADIS, GREAT PICTURE PLAY AT THE GRAND THIS WEEK

In the days of modern progress in things theatrical, the motion picture has become a prominent factor, and in recent years big producers have paid more than passing attention to this department of the theatrical world. Perhaps the greatest accomplishment that has yet been recorded in the picture play producers has been the recent production of "Quo Vadis," adapted from the famous novel by Henryk Sienkiewiez, and produced after eighteen months of patient experiment, drill and rehearsal on land and water, using thousands of people, and at the expense of many thousands of dollars.

"Quo Vadis" is going to be presented at the Grand, commencing on Monday, June 16 at matinee and night performances, and there will be two presentations of "Quo Vadis" each day, one at the matinee at 2:30 and the other at night at 8:30. The engagement will last for the entire week.

The presentation will consume two and quarter hours. The picture will be seen in three acts, and eight parts, and there will be eight reels used, or a total of nearly 10,000 feet of imported film.

The picture was taken in Italy, by a cast composed of the most famous photo-play actors. In Rome these people were gathered, and as the skilled stage directors found it necessary for the progress of the picture the company was traveled thousands of miles to the points that had been selected for parts of the picture. There are thrills and there are exciting moments galore—exciting chariot races, wonderful combats, and when the Christian martyrs are brutally driven into an arena into which a number of lions are turned, there has not been an audience in any of the great cities where this picture has been exhibited, able to restrain the desire to scream with intense excitement.

Jake Wells, whose progressive catering to the southern theater-goers has done more for the advancement of things theatrical in Dixieland than any manager of theaters in this part of the country, has arranged with George Kine and Cohan and Harris for a number of weeks of the picture and will treat the patrons of the theaters in his southern cities to this most wonderful accomplishment of advanced photo-plays.

STORY OF THE PLAY.

A synopsis of the great picture follows:

The opening scene pictures the interior of the luxurious home of Petronius, one of Nero's favorites, recognized as the arbiter of fashion, and elegance in Rome. Petronius is seen in his private baths, where he is being groomed by several of his slaves. A slave announces the arrival of Marcus Vinitius, his nephew, who has just returned from the wars in Armenia.

Vinitius tells his uncle of his love for Lygia, the daughter of Aulus Plautius, a Roman general. He describes the maiden as the most beautiful he has ever seen, and begs Petronius to help him win her. He explains that Lygia is the daughter of a noble family held as hostage by Rome, and placed under the care of Aulus Plautius and his wife, who now regard her as their own daughter. After hearing the story Petronius consents to go to the Imperial Palace and enlist the help of the Emperor Nero, in behalf of his nephew.

His efforts do not prove in vain. The next day a centurion appears at the home of Aulus Plautius with an order from the Emperor commanding that Lygia accompany Poppaea to the Imperial Palace, and there be placed in the care of Actea, a woman of influence at the court.

The old general and his wife have become extremely fond of Lygia, and are in deep sorrow over her departure. They are consoled by the fact that she is accompanied by Ursus, her giant follower, who will guard her faithfully all her life. The next day, overcome with grief, Aulus goes to the palace to ask that Lygia be restored to him, but he cannot even gain an audience with the emperor.

NERO GIVES BANQUET.

The following evening, Nero gives a banquet at his palace. Lygia and Actea attend, and there meet Vinitius and Petronius amid the gay throng. The guests assemble at the Imperial Triclinium, where the feast has been prepared in Nero's honor. Nero, yielding to the flattery of his courtiers, rises to sing his hymn to Venus.

Next a group of Syrian girls dance to the accompaniment of lutes and cymbals. The bacchanalia becomes more turbulent toward midnight, and the guests behave themselves in the wildest disorder. Vinitius, having indulged too freely, cannot restrain himself, and makes violent love to Lygia. Although she repulses his advances, he clasps her in his arms. Suddenly the giant Ursus appears. Sending Vinitius sprawling into a corner, he picks up Lygia as he would a child and carries her away to Actea, who counsels her not to flee from the palace, which would incur the wrath of Nero.

The next evening, Vinitius sends his freedman Aticinus, with a company of slaves, to bring Lygia to his house, but upon the return journey Ursus, with a crowd of fellow Christians, intercepts the litter in which Lygia is riding, and after rescuing his mistress from the slaves, disappears with her into a remote part of the city. When the slaves of Vinitius return without Lygia, the young patrician is roused to terrible fury, and slays Aticinus. Vinitius and Petronius are now without means to discover the whereabouts of Lygia.

Soon afterward Eunice, the favorite slave of Petronius, suggests that they employ the services of Chilo, the soothsayer and spy. Chilo is summoned before them, and instructed to find her at once. After long search, Chilo learns that Lygia and Ursus worship with the Christians at a place called Ostranium, not far from Rome.

URSUS SLAYS CROTON.

He then hastens to inform Vinitius, who immediately sets out, accompanied by Chilo and Croton, a huge gladiator, to take possession of Lygia by force. When they reach Ostranium, they mingle with the Christians worshipping there. The Apostle Peter appears and blesses the faithful. After prayers are over, and they are returning homeward by separate ways, Vinitius orders Croton to attack Ursus, while he attempts to seize Lygia. But the gladiator proves no match for Ursus, and meets a terrible death at the hands of the barbarian, who, after disposing of him, rushes to rescue Lygia from the arms of Vinitius, and is about to slay the latter when his mistress commands him to be merciful.

Vinitius is carried to their dwelling, where, under the tender care of Lygia, he soon recovers from his injuries. His heart is touched by the Christian charity of those about him, and his love for the girl becomes greater than ever. He begs Lygia to forgive him and agree to marry him, but she flees from his passionate words of love.

Vinitius then returns to his palatial home, and attempts to forget Lygia in a life of renewed dissipation, but his former pleasures and the splendor of the court are not as tasteful to him as before. A great change has begun to take place in his soul, and his only wish now is to see Lygia.

Magnificent banquet is given at the Pond of Agrippa in honor of Nero. After partaking plenteously of the most costly viands and wines, the guests are invited by Nero to roam in the gardens and grounds of Vinitius among them. His handsome figure has made him a great favorite among the ladies at the court, and even Poppaea, the empress, meeting him in the garden, makes violent love to him, but Vinitius repels her with the words, "Leave me, for I love another," not realizing that the veiled figure before him is a woman of such great power in the court. Petronius, however, has been watching, and later rushes up to Vinitius with the words, "Knowest thou who that was? It was Poppaea! Hadst thou recognized her, nothing could have saved thee, nor Lygia, nor, perhaps, myself!"

VINITIUS ACCEPTS CHRISTIANITY.

One day, while Vinitius is meditating alone in his home, the prophet Chilo appears, and whispers that he has again discovered the whereabouts of Lygia. Vinitius accompanies Chilo to the place, but dismisses the old man in front of the house, telling him to go his way and forget that he had ever served him. Vinitius enters the house, and finds the Apostle Peter with a small band of Christians. He tells them the reason of his visit; he wishes to marry Lygia at any cost, and declares himself ready to accept Christianity. Lygia then appears, and the Apostle blesses their love.

Vinitius then returns home, and in his new spirit of happiness, frees all his slaves for Lygia's sake, and realizes that he is indeed a man changed in purpose. Petronius now counsels him to join Nero's court, which has removed to Antrium, a short distance from Rome.

Here feasting and revelry take place, and Nero indulges to his heart's desire in the excesses of his luxurious court. He is intensely fond of poetry and song, and devotes much of his time in pursuit of these, but he still yearns for some subject to give him inspiration for much greater work, and it is suggested by Tigellinus that he might care to behold Rome in flames.

Not long afterwards a messenger enters Nero's presence with the words, "Rome is burning!" to which the emperor replies in ecstacy, "Ye gods! I shall see a burning city, and can complete my Iliad!" When Vinitius hears the news, he makes frantic haste towards Rome, and upon reaching the city, inquires of the fugitives concerning Lygia, but for a long time can learn nothing definite.

The whole city is now seen a mass of flames. It glows like a great furnace illuminating the sky for miles around. Thousands of unfortunate people perish, and others rush through the crowded streets, carrying their goods upon their backs, in a frantic struggle for safety. Great buildings totter and fall to the ground; huge columns and arches of superb magnificence are reduced to heaps of ruins.

NERO SEES ROME BURN.

In order to obtain a better view of the perishing city, Nero journeys close by, accompanied by a company of his courtiers. At a safe distance, he goes out upon a balcony and gazes upon the all-consuming conflagration. At last he can gratify his desire to behold a great city in flames. The emperor raises his voice and sings, accompanying his song with the lute.

Meanwhile Vinitius, nearly suffocated by the fumes and smoke, braves the terrible confusion and succeeds in finding Lygia, Ursus and the Apostle Peter. He begs them to leave Rome, but they refuse, and thereupon Vinitius promises that he will remain with them, and asks to be baptized a Christian, and the Apostle Peter baptizes him.

When the flames are finally extinguished, the Roman people, reduced to great want, cry loudly for revenge. Many angrily accuse Nero himself of the crime. Shouts of "Matricide!" "Incendiary!" fill the air. Nero, dreading the wrath of the people, sends his favorite, Petronius, to calm their furious threats by making liberal promises of grain and entertainments.

In order to turn the blame upon some one else, the emperor gladly embraces the suggestion of the false Chilo, seconded by Tigellinus, that the Christians are the real culprits and a general arrest of them takes place, among them Lygia, Ursus, and Glaucus. The Roman soldiers search the houses, and drive the unfortunate people to the foul prisons to await their cruel fate. Vinitius makes an heroic attempt to save Lygia, but in vain.

A great series of spectacles is to take place in the amphitheater, the crowning event of which will be the Christian martyrs being thrown to the lions. On the apointed day, great crowds fill the the amphitheater. The emperor and his court are present.

Exciting chariot races and gladiators engaged in mortal combat entertain the people for a while, but they soon weary of these and cry for blood and the more terrible events which are to follow. Then the Christian martyrs, men, women and children, are brutally driven in the arena, after which the lions are turned in upon them. The beasts eagerly devour their prey, while the people applaud.

Nero smilingly turns to Petronius and inquires, "What think you of it?" and Petronius cynically replies, "They are a spectacle worthy of thee, O Caesar!"

Vinitius is wild with anxiety over the fate of Lygia, for he has not discovered her among the victims, when suddenly a huge bull dashes into the arena with the body of woman lashed to its back.

URSUS SLAYS THE BULL.

"Lygia, Lygia," cries Vinitius, tearing his hair, "I believe! Oh Christ! a miracle!" While the infuriated animal rushes about the arena, an extraordinary thing occurs. A giant advances toward the beast. It is Ursus! Seizing the animal by the horns, the two engage in a terrific struggle.

The multitude is spellbound. Suddenly a great cry escapes them. As in a dream, they see the head of the infuriated bull twisted under the iron hand of the barbarian. The Lygian's face, neck and arms become purple from his mighty effort. Finally the animal, exhausted, falls to the ground. Quickly the giant releases Lygia and, lifting her in his arms, aproaches the imperial balcony.

Amid the frenzy and uproar of the spectators, Vinitius makes a desperate leap into the arena. Baring his breast he discloses the scars received in the Armenian wars and pleads to Nero for the life of Lygia. Fearing a more furious outbreak from the populace, and seeing nothing but angry looks, Nero, with hatred and scorn, upturns his thumb, the sign of grace, and Lygia is borne out of the arena by Ursus and Vinitius. This ends the festivities of the day.

Petronius, who has so nobly defended the Christians in Nero's court, has lost the emperor's favor and is condemned to die. He decides to give an elaborate farewell banquet to his friends. At the close of the festivities, he reads aloud a letter addressed to Nero, denouncing him and branding him as the real incendiary of Rome. With this done, he summons the surgeon to open his veins and permit his life's blood to ebb away.

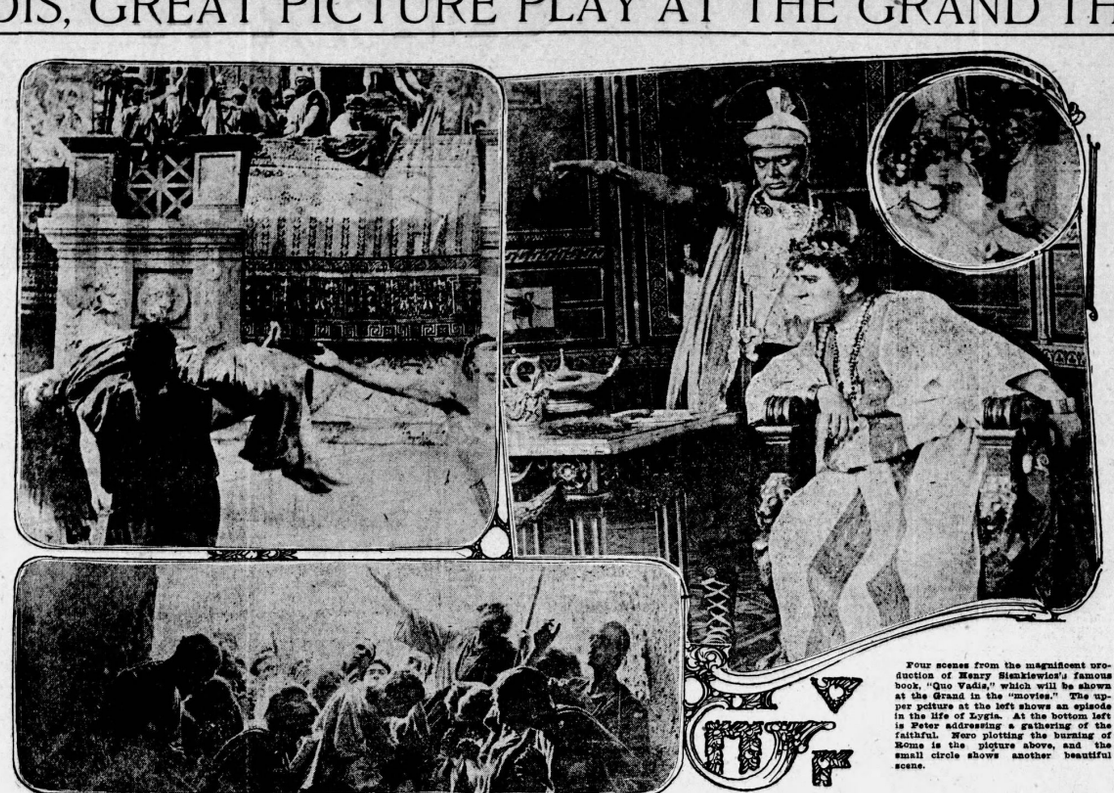
About that time, on the Appian way, are seen two figures leaving Rome, the Apostle Peter and Nazarius. The road is empty. Thinking their work is at an end in Rome, they desire to seek other fields, but suddenly a vision appears before them on the roadway and they look with wonder on the figure of Christ.

"QUO VADIS, DOMINE?"

In a broken voice Peter exclaims: "Quo Vadis, Domine?" (Whither goest Thou, O Lord?) and receives answer: "Should'st thou abandon My people, I will go to Rome to be crucified again." Rising to his feet, with bowed heads, they turn without a word and hasten back to the City of Seven Hills.

The reign of Nero now comes to an end. The signal of revolt is given and the legions acclaim Galba emperor, while Nero seeks safety in flight, followed by a few adherents. He learns that his enemies are rapidly closing in upon him and determines to take his own life. At the critical moment, his courage fails; one of his followers comes to his aid and presses home to his heart the dagger which in his craven grasp, failed in its mission.

"So passed Nero from this earth, furious as the wind, destructive as the flame, spreading grief, agony and death in his path, but out of the blood and tears of his iniquity, there comes a star, a guiding light, emblematical of peace, love, life and liberty."



Four scenes from the magnificent production of Henry Sienkiewicz's famous book, "Quo Vadis," which will be shown at the Grand in the "movies." The upper picture at the left shows an episode in the life of Lygia. At the bottom left is Peter addressing a gathering of the faithful. Nero plotting the burning of Rome is the picture above, and the small circle shows another beautiful scene.

THE GEORGIA HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

By Governor-Elect John M. Slaton

THERE is no more interesting body of men to a Georgian than the House of Representatives. I believe the most attractive political position in the state is the speaker. He sees reflected in the body before him every phase of Georgia nature, and it is distinctly known.

The one hundred and ninety-three men over whom he presides know every foot log, every bend in the creek, every patriarch of communities in its one hundred and fifty counties. They know the prejudices, the feuds, the weaknesses of practically every voter in the state. They know the subjects to be avoided, and those to be urged in winning their hearers. There is not an old-fashioned camp meeting, a gathering of any character they have not frequented. The men from the hill country or from the Atlantic coast are all present. Some have never seen the sea, and others have never seen the mountains. The city representative is a surprise to the rural member and vice versa, but all Georgians, good-humored, hearty and whole-souled, they are wonderfully alike when the human chords are touched. The representatives from the mountain districts vote for the increase of south Georgia counties, and those from the lowlands reciprocate with a manifest pleasure for their highland colleagues.

They all fight over their bills, charging alignment with every new measure, cherishing no resentments after the contest is over and feeling bound in future political contests to stand by the men with whom they served. The only wound that does not heal readily is when a some member opposes another's local bill. Each has a strong abiding sense of home rule, with an unquestionable right to pass any bill, however curious, which affects only his home county.

THAT PREVIOUS QUESTION.

And it is remarkable how quickly they learn the parliamentary mechanics for cutting off tedious debate. The house has only to be bored a few times when its members who have never considered parliamentary tactics, learn that the previous question cuts off further talk. Woe to him who is charged with a speech who does not get it delivered before some member gets in the fatal motion.

And then anybody who touches the sense of humor of the house can get an audience any time. The man who adopts the intensely oratorical style, with high-sounding emphasis in commonplace phrases, is immediately recognized, and, however irritated, it may be, like a member out of harness, the house forgets its anger and begins to applaud. I remember one day after a long quarrel on a hot day over some measure, when everybody was out of sorts, such a gentleman arose and his address, "Mr. Speaker," in the tones of the boy orator who says "South Carolina," caught the attention of the house. They measured him at once. Each high-sounding phrase was applauded and ever afterwards he was permitted to speak and his time was extended because he appealed to the sense of humor of the house.

Any one who has ever served in that body knows that sometimes it will defeat anything and at other times will pass nearly anything. Woe to him who does not know its humors! It is surprising, too, to see how quickly a member learns that the best way to pass a bill is not to speak on it. When he does there is a likelihood of suggesting a criticism from somebody and the usual member, when in doubt, vote in the negative. The veteran never speaks unless he finds it absolutely necessary.

And, then, it is interesting to watch the expressions of the members when some question is up which may constitute an issue at home. Their judgment may suggest one vote, and the probability of being unable to explain to the constituents their position inclines them the opposite way. How eagerly they listen to the arguments and weigh the probable effect on some district where the question has become a burning issue.

I recollect several years ago when the dog tax was passed in the house, by common consent, the yeas and nays were not called. If anybody had called them I think he would have been mobbed. The members voted by holding up their hands and no record was kept. Only four members voted against it, but I understood that at the next election sixty members were offering to exchange testimonials that they were the four.

THE SMOKINK ROOM.

And when the hog law or fence law came up, those who were willing to boldly meet any constitutional question, would be found in the smoking room here the roll was called.

Last session a representative, on opening a letter found that it began by telling him how to vote on some issue. The representative showed it to his fellow member sitting by, with the statement that that fellow was trying to control his vote. On looking further into the letter and finding that 200 voters had joined in the demand, the representative ended his sentence by saying "And he will come darned nigh doing it."

However, the house of representatives, good humoredly attacked by the paragraphers of our newspapers, the fertile subject of the caricaturist, represents the best that is in our people. He may introduce bills to prohibit bedclothes less than nine feet long; but who has had his feet stick out of the blankets in cold winter doesn't sympathize with him. He may make it a misdemeanor for a hotel to put on the bill of fare a dish in a foreign language. But any man who wants soup ought not to be compelled to study French to order it. And any fellow who has been driving his best girl on a Sunday afternoon and had bees from a hive along the road to attack him, his girl and the horse would favor legislative acts to prevent the keeping of a hive less than fifty yards from the highway. The aspiration is all right. The purpose and aim are to help. And when such duties are presented, when the occasion arises to do something which means the advancement of his state when the issue of justice is clearly presented, you will generally find the house of representatives on the right side. It is usually made up of men who strive to meet with the highest patriotism of their most serious responsibilities.

HOME AGAIN

By Mrs. W. H. Felton

AFTER a holiday of three weeks, you will find me at home again —ready to send you a word of cheer or sympathy as has been my custom for nearly twenty years of continuous service in the home column of the Semi-Weekly Journal.

Before the fatigue of travel and contact with sightseeing amazingly well—so I believe—the physical strength was built up by taking an afternoon nap each day—no matter where I happened to be. On a Pullman sleeper, I could not accomplish the nap, and every night I made a regular business of going to my room in the various hotels and resting and my sleep refreshed me greatly, and brightened my wits.

At 71 I lack but two years of eighty. It was a venturesome attempt to travel alone, for so long a period as here mentioned, but I was very careful in crossing streets, always seeking a policeman's aid if the crowd was great or thronged with passing vehicles.

I really had but one serious dread, and that was I feared I should be run over by the rapid automobiles that seem to be everywhere and in all crowded places, all the time. They were so nearly noiseless, gliding over the streets, that were as level as glass plates, that I found they were right at me before I glimpsed them.

But you may be sure, a policeman's whistle will check their speed! One wave of the policeman's hand will blow down a whole street full of these horseless carriages. All along the parks you will see "Speed Limit" glaring from sign posts, and these autos are sometimes forced down to four miles an hour, when the joy riders are crazy to be going at forty miles, and are only afraid of a fine of they disobey such speed limit instructions. A blessed good thing it is for foot travelers that somebody can call the crazy ones down and compel them to regard the rights of the old or the feeble, or the dependents. I was never too ambitious to refuse assistance, and it was a wonder to me, that everybody was so willing to bear me company across the crowded streets of Washington and New York. I had been across the Staten Island ferry and had returned with immense boat loads of holiday seekers and when I reached the New York point again I asked a nice looking young man to point me to the subway entrance as I desired to go away up Manhattan Island—not far from Central park—so that I might see the marching military on Memorial day. Not only did the nice young man point the way, but he said "I will gladly go down with you to the subway cars." He took my arm, assisted me down the steps, and before I could see the place to buy my ticket (5 cents) he had bought it and said "my dear lady give me this pleasure." No grandson could have bee nicer to his own grandmother. I said, "I thust my, dear boy, somebody will be very good to your own mother, you have been so nice to care for me." He told me exactly how to find my way out and also the nearest surface car, after I reached the open air. He made the entire trip pleasing to me because it is just such lovely courtesies as do all the rough places of our daily journey through life. I shall never see his face again, but I marked his career for him, he will ever be a self-respecting, well mannered gentleman, no matter where his station may allot him to work and live.

There is no surer test of manly character than politeness to the aged, and I had full measure and running over all the way from my home until I got back last night very tired and much debilitated by the hot weather, but very happy that I had made my journey without the least accident or a single thing to mar my satisfaction. I have a lot of things that I can reflect upon and study over when winter time shuts me in and must compel myself to avoid severe outdoors cold weather. I am so thankful for God's preserving mercies and for the dear friends I saw on my trip and also the quiet old home, that is always open to receive the wanderer.

CHILDREN'S MANNERS.

The proper position at the table is to sit erect with the waist or chest just a few inches from the table. During the moments when not engaged in the act of eating allow the hands to lie quietly in the lap.

They should never lounge or slip down in the chair. The hips should touch the back of the chair near the seat and the body should bend from the hips.

Never support the elbows on the table. It may be comfortable, but it is very ungraceful.

Never play with knives, forks or spoons. Perfect repose as far as possible.

Teach the young to remain standing until the mother and sisters are seated. This custom should be strictly regarded.

The proper place for the knife and fork when not being used is to place them on the plate, together, with the tips in the center and handles on the edge.

The proper way to dip soup from the plate is away from them, instead of toward them, and it should be taken from the side of the spoon, not from the end. Never tip the soup plate or cup to get the last drop. Never crumb crackers into the soup.

Eat slowly always. 'Tis best for your digestion. Eat slowly for appearances' sake.

Never allow children to spread a slice of bread and bite and cut it. Bread should be eaten by breaking of small pieces. Butter them just before placing them in the mouth.

Teach them to peel and quarter apples or peaches and cut into mouthfuls. Asparagus should not be eaten with the fingers.

When finished do not push a plate away nor toy with the crumbs. Allow children to enter into the conversation, but also teach them to be attentive listeners.

Insist on the co-operation of the children in keeping the table neat and orderly.

Teach them to appear at meal time—on time—with neat appearance and a smile. The dining room should be sunny and bright, and children should be the same.

Move chairs carefully and noiselessly, and let each one assume his share of responsibility of properly passing the food nearest him. Never allow them to sit down, eat the food hurriedly and leave the table before others are finished. If once they leave the table do not allow them to return at that meal.

THAT stalwart figure with the pick is one of the gardeners of the first grade class at Davis Street school. In addition to learning the three R's, this class also took to growing flowers and spring vegetables. Before school was out, the playground was a fair and blooming garden.

The group of very grown little people are the bride and groom and attendants at a wedding held on Tuesday, June 3, at the W. F. Slaton school. The bride and groom were Helen Moncrief and James Smith; the flower girls were Mildred Smith and Helen Snow.

Next to the principal figures in this very grown-up wedding are three members of the Players' club, which presented "The Importance of Being Earnest." Standing with her fingers upon her lips is Mrs. Burton Smith; Mrs. John Marshall Slaton is looking toward the audience; Marsh Adair is looking at Mrs. Smith.

THE group of young ladies waving their handkerchiefs at you are among those who took part in the parade of the butchers and grocers on Wednesday, June 4. This parade, which started from the capitol at 2 o'clock, was three miles in length—the longest ever held in Atlanta, and the first of its kind in the history of the city. Throngs of people lined the sidewalks along the route of march and entered with enthusiasm into the holiday spirit of the event. The purpose of the parade was to celebrate the half-holiday which grocers and butchers will observe on Wednesday during July and August.

Practically the entire commissary department of the city was in the parade. Everything was represented, from pickles and soda crackers to delicatessen dainties. Over 1,000 vehicles were there, representing every means of conveyance, from a mule wagon to an automobile. With its mounted policemen and its brass band, the parade also had the pomp and splendor of a military procession. It was a memorable parade, but no detachment was quite so memorable as that one pictured here.

The three young ladies with the roses are graduates of the Girls' High school and officers of the Mallon society. Reading from left to right, they are: Miss Catherine Wyly, librarian of the society; Miss Charlotte Thompson, secretary, and Miss Elizabeth Foster, president. Can you guess what they are saying, as they pluck rose leaves? What else could it be but: "He loves me, he loves me not"?

Consistency Main Reason For the Gulls

Mike Finn Has Ball Team That Plays Good Ball in All Departments, Which, After All, Is What Wins Flags

Why is Mobile leading the Southern league race?

To this question many fans give as many different answers while others hint at the luck element, intimating that Mobile should be down around third or fourth place, but just take a straight tip that Mike Finn's team is playing real baseball and deserve to be right up around the very toppermost points. The club is not playing good baseball in one department and very bad in another. It is turning out real baseball in every sense of the word and that is just why Finn is now looking down on the other seven teams that are striving for the flag.

While Mobile leads the league in most every department of play the Atlanta bunch comes second just about as regularly and for any change to be made in the standing of the clubs as they now appear some of the other outfits must begin to play a bit better ball or Mobile and Atlanta must slump. One or the other just must happen or the standing of the teams will remain about the same as it now is.

Often good ball clubs fail to consistently win ball games all because where strength is shown in one or two departments of play there are one or two more departments where they are admittedly very weak. Years of play has served to teach all the followers of the diamond game that a team must play "even ball" to get the best results. Strength in one department with weakness in another does not do much good, serving to keep the club in the rut most of the time.

AN ALL-ROUND CLUB.

Mike Finn manages a good all-round ball club. He gets good pitching, crack base running, excellent fielding, strong hitting, has good sacrifice hitters and players who know the inside game. A glance at the figures proves every bit of this and a bit more. At club hitting Mobile ranks a close second to Atlanta, at run scoring the tribe of Finn is first, at base stealing first, at individual hitting first; ranks first in home runs and two-base hits and in total bases is far in the lead. This all goes to show that the club is there in every department.

While Mobile ranks first in most every department Atlanta is second. The Crackers are first in club hitting, second in scoring runs, individual hitting, slugging, but way down the list in base stealing. And right on this one point hinges a big defect in the team play of the Cracker club. There are many good base runners with the club and yet the proper base running results are not being attained. Just why we are at a loss to know.

FEW OF THE MARKS.

At team batting Atlanta is first with an average of .268 with Mobile next in line with .260. At base stealing Mobile ranks first with 127 steals and Atlanta has but 58. At scoring runs Mobile has grabbed 281 and Atlanta, in second place, has 262. Mobile leads in hitting with 498 for the season and Atlanta is next with 477. Mobile has hit for 643 bags and Atlanta for 625. At two-base hitting Mobile is first with 78 two-sack swats and Nashville second with 66. At three-bagging Montgomery comes in first with 39 and Memphis is second with 32, while at home runs Mobile leads with 13 and Montgomery is next with one less.

Another strong point in Mobile's favor is the pitching that Mike's star staff has been turning out. Hoag, Cavet, Berger, Robertson and Campbell have all twirled consistent ball all the time. At the start of the campaign when the twirling corps of the other clubs were to the bad Mike's staff was in there flinging consistent ball and easily getting away with it after win.

It is not necessary that a winning club have an all-star cast of flingers, a consistent quintet doing just as good. If you have five men upon whom you can always rely you will win far more games than if you have two or three star performers who go in and pitch shutout ball one day and blow to the spout the next. It is consistency that counts and this Finn has surely gathered for his twirling staff.

CATCHER MUST BE ABLE TO STAND BUNCH OF WORK

Americans Get Polo Game and Championship

By Close Score of 4 1-2 to 4 1-4, American Riders Prove Superiority Over John Bullers

MEADOW BROOK CLUB, WESTBURY, L. I., June 14.—By the narrow margin of one-quarter of one goal the American polo team won the second and deciding game of the international cup series at the Meadow Brook club this afternoon and thereby retains the trophy for at least another year. The score was 4 1-2 to 4 1-4.

The slight advantage of the United States four over the English challengers at the end of one hour of the most desperate kind of play is fully indicated by the trifling difference in the scores of the two teams. Polo play of the type shown by both the fours in the crucial game this afternoon has never been seen heretofore in either national or international contests in this country.

The spectacle thrilled the crowd of 35,000 persons, which "rooted" like a typical baseball crowd.

Clever team play like that shown by the American four on Tuesday was missing, but in its place was one uninterrupted series of dashing and desperate plays that swayed the spectators to a degree seldom seen at sports of the type of polo.

Never for a moment did the action lag, and the game was one continuous spectacle of rushes first in the direction tof the American goal, then toward the poles of the Union Jack.

The English showed better team attack than the cup defending four, and their ponies, too, played the game as though they knew the international honor at stake. It was only by darting flashes of play that the Americans were finally able to emerge victorious by a score of 4 1-2 to 4 1-4 goals.

The substitution of L. E. Stoddard for "Mont" Waterbury, made necessary by the accident to Waterbury on Tuesday, and the moving back of "Larry" Waterbury to No. 2, caused a noticeable break in the team play of the Meadow-brook "Big Four." Neither Waterbury nor Stoddard appeared at ease in communication, and repeatedly missed the balls fed to them by both Whitney and Milburn.

To offset this the forwards eventually cut loose with such desperate individual play that they actually overcame the defect of lax team work and won on merit a game which will stand for years as a polo "thriller."

The English four, on the other hand, benefited by the change which brought F. M. Freake into the game in place of Captain A. Noel Edwards.

Thornton Wins Tennis Honors

RICHMOND, Va., June 14.—Atlanta went Richmond one better this afternoon, when Nat Thornton, of that city, walloped Erskine Buford, of Richmond, in the challenge round in men's singles in the Old Dominion tennis tourney on the courts of the Country club. Thornton, playing in his usual brilliant form, had no difficulty in defeating the Richmonder, and was repeatedly cheered during the course of the match. The score was 6-2, 6-2, 6-3. In the contest he defended his title of champion.

Another victory will give him permanent possession of the Old Dominion cup. Thornton, together with Mrs. Willard Sullivan, also carried off the honors in the mixed doubles, Gore and Miss Colston meeting defeat at the hands of this pair. In men's doubles, in which the Atlantian and Shaner, of Lynchburg, were matched against Buford and Dunn, Thornton did not appear in particular good form, he and Shaner being defeated 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

SIZE A HELP AT CATCHING

The idea that it takes a well built man for the position of catcher is fast growing all the present day managers realizing that for a player to hold up in the work back of the platter he must be able to stand a bunch of the hardest work dished out to any member of the squad. And this very same idea, though there are others, causes Manager Billy Smith to stick to Joe Dunn.

Joe Dunn, besides being a good coach for young hurlers and a man with a thorough knowledge of the game, is well built. He is big and strong enough to stand back of the platter and do his work day after day without becoming incapacitated owing to overwork. With a lighter player this would be impossible, the strain serving to weaken him to such a condition that he would be no more use for a season.

It was Billy Smith who first found Joe Dunn. Joe and Billy live at the same little Ohio city, Springfield, and it was while catching on his town team that Joe first came into the limelight and caused Billy to get him a place as catcher for the Columbia club in the South Atlantic league club. That was back in 1906 when Billy was starring as a manager in the Sally circuit.

Joe remained with Columbia just one season, going to Evansville for the 1907 battle. In 1908 he worked but half a season for Evansville, attracting so much attention that he was taken on by Brooklyn and there he stuck during part of the 1908 campaign and all of 1909. It was in 1910 that Joe first did duty in the Southern, coming to the Mobile club and there he remained during 1910-11 and 1912, being bought by Billy Smith for his 1913 Cracker squad.

Joe Dunn is not one of the class of ball players who remains idle all winter. Immediately after the close of the baseball season he jumps to his home at Springfield and takes up the furniture business, at which he shines. They say in Springfield there is no dealer who can better sell a stove, bed or other household furnishings than this same Atlanta receiver.

TROPHY DAY ON THURSDAY; WILL SHOW A LARGE CROWD

Birmingham Club Will Be on Hand to See Crackers Get the Trophy

The awarding of the attendance trophy to the Atlanta club takes place Thursday afternoon at Ponce de Leon park, the Birmingham club being the rival delegation. President W. M. Kavanaugh will make the presentation and there will be a few festivities.

In winning the attendance trophy on the opening day of the season at Ponce de Leon park the Atlanta club accomplished the impossible. Though the day was one of the rainy, dreary kind there were 8,336 fans to pay their way past the gates ,this eclipsing the crowd which turned out in any other city in the league despite the real baseball weather dished out to some.

On flag raising day in Birmingham the Baron followers tried to break Atlanta's attendance mark, but there was nothing to it. Just 3,207 fans were on hand and now it is up to Atlanta to show a larger crowd on Thursday than was at the flag raising game in Birmingham. And it will be done.

NEW YORK, June 14.—A start was made in the seventeenth annual Metropolitan Lawn Tennis championship today at the West Side Tennis club. G. F. Touchard, the No. 10 of the national ranking list, went down to defeat before Dr. Ewing Taylor, a Harvard veteran, at 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

TENNIS STARS TO CLASH IN THE STATE TOURNAMENT

The Georgia state tennis tournament will begin at the Piedmont Driving club on Monday, the 16th, with a full list of prominent men included in the entries. Players from all over the country will enter the meet. Already applications have been received from New Orleans and from a lady in California. On Saturday night after the meet closes there will be a dinner-dance given in honor of the visiting players. All during the meet lunch will be served free to the visiting players in the club.

Following are some of the entries already received: Nat Thornton, Carlton Smith, John Mansfield, J. K. Orr, Jr., Carl Ramspeck, Coles Phinizy and Frank Barrett, of Augusta, and several players from New Orleans, whose names are not known yet; also, Arthur Clarke, Albert Thornton, Alex Smith, Jr., Winship Nunnally, Tom Wilson and several players from the Decatur tennis club. Mr. Carleton Smith and Mrs. W. B. Hall will play in the doubles together. Play will start Monday morning at 10 o'clock, with Frank Reynolds refereeing. An admission of 25 cents will be charged to all, except members of the club and their immediate families.

Owing to the tournament being held in Atlanta more star players are to enter this year than in the past. Many of the best players are from Atlanta, which now numbers among the best in the southern states. And most of them are entered.

CRACKERS HOME ON MONDAY; ROAD TRIP AN EVEN BREAK

Nashville and Birmingham Will Be Opponents During the Home Stay

The road trip for the Crackers ended a bit disastrously with a defeat at Chattanooga yet the Crackers played jam up ball on the road haunt and when Billy Smith gets back to Ponce de Leon on Monday there will be a good bunch of fans to welcome him. The first series is with the Nashville club, the first game coming Monday afternoon.

On the road trip the team won three and lost three, which is battling evenly in foreign territory. Two out of three were won in Birmingham and two out of three lost in Chattanooga. While the losses in Chattanooga came as a surprise to some of the fans it must be recognized that the Lookout club is now playing jam up ball and a defeat at the hands of Elberfield's bunch is no disgrace.

The Vols and Crackers are now waging a pretty battle for second place and the three games here next week will have a big bearing on the outcome. Both clubs are in good shape.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 14.—In a majority report to which President Lynch, of the National league, disagreed, Chairman Herrmann, of the national baseball commission today allowed the claim of the Boston American league club for $1,750 against the Jersey City club, of the Eastern league, for the services of Player Hugh F. Bradley. The Jersey City club contended that the release of the player was conditional on whether the player made good with Jersey City. This club claims he failed to do so and was returned to Boston, which club refused him. Bradley was ordered to return to Jersey City.

Cracker Team Dropped Last To Lookouts

By Score of 4 to 3, 'Nooga Wins, With Pole Covaleskie Opposing Blondie Musser

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 14.—With the aid of the Chattanooga team Covaleskie Saturday defeated the Crackers in one of the stubbornest fought games that has been seen on the local diamond. This makes nine straight victories for the big Pole and he deserves them every one. In the game Saturday he was there with the goods all the time. Coyle doubled in the seventh and scored two runs, making the locals take the lead by the score of 4 to 3. Musser pitched extra good ball and was only the inferior to Covaleskie in the speed department.

The whole Chattanooga team played good ball and were fighting every minute of the time to endeavor to break the jinx that seems to be on the team when it plays with Atlanta. Coyle was the star of the game both in the batting department and in the fielding line. He stabbed a hot liner of Bisland's that looked good for a triple and thereby saved the game for the locals. Atlanta played errorless ball, while the locals made one small error.

Both games were* abbreviated to seven innings and were fiercely contested.

Forest More made a creditable debut with Nashville, allowing Birmingham but two hits.

KEATING SENSATION OF YEAR, SAYS CHANCE OF YOUNG HURLER

Here is the sensational young spitballer who has the American league agog over his wonderful pitching.

Keating is the most promising pitcher Manager Frank Chance ever looked at, according to the great leader himself. Unfortunately for the youngster, and for Chance, the New York club isn't a winner this year, so while he pitches many wonderful games, Keating will not stand so high in the official averages next fall as he might were he with another team.

In every city where Keating has appeared critics have declared him an Ed Walsh in embryo. He may never be as great as toe king of spitball pitchers, but he seems destined to achieve a high place in baseball on sheer merit.

America Wins

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 14.—The long-disputed question of amateur boxing supremacy between the United States and Canada was settled here Friday night at the Cleveland Athletic club, when teams composed of Amateur Athletic union champions from both sides of the border clashed and the Americans won four out of five bouts, no decision being given in the sixth.

Eleven-Inning Game Results in 5-5 Tie—Jays Easily Trim Columbus in Second Battle

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 14.—Jacksonville won the first game of a double-header here today and tied the second contest after eleven innings of play. Grover who pitched for the locals, had the visitors at his mercy in the first battle and none of the Foxes were able to make the circuit. The new men on the Jacksonville club showed up well and it looks as though Wilder now has a good infield. The second game was an exciting contest and was called at the end of the eleventh inning on account of darkness. Umpire Barr was taken sick on the field and players from both teams umpired the latter game. Score:

Near Riot in Albany Game

Albany Defeats Charleston by Score of 11 to 8—Umpire Pender Injured by Mob

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 14.—In a game full of thrilling events, Albany won the last game of the series from Charleston, which went ten innings, 11 to 8. A rank decision by Pender at second base in the eighth when he called Winston out, cost Charleston the game. A crowd of over a thousand wifes for him after the game, and despite police protection he was hit several times by missiles hurled by the mob. He was escorted to his hotel under heavy police guard.

The contest was one of the most erratic of the season. Both teams hit the ball freely. Eldridge was driven from the box in the third, but the change to Chappelle did not seem to stop the hitting streak of the visitors, who won the contest. Although Dugleby was hit hard throughout the game, he was allowed to finish the game.

COBB'S WORK

Tyrus Raymond Cobb got only one hit out of three times up in the game with the Highlanders on Saturday, and as a result his average took a drop. He was at the bat three times, got one hit, one run, had one assist, made one putout and made no errors. From this it would seem that the Georgia Peach is worried about something. He is playing a conservative game and doing all right, but all right is not the brand of ball that Cobb plays. He is not that kind of a player. If he were, he would not be classed as the best in the game at the present time.

Just when the Georgia Peach will again get in his old-time form is not known. There are a great many reasons that can be put forth for his slump. Men quit batting good when there is anything to take their minds off their work. In order for a man of Cobb's calibre to keep up the pace that he sets his mind must be absolutely concentrated on hitting the ball, and hitting it every time. It may be that the recent illness of Mrs. Cobb has taken the player's mind off the game for a while. It will be remembered that Ty was called home from Chicago to be with Mrs. Cobb on account of a sudden illness. It was right after this occurrence that the big fellow's hitting took a slump. That is enough to worry any man, and when the illness is over Ty will again be the top man.

His figures for the season so far are: Games. At Bat. Hits. Runs. Av.

Opening Motorcycle Meet Proves Big Sucess – Good Time Is Made

A speed of eighty-four miles an hour was attained by J. McNeil, of Edinborough, Scotland in the first big motorcycle race meet at the Jackson street track Saturday afternoon, the speedy foreigner covering the one mile in 43 1-5 seconds in winning the third heat of the Atlanta Sweepstakes event.

A crowd of 5,000 fans were on hand to witness the first motorcycle events staged here and from the enthusiasm shown it appears that the game will make a decided hit. There were several close and exciting races, two of the finishes being of the spectacular order, and with a bit more practice, which will familiarize the riders with the track, even better speed and more excitement is the order of the day.

The opening performance was a grand success in every respect. While the hot weather and the fact that the game here was in the nature of experiment kept away hundreds of runs who will be on hand for the next time, which is Tuesday night, the crowd was about as large as was expected. The races made a hit as shown by the cheering and excitement among the spectators. Everybody had a favorite and no one hesitated to pull hard for their number.

TWO BIG EVENTS.

The program for Saturday afternoon was divided into two races of three heats each with a final heat for the prize, two amateur events and a special two mile race between three of the professionals. In each good time was shown and the rider making at least 75 miles an hour while those who won the money came in showing better time than eighty.

The one big racing thrill of the afternoon came in the second heat of the Atlanta Sweepstakes. This was between Wickford, Richards and Luther and was not decided until right at the last. Richards finally shoved across the tape a winner after fighting an uphill race all the way. He was closely pushed by Lockner all the way and only by a powerful spurt during the last lap was he able to win the prize. Often he had to mount to the very top of the track to endeavor to pass the two rivals who were in a bunch fighting for first place all the time.

Just before the start of the races a serious accident was narrowly averted by quick work in extinguishing the flames which covered Henry Lewis' machine as he was starting around the track in a practice spin. His gasoline pipe sprung a leak and in a moment his machine was in flames. Owing to the high speed at which he was going his foot and leg was badly burned before he could come to a stop. This accident put him out of the race, ruining his machine for the time being.

Harry Glenn, Houston Crane and O. R. Lancaster, three local amateurs, made their first appearance on the track and gave good demonstrations of their ability to handle the fast machines. Glenn especially did classy work, winning a two mile event in the quick time of 1 minute, 32 seconds, or 79 miles an hour. In the future other amateur events will be staged and it is likely that many good riders will be developed right here in Atlanta.

Considering that Saturday's meet was the first attempted at the new track everything went off unusually smoothly. There were very few hitches, the longest wait being in the introduction of the riders, which won't have to be repeated. They are all now very well known and this roll tape will not have to be gone through with when the cracks clash Tuesday evening.

SUMMARIES AND HEAT CLOSE.

In each of the big events three heats were run and the riders making the best time in each event met in the final heat for the money. W. Shields, W. Richards, G. Renel and J. McNeil, qualified for the final in the Atlanta Sweepstakes and McNeil won, in a five mile event and the time was 2 minutes 39-5 seconds or 82 miles an hour. This was the prettiest match of the afternoon.

Here are the results with time:

First heat, Atlanta Sweepstakes, one mile. First, W. Shields; second, Morton Graves; third, Harry Swartz. Time 45 2-5 seconds.

Second heat; two miles: First, Morton Graves; second, W. Lockner. Time, 1 minute, 31 seconds.

Third heat, two miles: First, Fred Luther; second, Harry Swartz. Time, 1 minute, 32 1-5 seconds.

Final heat, three miles: First, W. Richards; second, Merton Graves; third, W. Shields. Time 2 minutes, 14 seconds.

Special event, two miles: First Harry Glenn; second, G. Renel. Time, 1 minute, 32 seconds.

Amateur race, two miles: First, Houston Crane; second, O. R. Lancaster. Time – minute, 46 2-5 seconds.

One-Armer Let Go

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ANNISTON, Ala., June 14.—Pitcher White, probably the only one-armed man ever signed on professional ball, has been given his release by Manager Hannon of the Anniston club. He proved a good attraction, pitching, fielding and batting well, but his arm has been in bad shape for some time. Either Antley and Third Baseman Higgins have also been released. E. Berry, one of the twin brothers signed in the beginning of the season, has been assigned as has Pocase, who succeeds Higgins.

Water Baseball the Latest

NEW YORK, June 14.—Water baseball, the latest sport novelty, is being tried out at a natatorium at an amusement park here, with the idea of organizing a local eight-club league. The game includes many of the features of regular baseball with unique variations, including diving for bases instead of

GOWELL WON AT LATONIA

LATONIA, Ky., June 14.—Cheered on by a tremendous crowd made up for the most part by the elite of Kentucky and Ohio society, Cowell, a Kentucky filly, carried the white and green colors of her owner, J. T. Weaver, to victory here today in the twenty-ninth renewal of the classic Latonia derby. Twelve lengths behind the winner but struggling gamely came G. M. Hendrie's crack Canadian colt, Great Britain, while twenty lengths farther back, Foundation, a month ago reputed to be Kentucky's greatest three-year-old, came plodding home, badly beaten.

At the drop of the flag to a good start, Foundation shot into what looked to be a commanding lead, but at the five-eighths polo Great Britain was ahead. At the mile Foundation had dropped back, beaten, and by the time the last quarter pole was reached Cowell was within a length of the Hendrie colt.

Turning into the stretch Jockey Teahan was riding hard and Cowell worked up to even terms. Then for a dozen jumps it was an even battle for the lead, but Great Britain, although struggling to the utmost, could not stand the challenge and Cowell practically galloped under the wire.

The time, 2:32 1-5, is fast considering the fact that the winner was not pushed for victory. The record for the race is 2:26 2-5, made by Governor Gray in 1911.

The winner was a slight favorite over Great Britain in the pari mutuel betting, paying $4.80 for a $2 bet.

Newspaper Teams In Big Cities

NEW YORK, June 14.—The morning newspaper printers of Manhattan have had a baseball league for a good many years, all of the games being played at the Prospect park parade grounds. The Herald team is leading the league at present, the Herald being second, the American third and the Sun last.

In St. Louis, Cincinnati, Chicago, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Boston and Indianapolis the printers are contesting to see what players will represent these cities in the national tournament to be held at Pittsburg this year. Chicago won the Garry Herrmann cup at the tournament last year in Boston. The National Union Printers' baseball league is the only amateur organization of its kind in the country and possesses many star players.

In the various newspaper offices the club printers and apprentices have the baseball fever in a remarkable degree and among theme are quite a few sterling performers. The Tribune, World and American offices have uniformed teams in the field.

Manager "Dick" Adams, of the American team, is working toward the establishment of a junior league among the "printers' devils," as they are called, and hopes to have the league in shape by next year, so that six clubs will start the season with a stated schedule of games. The youngsters of the Tribune, World and American are having a battle royal series to see who are the champion junior nine.

Cornell Looks Strong For Coming Events

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 14.—Judging from the time trials that have been held, the contest between the varsity crews of Cornell, Washington, Wisconsin, Columbus, Pennsylvania and Syracuse over the Poughkeepsie course one week from today is going to be exceptionally close, with the fight for the lead between Cornell and Washington. Washington and Cornell crews have shown their superiority in the time trials. Coach Conibear, of the Pacific coast club, has sent his men over the four miles upstream and with a good goodtide in 19:28. Coach Courtney's senior crew has failed to have covered the four miles in less than 19:30. Pennsylvania has rowed the course in 19:50. Columbus has done no better. Wisconsin's best trial up to the present was a trifle over twenty minutes, and Syracuse is said to have had a four-mile row in a little less than twenty.

Chicago Gets Player

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 14.—The National baseball commission in a decision handed down today declared the transfer of Player John W. Beall from the Cleveland American league club to the Milwaukee American association club to be null and void owing to the neglect of the latter club to ask for waivers on the player. The Cleveland club is fined $25 for its failure to comply with the commission's rules and the player is declared a free agent. Chicago American league club upon the payment of the waiver price. The Boston National league club also wanted the player.

SWIMMING IS BEST WAY TO DEVELOP THE MUSCLES

Now that the summer is here for good and everybody is thinking of just where to spend the said summer, it will be well to take into consideration what a person goes away for during the summer months. It is not to get pleasure and excitement. That is in the cities full measure. It is not for a dress parade, for there is no better place in the world than Peachtree street for the showing to the wistful eye the newest styles from gay "Parce" and other fashion centers.

The main object in going away for the summer months is to lay up a store of energy for the winter months, to get in repair in order that you may the more be able to resist the inroads of colds and disease during the months when the face of the sun is as welcome as the first flowers of May. Then the question arises, "What is the best form of exercise, and what branch of sport will do me the most good and give me the best development?" Here is the answer, whether you are a man with a forty-two-inch chest measurement or a small boy or a young girl, or if you are just anybody: Swimming is the "big thing." It is the exercise that will make your muscles run red with healthy blood. It will round out the hollows wherever they are. It is the exercise that will make you think life is really worth living. It is the sport that is self-regulating. You cannot get too tired in the water. If you get tired, you have to come out and rest, and if you don't you will take a trip to the "bottom of the sea" and rest for how long no one on this planet knows.

Swimming develops evenly the muscles of the legs, stomach, chest and neck. Take a young man who is stringy and let him swim for two months regularly, and you will hardly recognize the man that he will be. His walk will be firmer, his eye clearer. Take a look at the chest that was once hollow, and in its place you will see a well-rounded, thick, healthy looking, breathing place. The men in the athletic world who have the best figures are the swimmers. The next best are men who engage in track work. Take a look at the measurements and figure of John Paul Jones, who is not only an excellent track man, but a good swimmer. His legs are in proportion with well-developed and symmetrical biceps. From the knee up the muscles seem to bulge into perfect cloistered ovals, curving into narrow hips and a small waist line, and then steadily growing like a wedge until the broad shoulders and thick chest are reached. The chest of a track man is always his pride. He likes to know that he can stick it out just a little farther than the rest of the bunch, and yet not be doing anything out of the ordinary for him. The very nature of the exercise makes for better development of that particular part of the body.

HELPS THE CHEST.

Take a walk and hold the arms parrarel and swing slightly and notice the muscles of the chest swell and if you keep it up long enough you will notice a big growth in the measurement of your chest, besides feeling better and having a better breathing apparatus.

Now back to the swimming proposition. Remember when Annette Kellerman was at the Forsyth theater and how tickets for weeks ahead were sold out? She drew the big crowds because she had the most perfect and most beautiful figure of any woman in the world. She is now making a big salary besides selling literature on how to become healthy. Her case is the best in the country for illustration. When she was fourteen, she was given up to be a consumptive and was a cripple. One of her limbs was dwarfed and longer than the other. She leaned slightly and her complexion was of a sickly hue. It was through the advice of physicians that she was turned loose to enjoy the few remaining days of her life. She started to swimming and within a year she was greatly changed. Now she is considered to be the most perfect woman in the world.

What swimming has done for thousands of others it can do for you and when you are looking over the vacation places this year ask the question, "is the era place where I can swim?" If not pass it up and go to a place where you can give your muscles a chance to swell. Get in the water and try some rapid strokes and feel your whole body strain under the exercise. A fifty-yard dash will make your chest feel twice as big as it really is. Get in the water and move around and get all the stale blood out of your system by exercising every muscle in the body. Don't be afraid to put your head under water. Fairly eat up the water, feel at home in it and the results will astound the most credulous.

Catcher Hutchens Is Star of Rome Club

ROME, Ga., June 14.—Harold C. Hutchens, son of Judge G. R. Hutchens and a graduate of the law department of the University of Georgia with the class of 1913, has signed a contract with the Rome Baseball association and is now a regular member of the team. Young Hutchens was uniformly accorded the position of catcher on the all-Southern intercollegiate baseball teams made up by different sporting writers.

His work behind the bat with the Rome team leads to the belief that he will make good in Class D baseball and that if he decides to play regularly he will go in faster company at the end of the present season. Young Hutchens will leave the team for two days this week to return to Athens and receive his diploma.

Aviators Rebuked

NEW YORK, June 14.—Frederick C. Hild and C. M. Wood, aviators were disqualified by the contest committee of the Aero Club of America Friday for flying over the field of the Meadow Brook club while the international polo game was in progress last Tuesday. The committee withdrew the license of Hild until January 1 next and the license of Wood until August 1.

Africa vs. Canada

LONDON, June 14.—The meeting of the South African and Canadian teams in the preliminary round of the contest which is to decide which country is to challenge Great Britain for possession of the Dwight F. Davis international tennis trophy has been postponed until Thursday, June 19, in order to give the South Africans more time to practice.

Riders Must Use Headgear While Racing

That the Atlanta public is genuinely interested in motorcycle motordrome racing has been vividly demonstrated here of late by the huge crowds that have fumed and stormed over the necessity for the repeated postponements and by the questions fired by the speed fans at everybody supposed to know anything about board track racing.

These are the sort of questions: "Why don't they race in the rain?" "Why don't they build a roof over the track?"

"How do the riders stick on?"

"Does it hurt them if they fall off?"

And a couple of thousand more of the same sort.

Naturally, there are a lot of things the public of Atlanta does not know about board track racing, and can not know until they have seen races in progress a few times over the local motordrome.

The competition rules of the Federation of America Motorcyclists give a lot of data that will answer many of the questions that the drome fans are bound to ask between now and the time the amusement public learns the inside of the racing game.

For instance, the matter of starts. Naturally, with machines that will not start sparking before they reach thirty-five miles an hour, this is a fine complication. It is not possible to use the standing start of the automobile track. Instead the start is "rolling," as it is called. It might be better termed flying. For this start two parallel lines are drawn across the track at right angles to the line of motion of the machines. The starter attempts to get the riders as near as possible to the front line, which is the starting line. He lets them go, however, if all the starters are inside those two lines. The rules provide that any competitor who is repeatedly responsible for false starts may be required to start from a push-off. This is to eliminate jockeying.

The starter, under the rules, has supreme charge of the riders from the time they leave the paddock until the start is made. He starts them with a flag and notifies them with flags of the beginning of their last lap and of the end of the race. Incidentally, he risks his neck every second he is on duty. One starter has been killed already this season, and the prospects are bright for harvesting a large crop of them. They are required to stand so near the track and to think of so many things at once that it is a wonder more of them are not telescoped by the whirling machines.

The rules specify only a little about the machines themselves, the automobile racing rules insist that, to be eligible to compete in a race, a machine must have four wheels and a brake. That is complicated compared with the F. A. M. rules. All that is needed is that the machine must not exceed 61 cubic inches piston displacement. As far as the rules go they could race in side cars.

On the other hand, the rules specify what a rider must wear. He can not go on the track unless equipped with a helmet or if he has on long trousers without leggins. The rules provide also that competitors must wear a number.

Form New League For the Amateurs

There is a movement under foot to organize a league in the city the teams to be composed of the moving picture and theatre men. If not enough teams from these places enlist it is probable that the clothiers will come into the league. These places all close on Wednesday afternoon and a game of all would be a good thing for them. Several teams have expressed their intention of entering it is likely if it is possible that it can be organized. Any one interested can get further information by calling Ivy 4989.

Valmore Winner

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., June 14.—Valmore, a sixty-five-foot schooner, won the twenty-second annual Michigan City yacht race from Chicago this afternoon. Polaris, of the same club, was second, six minutes behind. Valmore's time was 3:31. Third place is in dispute between Mavourneen and Michiacgo, last year's unsuccessful international cup racer.

Forty-three yachts sailed. The weather was ideal.

M. Rich & Bros. Wins

M. Rich & Bros. Junior team met and defeated the Keely company, Jr., team by a score of 23 to 14, the Keely company using four pitchers but could not check the M. Rich batters. The features of the game was the batting and the fielding of the entire M. Rich team. M. Rich batting twenty runs while Keely getting only six. Umpires, Barnes and Huff.

Better Race Horses For American Turf

BALENTI IS MAKING GOOD

Reports from St. Louis tell of the marvelous work now being turned out by Mike Balenti, the Indian shortfielder once with Atlanta and later a member of the Chattanooga crew. Since Balenti was put at Wallace's place at short he has gone like a house afire both at bat and in the field and he is looked upon as the best man for the place.

Bobby Wallace, the veteran shortstop of the Brownie crew, has been going it hammer and tongs for many years and has just about outlived his usefulness. He has been playing the old shortfield about as long as any other star has been in the game and the old adage that new blood will win out is telling.

Immediately after Balenti jumped into the hole at shortstop he went for ten games without missing connecting for a hit. Since his consecutive hitting record was broken he has gone well and the ousting of Wallace has not at all weakened the club. Derrill Pratt, the Georgia boy, is another ex-Southern league star playing with the Stovall club.

Wealthy Race Lovers Have Subscribed Big Amount to Be Used in Getting Best Blood for American Stables

BY ICONOCLAST.

NEW YORK, June 14.—To rebuild, or, more correctly speaking, to refound the thoroughbred in this country, fifty subscriptions have been promised by men of wealth, who will create a fund of $125,000 for the purchase of European blooded stock to replenish the farms and thoroughbred breeding establishments of the United States. The propositoin was made a few weeks ago and it has taken such root that a committee has already been formed to take charge of the enterprise, consisting of August Belmont, John Sanford, W. K. Knapp, Frederick Johnson and C. K. G. Billings.

The conditions of the subscriptions call for $1.000 upon acceptance, the balance to be at the call of the committee, and no one person can obtain more than three subscriptions of $2,500 each. The list is to close on July 15.

Approximately one-half the amount received from subscriptions shall be used by the committee to purchase, in its discretion, either at private sale or by public auction in either Great Britain or France, or both countries, a number of thoroughbred yearlings which shall be shipped to Belmont Park and on or about October 1 publicly drawn by lot, each subscription to draw one yearling. Such purchases are to be made by experts named by the committee. All expense up to the time of the drawing is to be paid out of the subscription fund and all expenses thereafter by the subscriber.

After the yearlings are distributed there shall be opened a series of stakes for which only those yearlings drawn may run. All races shall be governed by the rules of the Jockey club, and all subscribers agree to accept the decision of the Jockey club as final, so far as such rules apply.

The Jockey club will, at the option of the owners, purchase five entire horses or mares which shall complete the course and pass a veterinary's examination as serviceably sound. In the event of more than five owners making a tender of their horses five of those tendered shall be drawn by lot, and the horses so purchased shall be donated by the Jockey club to the United States army.

The races are to be run on such courses and on such dates as the committee may decide. The program for each racing season will be laid out and published early in the spring of each year. Racing associations will doubtless add some stakes to the races for the advantage of having them run on their respective race courses.

The general outline of the proposed races is subject to changes the committee may deem advisable to make, but no changes will be made after the closing of the subscription unless with the unanimous consent of all the subscribers.

Long Nearing Top Round Of Hit Ladder

D. Robertson, of Mobile, Now Just 2 Points Ahead of Cracker-Mobile Players Star in All Departments

Only a bad slump by Tommy Long has prevented the Atlanta outfielder from overtaking D. Robertson in the race for the batting honors of the Southern league. As it now stands Robertson has a small margin, leading the league with an average of .364, while Long's average is .362.

Tommy Long, while not boasting of the highest average, has made more safe hits than any other swatter. He has bingled safely 75 times against 71 safeties for Harry Welchonce, who is second in line. Robertson, the leading hitter, has hit safely just 68 times. Robertson's hits have totalled 105 bases while next in line at slugging is Sloan, the Montgomery outfielder. Robertson with six home runs leads in circuit smashes and in three-baggers Sloan is first with eight. Hendrix, of New Orleans, With nineteen two-baggers, ranks first in this department. Starr, of Mobile, with twenty-eight stolen bags, is the leader at the pilfering game, and Messenger, of Birmingham, with seventeen sacrifice hits is first.

Terry McGovern!

What a name it is!

The very speaking of it is like a gong that sets the thoughts to action; and, like a gong, it marks the close of the round of present-day chatter about present-day fighters.

Ah, what memories come back with the name!

They flit like moving pictures across the mind's curtain—pictures of a fighter and his battles, pictures of other days, pictures of a fighter unexcelled, a fighter unequalled, a fighter without a peer. And as the film of memory slides swiftly by it arouses and stimulates the vocal chords, and you say, unconsciously:

"There was a FIGHTER."

Where is there another like him? Once hears of many "kids" and "battlers" of the prize ring, but only one "Terrible Terry." No fighter has ever been bold enough to try and emulate the deeds that went with Terry's nickname.

Even to-day in spite of his past misfortune and his present weight of 175 pounds, one can still see X-ray-like, the game little fighter that used to be.

We saw Terry at his place of business—Grand Opera House. Terry enjoys the position of "theatre manager," thanks to his old manager, Sam Harlong job, and he hasn't much work to do, of Cohan & Harris. It's a lifedo, so has plenty of time to talk.

And he did. He told us of many things and among them was the story of his hardest battle.

"It was one of the first that I ever had, and funny, it never happened in the ring either. It happened in Brooklyn. It did—on a sand lot. Was playing ball—I used to could play ball, too—and the scrap started that way. You know how kids have teams and play, around the town? Well, that's what the team I had was doing—y'see, I was captain, being kinda handy with me dukes gave me the job. That day, the day of the scrap I am going to tell you about, understand me?"

"Certainly," we said.

"That day we were playing a team captained by Charley Mallay," continued Terry.

"A purse of $5, half of which had been contributed by each team, and the whole of which was to be divided between the members of the winning nine, was the prize, and the game was for blood, y'see. Naturally any game with two much at stake was bound to be filled with tangles and wrangles. So was this game," laughed Terry.

"We used up about a dozen umpires. An ump lasted about an inning and a half before he was tin-canned—some not so long. They say McGraw used to be rough on umpires, but he was Li'l Lord Fauntleroy compared to members of that game down there on that vacant lot near the Thirty-ninth street ferry. At last we got to scrapping so much that, with the game a tie, it was decided that the best way to settle it was to let Charley and I fight it out to see who won the ball game. It was getting dark, anyhow.

"We did.

"We fought for over an hour and a half. I think it was, and we used the baseball gloves for boxing gloves. It was sure a tough go, and I don't know who would have won had not some big guys stopped us.

"Maybe we was kinda glad that they did, cause we were both gettin' winded and sore and banged up anyway, so the game was called a tie, and we split the money and everybody was satisfied, I guess. Anyway, Charley Mallay had been a good pal of mine every since.

"And it was the hardest fight I ever had, and I had a lot of them.

"Say!" said Terry.

"What?"

"S'long. I'm going to work."

And he did.

And today, what?

Well, not all that he would like to have been no doubt, but otherwise Terry is well taken care of. He is with the same people that he started with, Sam Harris and Joe Humphries. Truly no man ever had better friends. Big hearted, generous Sam has looked after Terry in a way that is beautiful. Terry made Harris, and Harris made McGovern. And each appreciates the other. Terry is now living in Brooklyn in a home bought for him out of the fund of $10,000 raised for him at a monster benefit in 1907. The rest of the money is held in trust for him, and Sam Harris guarantees him 10 per cent interest on it as long as he lives. Joe Humphries, his old friend, and also his manager, looks after his wants in detail, and sees personally that his every wish is fulfilled.

So you see the little fellow's "hard battles" are all over.

Jackson Owns Every Honor; Passes Cobb

Cleveland Star Traveling at Fastest Clip of His Career, Milan Continues to Hold Lead at Base Running

Joe Jackson is out for the batting honors of the American league, his consistent hitting during the past week coupled with Cobb's slump, placing the Nap star in the lead with an average of .432. Cobb has slumped to .395.

Not only is Jackson leading the league in individual hitting, but in most every other feature. With 126 bases he leads in slugging; his 80 bingles show a lead in hits; his 19 two-sackers are at the top of the two-base work; his 13 triples take the lead in this department. At hitting home runs Frank Baker with 6 circuit smashes, is at the top. Cole Makers Hunt Thieves

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 14.—As a result of the activity of automobile thieves al lover the country the Cole Motor Car company of this city have added to their national selling organization a department to be known as a bureau of information to assist in the recovery of stolen Cole automobiles. J. D. Rikes has been appointed as head of the bureau. Every Cole owner is to have the benefit of the big army of Cole distributors and dealers in the United States and Canada should he lose his car.

There is hardly a place in the country today where automobile thieving is not prevalent. Although the Cole and other makers of cars are equipped that the owners of the cars, by making it positively burglar proof, still many forget and leave their machines unprotected, resulting in the going on a joy ride and in some cases being driven to distant points. While it is a hard matter for the alleged thieves to get away with the car for a financial value, still the inconvenience that is suffered and probable damage is sufficient for the establishment of this latest department by President J. J. Cole.

Star College Battery Signed by Lookouts

CHATTANOGA, Tenn., June 14—President Andrews, of the local club, announced last night that he had signed the champion collegiate battery of the south in Pitcher Bidwell, of Louisiana State university, and Catcher Breaux, of Jefferson college, at Convent, La.

Breaux is in the city, while Howell will arrive today. Forrest More was sold to make room for the hurler, while Charley Brashear was sold outright to give the young receiver a berth.

HARRY MATTHEWS BIG HIT; WILL MANAGE NEXT SEASON

Former Cracker Makes Good With the Virginia League Outfit

Harry Matthews has been signed by the Newport News baseball club, inc., to manage the Newport News team of the Virginia league for the season of 1914, President Abe Horwitz announced yesterday. Manager Matthews will not given a free rein in getting his players next season as he has been this season and it is believed that he will give Newport News a winning combination from the start next year.

Since arriving here a month ago, Manager Matthews has acquired an entirely new infield, a new catcher and two new outfielders and he expects to have a few more players in the next week. He is determined to give the city a winning ball club and with one or two more good players he will accomplish his end.

The infield which he has brought here requisitionably is the best in the league, taking it from all around. They are all fast men and good hitters and base runners. In Gondolfi he has secured a youngster who gives promise of shining in the baseball ring. This youngster is a fine hitter, great base runner and is the best fielding shortstop in the league, while his throwing to first is one of the features of every game in which he plays.

Taleton, the big first sacker, is a sure fielder, fine thrower and grand base runner and also is a hard hitter and knows the game from every angle. Kernan is a steady fielder, good bunter and fairly good sticker, while Haddow, the new second baseman, who joined the club yesterday, gives promise of filling well the one weak spot of the inner works.—Newport News Daily Press.

Mitchell Car Chosen As Glidden Pathfinder

Geo. P. Docker, manager of the Mitchell Motor company of Atlanta, (factory branch house), advises that th e"Mitchell" car has been chosen as the Official Pathfinder for the "1913 Glidden Tour" from Minneapolis to Glacier Park, Montana.

The pathfinder will start on Saturday, June 14.

Incidentally, it is also mentioned that the 1913 Mitchell has been chosen as Official Pathfinder for the "Wisconsin State Automobile Association 1913 reliability tour" for the "Sentinel Trophy."

While this latter is a contest of local importance, nevertheless, the entire automobile world is interested.

New Orleans police sports will include a 200-yard dash for Chinamen. It will be the first time the police there have held such a contest. The sports are slated for June 30.

Pope-Hartford First to Enter

Motorists all over the country will be greatly elated to know that the government authorities have finally been given permission to throw open the famous Yosemite valley in California to automobile traffic. The first car to enter the Yosemite National park since the closing order was issued six years ago was a Pope-Hartford belonging to Mr. F. J. Walker, of the California Automobile association. The trip into the valley was made at the special invitation of Major Littlebrandt, superintendent of the park, and commanding officer of the regiment stationed there for the purpose of determining proper routes and regulations for automobile traffic. The pathfinder entered the valley on the morning of May 25. When the car drew up at the office of Major Littlebrandt under escort of the United States cavalry, it was greeted by a volley of cheers from a group of visitors and other people who live in the valley. This scene was a notable one in its way since it marked the end of a long, stubborn fight of California motorists for the right to enter the Yosemite. Mr. Walker's car has been turned over to the government and will be used under the direction of Major Littlebrandt in making inspection trips preparatory to opening the park to all automobiles.

On the initial trip into the Yosemite valley, Jack Fleming, the well known Pope-Hartford race driver, had the honor of piloting the pathfinder. The car were some of the most prominent San Francisco newspaper men besides Major Littlebrandt and Mr. Walker. The car ran under army orders from the boundary or the park to the bottom of the valley.

At the boundary of the park it was met by Lieutenant Pegram and a detail of soldiers, who had a barricade of logs across the road to prevent access to the valley by machines which were reported to be planning a "night rush" for the park. The car that had been at the boundary line for two days awaiting the official opening of the park, Lieutenant Pegram escorted the party to the outpost camp, where he received orders to admit the car to the valley. The speedometer showed a distance of 205 miles at Merced grove from San Francisco. Leaving the outpost at 9:30 o'clock next morning, the run to the bottom of the valley and up to headquarters was made in two hours thirty-seven minutes. This is to be used as the official time in preparing a schedule for the machines. No car will be allowed to make the trip faster than this from Merced grove.

Memphis' amateur rowing club will build a club house.

Philly Hitter Jumps to Top As a Swatter

Cravath Now Leads National League—Three Hundred Hitters From Cubs, Pirates, Giants and the Phillies

"Fence Buster" Cravath, of the fast flying Philadelphia club, is at the top of the National league batters, his average being .372. McDonald, of Boston, is tied with the Philly slugger for the lead but he has been in fewer games and the lead really belongs to Dooin's star.

All of the old time stars in the older circuit are pounding the pill a bit often and hard, there being twenty over the three hundred mark. Of this number appear Cravath, Sherwood Magee and Killifer, of the Philly club. Chicago has three over the mark, New York two and Pittsburgh, five.

GEORGIA "OLD MEN" LOSE TO THE VARSITY OUTFIT

Frank Martin, as Expected, Played Star Game for the "Old Men"

ATHENS, Ga., June 14.—In the usual Alumni game the Georgia Varsity defeated the Alumni by the score of 6 to 2. For the visitors, Charles Cox, of ancient repute was on the hurling hill and got away with a nice game, holding the Georgians to no earned runs.

The contest was replete with errors, and vaudeville work, Right Fielder Cannon, for Georgia, made a good bid for a berth on next year's team with a sensational stab at Peacock's line drive which looked like a ditch ball.

Captain McWhorter starred for the Red and Blacks aggregation with the stick.

Frank Martin, of the Championship '08 team made a beautiful stop in right field in the first inning, and Captain McWhorter, who played center pushed him close for honors in the outer garden.

The teams lined up as follows:

Alumni—Peacock, c; Cox, p; T. Scott, 1b; Frank Anderson 2b; Morton Hodgson, ss; John Cooper 3b; J. Watson, lf; M. McWhorter, cf; F. Martin, rf.

Georgia—Dawson, c; Henderson, 1b; Harrold, 2b; Clements, ss; Holden, 3b; Erwin, lf; McWhorter, cf; and Cannon, rf; Hitchcock, p.

Clabby Wins Decision

BUTTE, Mont., June 14.—Jimmy Clabby, of Hammond, Ind., earned a decision over Eddie McGoorty, of Oshkosh, Wis., here Friday night after twelve rounds of fast fighting.

Twice Clabby was sent to the canvas in the first round, but he took the count and came back. The Indiana man received the decision because of aggressiveness and his superiority at infighting.

Norman S. Taber, of Brown university, who finished second to John Paul Jones, of Cornell, in his record-breaking 4:14 2-5 mile at the intercollegiate track and field championships in Harvard stadium, will continue his career in England, where he is due to take up his studies as a Rhodes scholar, following his graduation from Brown.

Carburetor By Atlanta Firm

The remarkable steps taken in carburetion by the Air-Friction Carburetor company, of Dayton Ohio, attracted the Pennsylvania Oil and Grease company, of this city, to conduct a test that they contracted for the entire state of Georgia, with Atlanta as a distributing point.

During the recent flood, which caused a $75,000,000 loss, gasoline proved a scarcity. Many cars had been in the path of the waters and their carburetors with the cork floats became water logged. The Air-Friction Carburetor company lost their offices, but the factory proper was on the third floor, and came forward with Carburetors to supply the needs. It was then the kerosene carburetor was proved a success. It not only developed more power, a greater mileage and a more flexible motor at all speeds, but it also removed all traces of carbon from the motor.

An old Buick 17 was placed in commission and the motor was run continuously for ninety-six hours, through mud and water, rain or shine. The car kept at its relief work, wearing out a complete set of tires and another set was in such condition as to make them unfit for further service. The fuel used was kerosene, and averaged twenty-one miles to the gallon. The carburetor was not adjusted once and the officers in charge had the highest praise for the car and air-friction carburetor.

The carburetor is made of aluminum with brass parts. The simplicity of adjustment, the special improvement for easy starting, the metal float and the improved spray nozzle which handles successfully fuels of low test, offers to the automobile owners a solution to the high cost of maintenance and gives him a carburetor that is not affected by atmospherical changes.

The Pennsylvania Oil and Grease company has one of the new carburetors in cross section showing the manner in which the carburetor works at their office, 549 Whitehall street, Atlanta, Ga.

Use Kerosene

This is the only Carburetor that makes it possible to successfully use equal parts of kerosene and gasoline (same tank) and get better results than by using pure gasoline.

This is the Air-Friction Carburetor made by the Air-Friction Carburetor Co., of Dayton, Ohio. We are the sole agents for its sale in this state.

This Carburetor is sold under a guarantee to give more mileage per gallon, more power, more satisfaction, and at less cost for fuel than by using straight gasoline, or money will be refunded if returned to us at any time within thirty days from sale. You take no chance.

These Carburetors are not an experiment. They have been fully demonstrated and are in daily use, giving perfect satisfaction; in fact, they really do more than is claimed for them. We can furnish a Carburetor for any Automobile, Auto Truck or Stationary Gas Engine. Write us, call on us, or phone us, or we will, if you prefer, call on you.

Big Sales Is Bit Worrying

It is generally known by the American automobile manufacturers that the foreign automobile builders are doing everything in their power to stop the invasion of the American car. This feeling, however, is confined almost entirely to the automobile manufacturers of Europe.

The Russian bankers appreciate that they are losing a large volume of business through this constant fight to keep out the American cars. Business that would have amounted to many thousands of dollars has, in this way, been lost to the Russian banks.

To overcome the difficulty, several of the most progressive banks of Russia have inaugurated an automobile department. It is their intention to handle the automobile business in the same manner that they have successfully handled the implement business. The large banks of Russia are represented throughout the entire empire by branch houses. Through these branch houses they deal with the automobile dealer direct, disregarding the manufacturer.

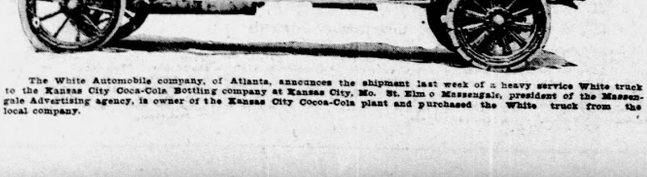
Practically all the retail automobile business in Europe is done on credit. The small retail dealer's funds are limited. Backed by a wealthy bank, he would be placed in a better position to handle the sale of automobiles, and with the backing of a wealthy bank, he would be placed in a position to do an extensive credit business. In this manner the automobile business in Russia is being established on a firmer basis, and foreign business for the American manufacturer looks very promising.

The Paige-Detroit Motor Car company has received contract arrangements with a large bank in Odessa, Russia, for the sale of its product throughout Russia.

ARCHER IS HURT.

CHICAGO, June 14.—Catcher Jimmie Archer, of the Chicago Nationals, will be out of the game several days as the result of an injury suffered in yesterday's game with Brooklyn. A foul tip off Allen's bat dislocated and badly lacerated the second finger of his right hand.

WHITE COMPANY SHIPS TRUCK TO KANSAS CITY



The White Automobile company, of Atlanta, announces the shipment last week of a heavy service White truck to the Kansas City Coca-Cola Bottling company at Kansas City, Mo. St. Elmo Massengale, president of the Massengale Advertising agency, is owner of the Kansas City Cocoa-Cola plant and purchased the White truck from the local company.

Develop the Boys; Camp Life Best

Atlanta Boys Will Spend a Couple of Months at Camps This Summer–Surest Method of Gaining Health

That the south and in fact the whole United States is on the athletic uplift and is indulging in more and better methods of recreation is demonstrated by the fact of so many young boys and in fact young girls being trained up in an athletic and a sportsmanlike manner. Ten years ago no mother would have thought of letting her daughter play a game of golf and as for going to the club tennis grounds that was out of the question in the south and very seldom allowed in the north. But the day of athletic training is here and from the time that the boy is born he is begun on a systematic training schedule. If his father was a college man, then the baby is given more and more encouragement to take part in every form of sport as the "Governor" has hopes of some day seeing his son playing the fullback's place on the Alma Mater team. If the father is not a college man, he thinks of how he did not have the chance or time to indulge in athletics so he says that his son shall have a better chance than did his father, so he too gets the spirit and the boy is encouraged and in fact made to take part in athletics.

The boys of the south furnish the best material of how the coming athletes of the country are being trained. Not merely trained at home but trained at the different country clubs and then the greatest factor in the development of the athletic south is the summer camp which every boy sooner or later dreams of going to. A few years ago there were very few boys in the south that knew what a summer camp really was. Today there are lots of people that are well informed and yet they do not know what the object of the organized summer camp really is. They are ambitious for their children to have broad shoulders, thick chests, a healthy color and a firm walk. They spend a mint of money toward developing this aim and yet never do it on account of the fact that they do not go after it in the right way. One of the worst errors prevalent is to send the boy to the country club and let him play tennis, golf and take an occasional swim or maybe if they are very broad minded they let him swim every day but he is swimming the same old strokes that the boys swam back in the Ark days. He may be developing muscles that will make the boy lump shouldered. This is bad for the breathing.

NO SOUTHERN STAR.

In the recent Olympic meet there was not a single Southern college or city represented. The whole world came from the north and east and a few from California. California has no better athletic climate than the south, but all on account of the fact that the other sections of the country are taking advantage of every possible means of developing their young men and boys and when they finally reach the age where they are eligible to compete they have gotten the jump on the south every time for the fray. They have the physical assurance that they are as good as the best one when it comes to finish development. They know that their coaches are the best in the land and backed by that, they have the assurance of many years of Prep school athletics and are not "gun shy." But the south is coming to the front and within the next few years when an All-American football man is picked it will be an All-American on a and not an All-Eastern team selected from six colleges that are known the world over, but who have no more right to the selection than a college in Florida.

But the South has realized that in order to accomplish anything along these lines they must have ambition along the said lines and that after putting the said ambition, they must develop the young material and that is what the whole south is doing now. Within the next few years when the Olympic team is elected the south will be taken into considerable account and the whole country will be represented on the national squad instead of merely a small section as it is at present. And this consider the number of boys that spend the summer in camp. The same rule that holds in Atlanta holds in every city in the south. Last year at the Camp Greenbrier there were three boys from Atlanta. These were sons of men who are not connected athletics although they are good athletes in other lines of sports, such as golf, tennis and swimming. There were about fourteen boys going to that same camp from Atlanta. And Atlanta was well represented in athletic at this summer training place that is considered by experts to be the best one in the United States on account of the close proximity of the place to good water and the moderateness of the water and of the temperature.

ARE FOUR CLASSES.

The athletes at Camp Greenbrier are divided into four classes according to age. The classes are senior, intermediate, junior and midget. All of the classes are coached for two months in the track events and then at the close of the camp a big meet is held at which time every event of an intercollegiate meet is held. Medals are awarded to the best runners and jumpers and to the best man in each class will be awarded the title of "All Around Champion" of that class. He is given a gold medal with the fasces on the engraved on it and is allowed to wear the letter of the camp. The letter is awarded exactly the same way the college letter is.

HARRY STEARNS WINS.

Harry Stearns, Jr., of 745 Peachtree, was the midget champion last year, winning fourteen out of sixteen events and coming second and third in the other two. He was awarded a medal as for breaking camp records and also a gold medal for the all-round championship. This demonstrates what a true Atlanta athletes and sportsmen should be truly proud of. Here's a young fellow with practically no experience at all goes to a strange camp and walks away with one of the championships. This is the kind of man that will in the years to come be the people in the grandstands rise in their seats as he kicks the ball in truly "Ram it to hell, Jones" style. If the south is to have good athletes they must train the young athletes in the way that they should go. If such a man as Ted Tendleton, all-American centerfielder and halfback considers this way the best to get into condition for the next season it stands to reason that it must be good. John Paul Jones, Brickley and a thousand others too numerous to mention are advocates and regularly annually attend these camps. The south is coming to the front in this line is further evidenced by the fact that there were 140 boys from the best families in the south at Camp Greenbrier last summer. There were sixteen boys from Richmond alone there were twelve from Birmingham, 8 from Savannah, eighteen from Memphis, fourteen from Nashville and about fifteen from Charleston. Besides this famous camp there were several others who gathered large crowds from this city and other sections of the south. Culver is a big drawing card for the boys of Atlanta and the south as are several northern camps.

HARRY STEARNS, JR.,
Atlanta boy who won all-round championship at summer camp.

These camps and summer schools are greatest things for boys as well as young men. The age limit is generally from twelve to about twenty-three.

Every branch of southern sport is engaged in. There is organized baseball, tennis of the highest type, canoeing, boating, fishing, basketball, track work, boxing, fencing, trap shooting, rifle shooting, and in fact everything that a healthy boy would want to engage in. Then there is just enough studying for everybody to make it interesting. To add a bit of spice to it, as it were. Any boy that wants to perfect his swimming strokes should surely spend a summer at one of these camps. There are experts in swimming who teach practically every known stroke and also teach fancy diving.

As a proof of what the camp does for a boy it might be recalled that the Parsons Hill brothers, Harry Geller and Kenneth McRae, all famous athletes of Georgia Tech, received their training at Camp Greenbrier. "Tad" Tendleton trained at the Blue Ridge camp. John Paul Jones at a New Hampshire place. It is very encouraging to the sportsmen of the city to see such large crowds go to these places for they realize that these boys will in a few years be defending the athletic honor of Atlanta and the south.

Take a look at the increased number of little fellows that are playing golf at the different clubs. Go out and take a look at the tennis courts any afternoon and you will realize that Atlanta is to be the foremost athletic city in the south in a few years. Among the Atlanta boys who are signed up for the different places this year are: Jack Cohen, Jack Kontz, Harry Stearns, Edgar Dunlap, Cliff Hatcher, John Hopkins, Joe McCord, Bob Whitaker, Joe Whitaker, Inman Knox, Simon Calaway, Frank Owens, Ed Newell, Norris Broyles, John McRae, Bolling Jones and a good many others who have not yet decided on what camp to sign for. The different crowds will leave about June 25 and will be gone for two months.

Smyrna Mops Again

Smyrna defeated the Company K team Saturday by the score of 20 to 2. Both halves of the game were the pitching of Dunn and Bartlit and the all-round good playing of the Smyrna team.

Smyrna would like to get games with any strong amateur teams for Saturday afternoons. Smyrna still holds her 1,000 percentage.

Expo. Mills won a hotly contested game from Whittier Mills Saturday. Williams starred at the bat for Expo. Both teams played jam-up ball. Mason and Edwards both pitched good ball, only Edwards allowed several long hits, which beat him.

Nolan Is Best Fight Manager Before Public

Uncovered Stanley Ketchel and Jack Monroe and Sent Many Others at the Game in the Proper Fashion

SAN FRANCISCO, June 14.—"Billy" Nolan is the best known and best advertised sporting man in the world. Battling Nelson, Abe Attell, Jack O'Brien, Stanley Ketchel, Jack Johnson, Willie Ritchie and other fighters have sought the diplomatic and fearless manager.

Jack Monroe was started against Jeffries by Nolan in a four-round bout in Butte. Nolan took Stanley Ketchel out of a Butte cafe and started him on his pugilistic stride, thereby uncovering the most sensational piece of fighting machinery since Bob Fitzsimmons retired from the game.

Jack Johnson sought out "Billy" Nolan for advice as soon as he reached California to train for his fight with Jim Jeffries. Nolan carried on his battle until the articles of agreement were signed in this city, and it was through the advice of Nolan that Jack Johnson won that battle. As for his managerial ability, the world knows Nolan is without a peer. He has met the boxing masters of England, New York, Chicago, and, in fact, in every center where the boxing game thrived. His arguments and disputes are matters of ring history. When he took a stand, it was backed by good, sound, logical arguments. When he finished, the verdict was always a Nolan decision.

"Billy" played no favorites. The biggest the man the harder he would battle. His firmness and thorough knowledge of the Queensberry game were hard to overcome.

In Los Angeles in 1906 Herrera and Nelson were matched. The former refused to weigh in. The Mexican wanted to save a $2,500 forfeit for weight. Nolan told the audience in that crowded pavilion that Nelson would box Herrera if he weighed a ton. Herrera sneeringly refused. Nolan replied: "You get on those scales and weigh, as Nelson did, or there will be no battle."

TEXAS PLANS AUTO RACES

NEW YORK, June 14.—According to the announcement of Captain J. W. Munn, of Galveston, who was in town recently, the automobile race meet to be held on the beach course near that city on July 28, 29 and 30 will rank as second to none on the season's calendar of big auto contests. Incidentally it is the only beach meet scheduled for this year.

The feature event will be a 200-mile race, for which $6,000 in prizes is offered, a sum exceeding that offered in connection with the Vanderbilt cup race to be run at Savannah next fall. The Galveston Automobile club and the Texas Automobile association have joined hands for the running of this meet.

Captain Munn states that a large number of entries have been assured, and that he has high expectations of getting several of the foreigners who participated in the 500-mile Indianapolis race to take part, and thus again try conclusions with the leading American drivers.

MASCOTS PLAY A PART WITH EVERY BALL CLUB

CHICAGO, June 14.—Perhaps a discussion of baseball mascots may seem foolish to some, but it's a peculiar fact that mascots have their place in the national game—a place that is larger than generally supposed.

On most of the big teams the mascot, bat boy or whatever you wish to call him, is regarded in the light of a good luck personage by players. Some may laugh and say "superstitious stuff." Yet ball players are superstitious. If they weren't Jimmy Sheckard, formerly of the Cubs and now a member of the St. Louis Cardinals, wouldn't have carried a piece of chewing gum on the top of his cap for ten years. "Ping" Bodie, of the Chicago White Sox, would not have carefully smoothed off the dirt in the batter's box every time he went to the plate. Many similar instances could be quoted.

If mascots were not considered as something Manager Jennings, of the Tigers, wouldn't have been so anxious to secure the colored chap who acted in that official capacity for the San Antonio team for several years. This ancient darky not only retrieves the bats and chases foul balls, but is allowed to make an announcement daily regarding the game of the following afternoon. And it's always the same, as follows:

"Ladies an' gemmun, the San Antonio boys will cross bats on these here grounds tomorrow with Austin (or whatever the rival squad may be). Ah don't know who go down, but all de crackerjacks will all be yeah."

The White Sox also tried to get hold of this fellow, but he refused to leave San Antonio. And if he had been willing to go Owner Block would probably have blocked it.

Several of the major league clubs have mascots who earn their living from the tips handed out by the players and managers. Sometimes a club owner will come across with a crisp bill, but we know of only one instance where a major league club has a mascot on its regular salary roll. This is the Philadelphia American league club.

Those who have seen the Athletics in action will remember the little cripple lad who wears a Philadelphia uniform and handles bats. This boy draws a real salary and accompanies the squad on all its trips, whether during the regulation season or on the training jaunts.

Tom Shibe, son of the owner of the Athletics, laughed when he told about the boy being on the payroll. "I didn't know it myself until he had been drawing his pay for more than a year," said Shibe. "But Connie Mack had him put there, and I'm certainly more than willing."

The Boston Red Sox certainly thought their little bat boy amounted to something in their victory for the world's title last fall. This was demonstrated when the players all chipped in and gave him more than a thousand dollars.

The New York Giants have a very clever little mascot in Jimmy Hennessey. The youngster handles the ball remarkably well during practice and has received applause time and again for some spectacular catch while playing first or in the outfield. Not only Manager McGraw, but the veteran players look on this boy as a bringer of good luck.

When Frank Chance, former manager of the Cubs, visited Chicago for the first time after accepting the berth with New York the first man he asked for was "Red" Galligan. "Red" had been the Cubs' mascot during all those years of the team's success, and Chance regarded him highly.

Anderson Will Make L. Cross Go Fast Clip

Impression That Anderson Is Nothing but Slugging Youngster Is All Work—Has Become Finished Boxer

NEW YORK, June 4.—Leach Cross has started for California, where on July 4 he meets the latest sensation of the west, Bud Anderson, in a twenty-round bout. Leach is going away out there chiefly to show the folks at home that he is even better over the Marathon route than he is in the ten-round game which prevails here. And Leach is getting real money for the trip besides. Judging by the way westerners regard the coming match, the money he gets will serve as fine balm for his wounded feelings when he gets through with the youngster who put the quietus on such sterling battlers as Knockout Brown and Joe Mandot.

There are those in this part of the country who are inclined to look upon the Anderson boy as a tough, clugging youngster, who knows nothing about the finer points of the game, and who would be "pie" for such fighters as Cross, Ritchie and the like.

Maybe so, but Anderson is no mean scrapper. He has just about had a cup of coffee with the elite of boxing, but credit where credit is due. Cross musn't go out west thinking he is going to pick on an easy mark and just pave the walk up to a match with Champion Ritchie. He's going to battle a tough young citizen, who will be benefitted in his crude, aggressive way of fighting by the rules which prevail on the coast.

When Anderson fought Knockout Brown in their first fight to a draw, the queries "Who is Anderson?" began to come in, until they became as monotonous as the old question, "How old is Ann?"

Let's tell you something that Bob Wray dug up about this latest coast marvel. Buddy is no spring chicken, having sprung into the light of day about twenty six years ago in the extreme northwest. For the past seven years he traveled in the northern fight circuit of California and attracted barely any notice. He wasn't even heard of in San Francisco until about six months ago, when he beat Sammy Trott, a fellow who furnished Battling Nelson with his permanent alibi of broken hands. Trott took all of Bat's punches on the head and bent the Dane's knuckles every old way.

Famous Track Sold

NEW YORK, June 14.—Historic Morris park race track in the Bronx was Friday night finally disposed of at the conclusion of a twelve-day public auction of the 3,019 building lots which it contained. The sum realized was approximately $4,000,000.

The auction was authorized by the state banking department in liquidating the assets of the failed Carnegie Trust company and the Northern bank.

VACATION

Recreation under guiding supervision is the vacation planned for the boys who attend Riverside Naval Academy.

Riverside is located on the bank of the Chattahoochee River, as it winds its way "out of the hills of Habersham, down thru the valleys of Hall," and is in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains. Just outside of Gainesville, but connected by trolley, it has a combination of advantages to offer which has won for the title of the "Culver of the South."

RIVERSIDE NAVAL ACADEMY

Water and mountains afford opportunity for aquatic and woodland sports, the cleanest, healthiest exercise possible, and that which instills in each boy that courage, agility, strength and determination which mould the character of after years.

Out-of-door sanitary camp life furnishes one of the chief claims of Riverside Naval Academy. Out in the open, they are drilled, and slept; but there are also ample accommodations in the magnificently equipped military dormitories for those preferring barrack life.

Summer and swimming are synonymous to every boy, whether it be the "old swimmin' hole," or the bosom of the broad Atlantic. At Riverside, every boy is taught to swim. A graduate naval instructor is in charge of all aquatic sports, which include all swimming strokes, plain and fancy diving, life saving drills, rowing, sailing and motor boat driving. Lake Warner forms a splendid body of water, free from treacherous currents and eddies. Constant water patrol robs the aquatic sports of all danger. In addition to the aquatic diversions, there are lawn tennis courts, a baseball diamond with class and company teams, horseback riding, trap shooting and mountain climbing. Life in dry floored and water proofed tents is one of the healthful and picturesque features of this school. Riverside's perfectly equipped dining hall is daily supplied with North Georgia's famous fruits, vegetables and fowls.

All play and no work is a vacation wasted. At Riverside mental progress keeps pace with physical development. The faculty works out a course of study which makes up those deficiencies the boys are anxious to overcome before re-entering school in the fall. It also makes advanced standing possible, thus assuring earlier graduation.

He will be better off, mentally and physically, for a Summer spent at Riverside, under careful physical and mental supervision, free from idleness and out in the open. Summer course of eight weeks including naval instruction and class work, $100; uniforms, $20. No extras. Summer session begins June 26.

Big Regattas Are Regarded As Big Scrap

Until Recently Regattas Were Not Looked Upon as They Are in England but Now It Is Entirely Different

NEW YORK, June 14.—For the past three weeks the waters of the Hudson and Thames has been beaten into a froth by the sweeps of the college crews which have now finished their hard training in preparation for the two regattas at Poughkeepsie and New London that are the classic of rowing in the United States.

The intercollegiate meeting on the deeper river with a fleet of slim shells entered and the more exclusive Yale-Harvard contest of the winding Connecticut stream have indeed brought themselves to equal rank with the historic races of the English universities. So it appears at least to the unbiased observer, but say to an undergraduate of any of the American "rowing colleges" and he will speak with scorn of boat races on a winding creek and an audience that can follow the crews afoot. He can see nothing that can compare with the American contests, when shells filled with husky sweep-swingers dash over a tidewater course and observation trains, ablaze with color and riotous with cheering sections, thunder along the banks.

Perhaps the patriotic collegian is right. At any rate, six crews will soon be settled along Hudson's shores and two more besides the Thames, giving every effort to the task of getting into the front and keeping there until the finish. Yale and Harvard are respectively quartered at Gales Ferry and Red Top. Columbia, as usual, has established herself as the pioneer of the Hudson division and is making the most of a fine new plant for housing both men and boats. All the other crews which are to race at Poughkeepsie on June 21 are on the scene of battle and are indulging in daily practice.

The preparation for these regattas of the colleges is merely history repeating itself year after year. The crews take up their old quarters, go through the same arduous time rows and easy paddles, and then on the day put every ounce of their strength into their oars. At Poughkeepsie, though there is a new element to watch this year, for the crew of the University of Washington, confident of their watermanship and the cunning of their coach, are here to try conclusions with the vetrans of the Hudson. They have their quarters in the place occupied by another west coast crew last June, the hoodoo Leland Stanford eight. But the Washingtonians are not looking for any hoodoo to perch on their prow and express confidence at the result. They are quartered in the little village of Highland, house their shell in the shadow of the Poughkeepsie bridge, and row over the course with the same energy that has already brought some notable victories to them. Their coach, Conibear, knows what they can do. He says that he doesn't hope to have his youngsters beat Cornell, but—well. Conibear can't hide the note of jubilation with which he tells how his lads covered a four-mile course at home in twenty minutes and thirty seconds, just before heading east. And that was not on tidewater either. He figures that means close to the nineteen-minute mark for the distance when the Hudson's current pushes the shell. If that hope comes true, however, the crew that is ahead of Washington will have to hustle some to stay there.

Schmidt Liked By Golf Champ

BOSTON, Mass., June 14.—Walter J. Travis, the only American golfer who ever won the amateur championship of Great Britain, formerly the American title holder and on several occasions the metropolitan champion, entertains a high opinion of the golfing ability of one, W. Heinrich Schmidt, the Worster school boy, who recently made such a startling showing in the British competition at St. Andrews, and was only beaten by the redoubtable Harold H. Hilton, after the match had gone to the nineteenth hole.

The Garden City veteran was asked whether or not he placed Schmidt among the sixteen best American golfers "Oh, yes," said the man who defeated the one and only Jerome D. Travers. "I should go even further than that. Schmidt ranks among the first six. I should say. He is a young man who has the making of a champion in him, although he already holds the Massachusetts championship for amateurs. He is plucky, nervy, and nothing seems to disturb him. I have played with Schmidt and believe he has the real golfing temperament. He was the only player of the Massachusetts contingent to qualify in the national championship at Wheaton last year, and, it will be recalled, barely got in. He lasted until the second round, in which he was eliminated by Charles W. Evans, Jr., by the comparatively easy margin of 6 up and 5 to play. If it had not been for Evans I should not have been surprised to have seen Schmidt in the final. He is a young man who deserves encouragement, and I really expect that he will be heard from again."

WHITE SEES MANY PASS

There is one game no man can beat—the Game of Youth, refereed by old Doc Time.

Last April, a year ago, 144 regulars went to the post on starting day upon sixteen major league clubs.

In the April start just passed 108 of these still remained; thirty-six had gone back to the bushes or the bench; 75 per cent fought their way into another year; 25 per cent fell before the smash of the game whose one iron law is the "survival of the fittest."

There was one change to five clubs; two changes to five clubs; three changes to three clubs, and four changes to three clubs.

Next April another 144 will go to the post—but not the same 144 which started the present campaign. There will be another thirty-six to leave and a new thirty-six to come in and take their places.

The speed, the drive, the smash of the game leave only the few who can face the wear and tear of many seasons. Of those who were regulars six

Reckless Work Helps Dodgers

According to John McGraw, the Brooklyn team is winning because it is playing "reckless ball." He says that Dahlen's team will finish in the first division, but has no chance for the pennant. The Giants' manager intimates that the "reckless ball" that the Dodgers are playing is not real good baseball. He has evidently forgotten though that the Athletics put the skids under the Cubs and then the Giants in two successive world's series by playing the same kind of "reckless ball." For instance, our home run favorite, Baker, was "reckless" enough to pass up a base on balls to wallop the ball out of the lot. Baker and Eddie Collins were continually pulling the "reckless" thing all through the world's series games with the Cubs and the Giants and all they got for their pains was two world's championships. What McGraw has to say of the Brooklyn team should be taken with a grain of salt, it seems. McGraw and Ebbets are deadly enemies and nothing would please the manager of the Giants better than to see the Superbas in last place. Then, too, the Giants are not going near so well as their manager would like to see, so that it is very natural that he should be in a very pessimistic frame of mind.

Again Cincinnati Will Finish Low

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 14.—Cincinnati seems destined to be a disappointment in the National league race once more. The Tinkerites do not appear any stronger than last season. It was hoped that with Tinker covering short field, a position which has been weak for years, the Reds would take a brace and become contenders in the race, but they have gone worse than ever, and there appears to be no hope for the immediate future.

No club in either major league has spent more money than Cincinnati in an effort to get a winning team; yet it has been a consistent failure for years. Ball players have been purchased at fancy prices and fortunes spent in the search for classy material; yet from an artistic standpoint the proposition has been a failure, though manager after manager has been secured to bring about better results. Joe Kelley had his turn. Ned Hanlon tried it. John Ganzel also had a chance, and Griffith and O'Day preceded Tinker, and none of them made a success of the job.

WRESTLERS GET MONEY

NEW YORK, June 14.—All of the crack European wrestlers have gone home with lots of our American money, but very little of it was acquired in this city. Stanislaus Zbyszko and his brother, Vladeck, were the first to depart. The former brought home with him nearly $30,000, most of which he secured in the west. Raymond Zaneaux, the Italian, was also among those to "take the steamboat." He earned enough money to buy himself a castle in his home town. Constant Le Martin, the Frenchman, who gave Zoyszko all the cuts and bruises he took back with him, also sailed, but not on the same steamer with Stanislaus. Not by a strangle hold! George Lurich, who was the man to force Zbyszko to faint because of his hard wrestling, was the last to leave.

The entire bunch promise faithfully to be back again next fall for another slice of easy American money.

Yale's football candidates will have football practice this summer at the Newport, R. I., estate of the late William T. Bull, of New York, a former Yale football star.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

We Control Them

Fortunes have been lost by makers in attempts to imitate these tires.

Faults developed—tires fell down—countless tires came back.

It is not from choice that any maker offers tires that rim-cut now.

Our Secret

The only way known to make a faultless tire of this type is by using braided wire bands in the base.

We use six of these bands—126 wires. We set them at certain angles. Thus we make a tire which nothing can force off, yet a tire which doesn't hook to the rim.

These bands are made by a secret machine, under lock and key. And no way has been found to make anything else which equally serves the purpose.

That is why the demand for this new type centers on No-Rim-Cut tires.

Their Record

No-Rim-Cut tires have been used for seven years—used on hundreds of thousands of cars.

Not a fault has developed. Not a tire of this kind has ever been known to rim-cut.

In addition, these tires have 10 per cent greater air capacity than the same rated size in clinchers. And that, on the average, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

All these advantages, yet no extra price. That is why these tires outsell all others—why the demand grows like a flood. These are now the world's favorite tires.

Write for the Goodyear Tire Book—14th-year edition. It tells all known ways to economize on tires.

FORSYTH

FORSYTH.—Misses Alice and Mary Lou Newton entertained delightfully at their home on Brooklyn avenue on Friday morning for the brides-elect, Misses Clare Fletcher and Lillian Morse. The house was beautifully decorated with cut flowers. Five tables of progressive game were placed, after which an elaborate salad and ice course was served. About twenty-five guests were present.

Mrs. J. O. Eiroid's party Saturday morning was one of the prettiest of the season. Miss Clare Fletcher was the honor guest. The lovely home was beautifully decorated. Progressive hearts were played at five tables, the score cards being red hearts bearing toasts to the bride.

A delicious salad course was served, after which Misses Margaret and Mildred Eiroid came in laden with mysterious packages, containing lovely gifts which were showered upon the popular bride-elect. The loving cup was passed and each guest read her toast and good wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Pleasanton Brooks entertained at an elegant luncheon Monday at high noon for Miss Clare Fletcher, Mr. Thomas Nesbit and their wedding party. "Brookswood" was especially lovely on this occasion, the spacious porches being made more attractive with potted plants.

An elaborate course luncheon was served on the wide eastern porch, which was converted into an al fresco dining room, the green smilax, palms and hydrangeas carrying out the color scheme of pink and green. The long table had as its centerpiece a basket of pink hydrangeas, the handle tied with pink satin ribbon, suspended over this being a shower of sweet peas, the same flower being used gracefully over the lace cloth. Tall silver vases held hydrangeas at each end of the table.

Those seated at the beautifully appointed table were Miss Clare Fletcher, Miss Annie Fletcher, Miss Edith Fletcher, Mrs. W. Harding Norris of Newton, Miss Cora Whitehead of Albany, Miss Anna Wadley of Bolingbroke, Misses Allie May and Grace Neely of Barnesville, Misses Kate Ford, Pauline Pittard, Leslie Wallace, Allee Newton and Mary Lou Newton of Forsyth; Messrs. Misses Lucile Talmadge, Dorothy Thweatt and Louise Phinazee assisted Mrs. Brooks.

Mrs. Mary B. Persons' reception Thursday afternoon was one of the most beautiful affairs of the season, in honor of Misses Clare Fletcher and Lillian Morse, two of the June brides. The elegant home was decorated throughout. The spacious porches, where punch was served by Misses Florrie Hollis, Florence Phinazee and Emma Hunt, was attractive with hydrangeas, palms and ferns.

Miss Mary Persons received cards and the guests were welcomed by Mrs. Ben Chapman and Walter Brambiett. Mrs. B. H. Fletcher ushered the guests into the parlor. Here sweet peas were effectively used in a shadow effect and the mantel was banked with the same lovely flowers.

Receiving with Mrs. Persons were Misses Lillian Morse and Clare Fletcher, Mrs. R. P. Brooks, Mrs. A. W. Brambiett, Mrs. George Sutton, Misses Annie Kate Fletcher and Ethel Morse.

In the dining room Mrs. T. E. Fletcher and Mrs. L. L. Morse, assisted by Misses Mattie Lou Stephens, Marie Rumble, Hattie May and Estelle Laurie Maynard, presided at the table, which was beautifully decorated with pastel shades of hydrangeas and sweet peas.

The table was beautiful. A tall crystal vase held hydrangeas, surrounded by smaller vases of sweet peas. Cut glass and silver bonbon dishes held pink and white heart-shaped mints.

Fletcher-Nesbit

FORSYTH.—The wedding of Miss Clare Fletcher and Mr. Thomas Nesbit, of Cordele, was a brilliant event, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Fletcher, Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The lovely colonial home was beautifully decorated. In the parlor where the ceremony was performed, pink and white hydrangeas, white oleanders and palms were effectively used, forming an improvised altar before the mantel; pedestals held cathedral candelabras, in which white tapers burned and cast a soft glow over the pretty scene.

Just before the entrance of the bridal party Miss Gilbert sweetly sang "The Secret." Miss Edith Fletcher, a sister of the bride, played the wedding march.

The maid of honor, Miss Annie Kate Fletcher, entered first alone, wearing pink satin brocade, chiffon and shadow lace. She carried an armful of pink roses. The groom and his best man, Mr. James Nesbit, of Cordele, came next. The lovely bride entered with her father, meeting the groom at the altar and while "Canzonetta," by Jensen, was softly rendered by Miss Edith Fletcher, the beautiful ceremony was said by Rev. R. M. Dixon, after which a delightful reception was held and congratulations and good wishes extended the happy couple.

The bride's gown was an exquisite creation of dull blue olga crepe, with its lovely little brocade coat to match and an imported hat, veiled in black lace, trimmed with the same pretty shade of blue and French flowers, completed the costume. She wore the groom's gift, a diamond brooch, and her flowers were a corsage of orchids and valley lilies.

In the dining room the color scheme of white and green was beautifully carried out, valley lilies being used. A shower of these lilies, misty fern and tulle was suspended over the table and a plateau of the same lovely flowers formed a centerpiece for the table. Single candles burned in silver candlesticks and silver bonbon dishes held white mints. Mrs. R. H. Fletcher and Mrs. Olin Smith presided at the table, where ice cream and cake were served.

The same white and green color scheme was used in the hall. Pedestals held great jardinieres of magnolias and the stairway and landing were banked with the foliage and studded with these wonderful white blossoms, blending beautifully with the old ivory and mahogany.

Mrs. C. O. Elrod and Mrs. R. F. Brooks received the guests in the hall. Misses Anna Hill, Elizabeth Hardin, Bessie McCowen and Dorothy Thweatt served punch from a bower in the hall.

The presents, which were numerous and elegant, were displayed in the sitting room, which was lovely in the shade of rose, pink roses, gladioli and sweet peas being effectively used. Mrs. Fletcher was assisted by Miss Kate Ford and Miss Mae Cabaniss.

The bride and groom left on the 6 o'clock train, amid showers of rice and good wishes for an extended western trip. They will be at home in Cordele after September 1.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Charles F. Nesbit, of Newton; Miss Cora Whitehead and Messrs. C. M. Heard, J. Slade, S. M. Hunt, John Nesbit, Parrish Nesbit, Forrest Gilbert, and Jim Nesbit, of Albany; Colonel Elkin, of Fitzgerald; Mr. H. Byrom, of Byromville; Mrs. E. J. "Etiquette" in Advertising

Up to within the last few years it has been considered a breach of etiquette in certain businesses and professions to advertise.

These men have said: "Oh, yes, advertising is all very well for the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, but it would not do at all for us. It is not good business ethics."

In later years, however, that idea is being abandoned, together with a lot of other old and wornout theories.

The public now looks to the advertising sections of the good newspaper for information on all subjects. The demand has created the supply.

People want to know not only where they can spend their money, but where and how to invest it. This has led bankers, brokers, and other business and professional men to tell their stories in the best newspaper.

The advertising pages of THE JOURNAL are a veritable index of most lines of business activity in this community, and the day is not far distant when every legitimate business and *every recognized pro*fession will understand the value of advertising.

Those classes which now refuse to pay for legitimate advertising, but incessantly seek free publicity, will come to see that Ethics are better upheld by buying advertising over the front counter than by smuggling it up the back stairs or through the skylight.

PROGRAM COMMITTEE BUSY WITH PLANS FOR MERCHANTS' WEEK

Held Meeting Last Monday and Mapped Out General Nature of the Entertainment for August Convention

CONFERENCE HAD WITH SALESMEN YESTERDAY

Secretary Moore Is Preparing to Mail Out Invitations to 25,000 Retailers in the Southeastern States

Preparations go on apace for the big merchants' gathering here during the first two weeks in August, which is to be held under the auspices of the Southern Merchants' association.

An attendance of 4,000 and a program filled to overflowing with spritely instructive features embracing all phases of retail storekeeping are contemplated by the framers of the porgram. The purely social and pleasure features are likewise being carefully planned, but is hoped above all to make the occasion one from which every visiting retailer may take away some new idea or thought that will be of direct benefit and profit to him in the conduct of his business.

The program committee, consisting of Rolling H. Jones, chairman; J. K. Orr, Willis E. Ragan, C. W. McClure, H. E. Croate, J. W. Vaughn, of Cartersville, and R. C. Couch, of Griffin, held a meeting last Monday and outlined the general nature of the program which is to be that of solid business worth interspersed with such diversions as will make the affair enjoyable from beginning to end.

And on yesterday at the Piedmont hotel the committee held a conference with a large number of traveling salesmen representing Atlanta manufacturing and jobbing firms, to get their suggestions for making the merchants' celebration this year the most noteworthy of any ever held in the city. Many splendid ideas were advanced by the travelers and a number of names were offered of persons who would make ideal speakers for the occasion contemplated.

Rolling H. Jones, chairman of the program committee, stated the object of the meeting and distributed cards to the travelers present to be filled out with the subjects they thought should be discussed and with the names of speakers who would be qualified to make addresses on the topics.

It is desired to make up the program of a large number of short, snappy addresses by retailers on subjects of merchandising and farming as related to merchandising and to the progress and prosperity of the southeast.

The committee intends to make up the program slowly and it will be several weeks, it is likely, before the list of speakers, meetings and entertainments will be finally announced.

Harry T. Moore, secretary of the association, however, is already preparing to send out invitations to the event. Handsome engraved cards have been ordered and these will be mailed to no less than 25,000 retailers in the southeastern states. Mr. Moore's office Friday and Saturday were scenes of brisk activity. The mailing lists were being revised and enlarged and prepared for use during the next two weeks.

The invitation cards will read as follows:

"The Atlanta Merchants' and Manufacturers' association has the honor to invite you to come as a delagte to the Southern Merchants' convention to be held in Atlanta on August 4-15, 1913. And to participate in the entertainment incident thereto.

Kindly reply on enclosed card."

The finance committee last week met with enthusiastic reception from the manufacturers and jobbers on whom they called for contributions to the entertainment fund. While the fund is not yet complete it is only a matter of a few days before it will be, and the largest amount of money yet raised for such purpose is already in sight.

AN AUTHORITATIVE DIAGNOSIS

Officers of the Bradstreet company, presenting thirteen southern cities, assembled in Atlanta last week, were unanimous in their opinion that the so uth is in for a big tide of prosperity durig the rest of the year.—News Item.

ALL ATLANTA TRAVELERS INVITED TO DUTCH LUNCHEON TO PLAN MERCHANTS WEEK PROGRAM

Program Committee Will Hold Conference With Salesmen Next Saturday Evening at 7 o'Clock at the Piedmont Hotel – Big Attendance Is Desired

Traveling salesmen of Atlanta, the program committee of the Southern Merchants' association wants your aid in suggesting subjects and speakers for the big convention of southern retailers which will be held in Atlanta August 4-15.

On next Saturday evening, June 21, at 7 o'clock in the convention hall of the Piedmont hotel, the committee will give a Dutch luncheon at which all the traveling men of Atlanta are cordially invited to be present.

At the luncheon the travelers will be called on for suggestions as to how to make the August meeting one of profit for every merchant who attends. Cards will be distributed on which the travelers will be requested to write the subjects which they think will be profitable to discuss at the merchants' convention and the name of the merchant who, they think, is best qualified to speak on the topic.

The cards need not be filled out at the luncheon Saturday but may be taken by the travelers with them on their trips through their territories where after talking with the retailers about the convention, they will be well qualified to give the committee the desired information.

A large attendance of th travelers is desired at the luncheon. Harry T. Moore, secretary of the committee, has already made arrangement with the management of the Piedmont hotel for a delightful repast and a good time is assured every traveler who will be on hand. All who can attend are requested to notify Secretary Moore at the Rhodes building, at once.

The Merchants' Week in August will be the most important commercial event of the year in Atlanta and the program committee wants it to be one of peculiar benefit to the visiting retailer, one from which he can get suggestions that will mean money in his pocket in the conduct of his business. The committee recognizes that the advice of the traveling salesmen will be invaluable in the mapping out of the program.

Travelers of Atlanta, make your arrangements now to be present at the Dutch luncheon and notify Secretary Moore at once.

The program committee consists of Rolling Jones, chairman; C. W. McClure, J. K. Orr, R. O. Couch, of Griffin; E. G. Thomas, J. W. Vaughn, of Cartersville.

CITY SALESMEN PLAN BIG SUMMER OUTING

Will Spend Six Days at Isle of Palms–Party Leaves July 27

The members of the City Salesmen's association are planning to make their trip to the Isle of Palms near Charleston, S. C., one of the biggest of their annual summer outings.

The party which is expected to be composed of 1,000 persons will leave Atlanta over the Southern railroad in two trains. One train will consist of day coaches and the other, of Pullmans. The round trip ticket will cost only $6.

The outing will last six days and the salesmen will have a large excursion boat for their special use, which will take them to and from the island, and to Fort Sumter, the navy yard and other points of interest. Fort Sumter is closed, but by special arrangements the Atlanta party will be allowed to visit it.

The time will be spent as the individual members of the party desire. There is the historic old city of Charleston to visit, which is like no other city in the United States and whose charm is perennial. The bathing beach at the Isle of Palms is one of the most attractive to be found anywhere on the Atlantic coast. Here there will be all kinds of amusement for the entertainment of the party, surf bathing, boating, roller skating, dancing and motorcycle races. Arrangements have been made for members of the party to stay either at the island or at the Charleston hotel in the city, whichever they prefer.

The salesmen's outings are always composed of a large contingent of young people who see to it that the round of gaiety is never-ending.

The finance and arrangement committee of the association has been busy for several weeks getting everything in readiness for the trip. The committee is composed of W. G. McNair, chairman; James A. Massey, secretary; C. P. Holt, E. S. Morris, Harry Brown and President H. L. Simmons.

EDMONDSTON RETURNS FROM NEW YORK TRIP

Steamer Party Made Atlanta Boosters–They Admit "Atlanta Always Ahead"

A. J. Edmondston, representative of Rona cocoa, has returned from a recent visit to New York City. He had intended staying several weeks, but says that Atlanta looks much better to him than New York. So he returned, after a stay of only a few days. He made the trip from Savannah on the steamer City of Columbus. On board with him were R. H. Parks, of the McGaughey Electric company of Atlanta; E. H. Pennock, cotton broker, of Memphis; J. W. Maskell, of the Edwin Miller Fixture company, Atlanta; L. I. Shivers, of the Carter Electric company, Atlanta; Shelby Smith, chairman of Fulton county commissioners, Atlanta; E. Doyle, of New York City; Robert Hecht, cotton broker, Atlanta, and J. Fitzgerald of the Yale Lock company.

As the Atlantians outnumbered the others, they voted that the party be called the 'Atlanta Boosters," to which others were compelled to assent. Several pictures of the Boosters were made by Mr. Edmondston.

SECRETARY BRATTON WRITES OPEN LETTER TO GA. RETAILERS

Urges Them to Attend Meeting of Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia, to Be Held in Atlanta in July

ALL MERCHANTS, WHETHER MEMBERS OR NOT, INVITED

Editor Firing Line:

I have written the following open letter to the merchants of the state in the interest of getting them to attend the convention in Atlanta in July and work for the passage of two important laws and trust that you will give it publication in the Firing Line.

Mr. Merchant: The time for the holding of your annual convention is near at hand.

As you have already been apprised Atlanta has been chosen as the place and July 21, 22 and 23, the time, your officers are diligently engaged in perfecting arrangements, laying plans and outlining the work that is to be done and which you are expected to help do.

What arrangements are you making to these ends? That you will come, it is hoped, and take part in the deliberations with your brother merchants. This is your duty—do it.

The time is now at hand when the services of every merchant in the state is needed to push for the measures being urged for the benefit of the mercantile interests. And unless they get together and do their duty individually they can not hope for results, or a successful termination of the effort now being put forth for the enactment of a just and equitable garnishment law and a fraudulent check law.

The purpose of this letter is to wake you up to the needs of the hour, you as individual merchants, not as members of the Georgia association, but as just one merchant, a single unit in the wheel of commerce, and as such get you to put your shoulder to the wheel and push with us and thus help to attain the ends desired.

You can help, will you do it? As an individual your influence may be of minor importance and weight, but joined with that of thousands of your brother merchants it becomes a force of wonderful impact and a source of much good when rightfully used.

As a merchant, you should be and no doubt are, deeply interested in these measures that are sought to be enacted into law. It should therefore be your pleasure to do what you can to help put them on the statue books. Just at this stage of the game you could do nothing better than to agitate and talk up the annual meeting to be held in Atlanta July 21, 22 and 23. Never lose an opportunity to speak of it to your brother merchant, urging him to be there, and that you of course will be with him.

You are invited to this meeting, not necessarily as a member of any merchants' association, but as a merchant, to take part in the deliberations of merchants and to help merchants in the good cause in which they are engaged, that of urging the enactment of a good and wholesome garnishment law and a law against the fraudulent check giver. As a merchant you have without doubt felt the need of these two laws on more occasions than one and this being the case you should now be willing to come to the front and help to put them on our statue books. You can do this by coming to Atlanta on July 21, 22 and 23 and joining forces with your brother merchants in the work that is already outlined for them to do.

Remember this, that no matter what part of the state you live, or whether you are a big or little merchant, own the store or a clerk, male or female, you are invited to be here and to do your part in the work to be done.

Make up your mind that you will come and do so at once, then write us at 1124-25 Candler building, Atlanta, Ga., in order that we may know how to arrange for your pleasure and accommodations. It is very necessary that we have this information as early as possible in order that ample provisions be made.

Very truly yours,

JOHN BRATTON,

Secretary of Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., June 14, 1913.

"ATLANTA GOOD PIE TOWN," SAY BAKERY MANAGERS HERE

A. Schrochi, of the Atlanta Baking company, who says Atlantians are big pie eaters, shows that he is one of that number himself.

Big Improvements in Methods of Making–Margin of Profit Not Large–Something of the Favorite Kinds

That great American favorite in the way of edibles, the pie, has a popularity in Atlanta that makes the business of the regular pie counters here compare with the recent activity at the political pie counter at Washington.

Twenty years of pie making in Atlanta by the Atlanta Baking company qualifies A. Schrochi, of this company, to talk on the subject. It is his father who has been making them the twenty years, but as the younger member of the firm was literally 'raised' in a bakery, it might be said his pie experience covers twenty years, too.

"It is a big item in the bakery business in Atlanta," says Mr. Schrochi. "This city is quite a pie town.

"Bakery salesmen go after new customers for pies just about as salesmen in any line do—with samples. As a dry goods or shoe salesman shows his samples, so does the pie salesman, only he hands out the sample to be tested. There are some regular customers whose orders run high.

"But with all the popularity of pies, there is not much profit in them for the baker. The margin is better on other parts of his line.

"Pie making now, however, can be done almost entirely by machinery, while not many years ago it was all done by hand just as when they are made at home. Now there are machines to make the two crusts, put them together and trim them.

"During the winter, mince is the favorite. Cocoanut is second. Cocoanut and potato pies are the big sellers in the summer."

The Atlanta Baking company is the concern that recently took over the plant of the Georgia Baking company on Mangum street and they are building up a large trade in their entire line of products as well as helping meet the demand for the popular pie.

WARE RETURNS FROM MANAGERS' MEETING

Head of Liquid Carbonic Co. Here Tells of Chicago Conference

H. H. Ware, manager of the branch in Atlanta of the Liquid Carbonic company, has returned from the annual gathering of the company's managers at the home offices in Chicago.

"The Liquid managers had their usual live business sessions," says Mr. Ware. "Among the new propositions passed on which affect the salesmen were the 'promotion department' and the 'school.'

"The former is for the especial purpose of considering any suggestions from the salesmen or others for any improvement in the company's methods or goods.

"An eight weeks' course by lecture and illustrations is the idea of the 'school,' which will be conducted at Chicago for those who are to become salesmen or handle customers by mail.

"Our Atlanta office's sales force ranks high with the company. We are going after third place now in sales for the year, which will put our branch here next to New York and Chicago. St. Louis and Dallas are pushing us hard, however, for the place."

It was planned to have a meeting here in July of the salesmen of the Atlanta office, but this has now been postponed to September.

FULENWEIDER WINS SILVER SALES BUTTON

H. G. Fulenweider, Florida man for the Liquid Carbonic company, has already copped the "100 Point Club" silver button for the second quarter by leading his division of the sales force for the first two months of the quarter. It will take the third month to decide the wimer in the other two divisions.

Running a Store and Connecting With the Coin

That's going to be the backbone of the Merchants Convention Program. There's going to be salt to savor it and leaven to liven it. It's going to be a liberal education without the highbrow and the hard-to-take features that kill lots of programs. You merchants with questions to ask and tangles to untwist will get more simon-pure good out of this program than you could annex in a solid year of dig-by-yourself. It's built for the fellow who buys and sells and wants to make more money doing it.

Atlanta is fixing things now to make you have one of the times of your life.
First two weeks in August. Shape your plans to be here all or a part of the time.

MERCHANTS AND MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

WITH THE EDITOR

August Merchants Meeting

The annual gathering here of the merchants of the southeast for a two week's celebration and visit to Atlanta's wholesale market is the most important commercial event of the year. It means untold good for Atlanta, and, for the merchants themselves, appreciation of home enterprises and industries, a thing that will result in saving them freight rates and will bring them the satisfaction that is always to be gained by dealing with people [illegible] knows personally.

[illegible] gatherings, heretofore, have been increasing in measure commensurate with the enhancing importance of Atlanta as a jobbing center. Two years ago 900 merchants attended Merchants' Week. Last summer 2,000 were here. The attendance, it can be this seen, more than doubled the second year, and there is no reason why the number cannot be doubled again this year. Accordingly plans are being made to entertain in the neighborhood of 4,000 guests in August.

The arrangements for the August celebration are being rapidly completed and every jobber and manufacturer in Atlanta should lend not only his financial aid to the undertaking but also his personal help in making the various phases of the entertainment entirely successful. It is a work for the upbuilding of the city that cannot be surpassed.

The Permanent Exhibit

The calling of the manufacturers of Atlanta by the Chamber of Commerce to meet at a dinner, June 24, is a definite step toward securing a building for a permanent display of Atlanta-made goods. The details of the plan will be presented to the meeting and there is no doubt that the project will then be taken up and put into operation with Atlanta's customary swiftness.

The value of such an enterprise to Atlanta is beyond question and to this fact the manufacturers here are undoubtedly now fully awake.

Atlanta is peculiarly the place for such an exhibit. It is the convention city of the south and with its newly organized convention bureau, its fame in this line will be heightened more than ever. It may be truthfully asserted that no week passes that does not see some meeting of trade, fraternal, or church bodies in progress. There is, therefore, a constant stream of visitors passing through the city. A permanent exhibit here would, as it is doing in Chattanooga, attract a large percentage of all visitors.

The permanent exhibit would for this reason be a standing advertisement to the world of Atlanta's greatness as a manufacturing town. Let the effect of this advertisement be felt year by year, and the accumulating results would be reflected in yet more factories coming here and in increasing of the output of those already established. In other words it would add a big slice every year to Atlanta's population and wealth.

If you are a manufacturer and want to do something for yourself and also for Atlanta, you can find no more immediate way than by identifying yourself with the movement for a permanent exhibit.

T. P. A. Week

Last week was a gala time for all good T. P. A.'s everywhere. The national convention of the order was held at Richmond, Va., lasting throughout the week. Its membership now numbers 45,143, a gain of 4,215 over last year. The T. P. A. is one of the great fraternal organizations of the nation. Its benevolent and insurance features are well known, but perhaps its most marked characteristic is its militant spirit in the battle for justice for its members and the traveling public from railroads, hotels, and all other factors which enter into the traveling man's daily existence. And it has translated this spirit into many noteworthy achievements. All honor and success to the noble order.

SALESMEN AT SEASHORE NEED SUN GLASSES, SAYS OPTICIAN

R. A. DeVore, optician, of A. K. Hawkes company, telling of tinted lensed spectacles.

"Smoked" Glasses Growing in Popularity—Why They Are Needed—Salesmen Especially

Salesmen off for the seashore, listen. R. A. DeVore, of the A. K. Hawkes company, opticians, has something to say to you.

It is in regard to the use of "smoked" or amber-tinted glasses to prevent the glaring sunlight of the beach from causing an eye strain that may give you visions of dancing blue devils.

The optical man doesn't guarantee you will see such things if you don't wear the "shaders," but he does warrant you won't have such troubles if you do, and gives a few reasons why they should be used and how the increased sales on tinted glasses show that people are learning how much assistance they are.

Says Mr. DeVore:

"Most folks don't realize the comfort of the 'smoked' glasses until they try them. You can't realize it unless you have made the comparison of with and without.

"Any oculist will tell you that the ultra-violet rays—the white light—when intense, as at the seashore, causes a strain on the eyes. Amber glasses, with only the slightest tint to the glasses, offsets completely this effect of the ultra-violet rays.

"Many more of these sun glasses are being sold than in former years. The season for selling them is just getting under way now and from the sales it seems that they will be a commoner sight than ever before.

"Any one who is out in the sun much, as a salesman is, should consider this strain on his eyes and take needed precautions."

This suggestion is brought to the attention of salesmen for what it is worth and regarded as especially timely, as many of the travelers are planning a stay at the seashore, as well as the city salesmen, whose association will have its annual outing at the Isle of Palms.

WARD OPTIMISTIC OVER TRADE OUTLOOK

Expects Fine Fall Business, Collections Feel Impetus of Fruit Crop Money

Talking of the outlook in the wholesale dry goods business, W. A. Ward, of the Ward-Truitt company, the Atlanta jobbing house, was optimistic yesterday.

"I am expecting sales and collections both to be good this fall," says Mr. Ward. "Already the effect is being felt of the money being brought in by the new fruit crops—the melons and peaches, etc.

"This is, of course, nothing to the improvement that will come when the cotton is marketed. With reports of crop prospects as favorable I think we can all look forward in the dry goods line to a good fall.

"Buying may not be unusually heavy, but I predict it will be a good, sound season for us."

W. R. Simpson, of Jones Brothers & Co., got some fine orders for mixed carload shipments of the Jones products at Eufaula, Ala., and Columbus, Ga., last week.

HAWKES GLASSES
What is a Real Business Man?
Why, he's the fellow that's right on the job day and night, looking after the leaks; getting ready for a rainy day; keeping the resources well within a safe limit; guarding the credit of the house; reaching out after new business. He's a regular conserver. He's a good man to pattern after—no difference what you undertake. He's the man that's sensible enough to apply business methods to his personal health. When his eyes begin to annoy him—give out easily, strain and will not permit him to do continuous, close work without unnecessary fatigue, he gets busy—has an examination made and gets glasses. That's simply good business. Suffice to say we've been fitting glasses for the southern people for fifty years, and—well, that's sufficient for a real business man to know.

MANY U. C. T. CANDIDATES TO BE INITIATED JUNE 21

Councils 18 and 505 Will Hold Joint Meeting for Initiation Ceremonies

Editor Firing Line:

E. P. ("Earl") Harris, general salesman for the N. K. Fairbanks company for north Georgia, will stir the trade up for his firm in south Alabama and west Florida for the next two months. Old Earl is good at flushing them.

U. L. Cox, junior counselor of Atlanta No. 18, U. C. T., is at home after a successful trip for his new firm in Alabama and Mississippi.

Atlanta 18 and Fulton 505 will hold a joint meeting the afternoon of June 21, for the initiation of candidates. There will be great doings. Some twenty-five or thirty are to be put over the desert sands. This was necessary because some of the boys could not be with us at night. All visiting U. C. T.'s are cordially invited.

The writer visited council 505 last meeting, and was pleasantly surprised to met so many of the No. 18 boys on the same mission he was. That is the way for U. C. T.'s to do; take interest in other councils.

E. M. Lunceford, No. 18's faithful secretary, is always on the outlook for positions for the boys. He has landed several lately.

The writer was extremely sorry that he could not accept the invitation of the Hotel Men's association to meet with them at Savannah on June 13 and 14. But he received the notice too late from the grand council secretary, and for business reasons, he had to decline.

All traveling men feel very friendly towards the hotel men. They know that the majority want to do all they can to make the hard lot of the traveling men as comfortable as possible, and it is only the fellow that will not do, until the hard hand of the law gets him, is the one we are after.

Yours very truly,
H. D. SHACKELFORD,
Press Committee, U. C. T. No. 18.

PETERSON JOINS FORCE OF CLARK WOODENWARE

A new salesman with the Clark Woodenware company is Z. B. Peterson.

Mr. Peterson will work as a specialty paper box salesman and is at present in the Birmingham territory. He joined the company last week but is already experienced in this line having formerly represented a Birmingham concern and later another Atlanta company of similar nature.

The Clark Woodenware company are manufacturers of paper laundry boxes, egg cases, lard trays, etc., besides being jobbers of house furnishing goods.

MANY GOOD ADVERTISING

Head of Hotel Equipment Co. Knows How to Prepare Strong Copy

"I think I am where I am today because I have always been a strong believer in advertising."

This is what A. B. Ware, president of the rapidly growing Hotel Equipment company, and one of the most successful of southern hardware retailers, said when he was persuaded to talk of himself.

A. B. WARE.

"I was raised in the country on red potatoes and pine mast, but when I got into business I was able to see the value of proper advertising and have always given my best ability to trying to get up something novel to hold the public attention."

Mr. Ware was originating unique advertising twenty years ago when he had a hardware store at Opelika, Ala. He has in his desk now a "birthday book" in which he made it a custom to register the date of birth of Opelika youngsters, to whom he would send a birthday remembrance each year, with compliments of the firm. Those whose names are in the book are grown now. When they occasionally get a card from the former Opelika man wishing them a happy birthday they wonder how he happens to remember the date so well.

His advertising has always been marked by originality, and he has made hits with a number of unique schemes. Some of the best advertising copy ever run in Atlanta papers was written by Mr. Ware during the years he was in the hardware business here before he left that field to enter the similar but more specialized one of hotel equipment.

His company is the only one of its kind in the south and has grown rapidly since it was organized about four years ago, the capital stock having been increased over 400 per cent during this period. The company specializes on all articles used in the hotel dining room and kitchen.

He and his associates are now organizing the Hotel Linen Supply company, which will be operated in connection with the general hotel supply business.

B. B. JONES WRITES OF UP-TO-DATE HOTEL

Editor Firing Line:

I read with interest the Firing Line last Sunday. Glad to see the optimistic feeling. I presume the boys had a fine time at Richmond, I regret I could not be there.

If any of the boys should ask you about a good hotel in Savannah, advise Hotel Collins. Full value received, generous and courteous treatment. I presume the Firing Line next Sunday will be the "best yet."

With best wishes I am yours truly,
B. B. JONES.

R. J. Bates, of J. K. Orr Shoe company, just back from a pleasure trip to New York, tells us he will be back among his merchant friends down the West Point road this week. He was in New York during the "freeze" of a few days ago and is mighty glad to be back in Georgia.

A. L. Deihl, with the M. C. Kiser company, came in from the road yesterday with one of the best lots of orders for any week this season.

J. O. Chambers, ith the Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., will be out and after them again next week after a short stay at headquarters in Atlanto.

J. R. Little, of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, has returned from New York where he has been for two weeks looking after fall buying.

C. A. Smith, of the A. M. Robinson company traveling force, has proved that he has now become a full fledged Atlantan by announcing the purchase of a home on Piedmont avenue near Piedmont Park. He moved to Atlanta from Fayetteville last fall.

F. W. Webb, the South Georgia salesman of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, who has been out on the road continuously since the start of the season in May, is not expected in Atlanta for several weeks yet.

C. B. Rosser, the "vet" of the A. M. Robinson company sales staff, is in Atlanta for Saturday and Sunday after a six weeks trip. He is feeling good over the prospects for fall business in his Carolina territory.

Tom Yon, who works Florida for the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, is reported to be getting postage due stamps on his order envelopes recently, some of them were so bulky.

W. F. Seay, with the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, will be back in his Alabama territory next week. He has been in Atlanta at the company's headquarters for a short while.

Chris Irby, with the A. M. Robinson company, has been out on the W. & A. part of his territory for the last several days and had an especially good business at Rome.

D. L. Lassiter failed to turn up at the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt offices yesterday morning as it is his regular custom and the company is looking for a big order from him Monday morning as the reason.

Joseph Levy, of New York, has recently joined the force of Baiser, Goldberg & Co., wholesale grocers and produce dealers, of 201 Peters street, Atlanta. Mr. Levy is making rapid progress with his new connection. The company is a comparatively new firm but are already enjoying an extensive trade.

J. J. Eley and S. E. Bayliss, salesmen for the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, will spend another week working Augusta and vicinity. They have finished one week there with good results.

A change of name from Dixie brand to Johnson brand would be in order at the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company on their sweet relish because of the big sales of R. W. Johnson, the city man on this article. He has been making it a specialty with great success.

W. T. Redmond, who formerly lived in Atlanta and a traveling salesman well known here, made Atlanta last week in the course of one of his regular trips through this territory, spending several days here. Mr. Redmond and his family now have their home in New York but they still like their Atlanta, says he. He represents the Eddystone Manufacturing company.

Obie S. Johnston, Georgia sales manager of Carroll, Adams & Co., has been on an extensive trip with his new fall line of shoes. He will be in Atlanta Monday.

The McClure Ten-Cent company has opened another retail store, this making the ninth of their chain of five and ten-cent establishments. The new store is at Union, S. C.

BROWNLEE WRITES OF DOINGS OF COUNCIL 505

At Joint Meeting With Council 18 June 21, Candidates Will Be Initiated

Editor Firing Line:

R. L. Wallace of the D. R. Wilder company returned from a south Georgia trip Friday night.

G. W. Brownlee of the McCord-Stewart company is reported on the sick list.

There will be a joint meeting of councils 505 and 18 on Saturday, June 21. Out-of-town candidates will be initiated as well as any others who may be on hand. Twenty-five or 30 will be put through the ceremonies. All U. C. T.'s are invited to be present.

A. V. Dickens of the Happ manufacturing company reports good business for the past week or two. Dick is some hustler, all right.

W. G. Moore has returned from a business try and reports everything O. K. W. G. is the original hustler and some talker, too.

Secretary Brownlee has ordered a fine of $10 for council 505 whenever it meets without initiating some candidate. You always miss something good when you fail to attend these meetings.

R. W. Holcomb with the Cotton States Belting company left last week on an extended trip through south Georgia. Brother Holcomb is a good U. C. T. and is always boosting the order.

Secretary Brownlee is continuing to receive applications for membership in 505. Where is your? Sen dit in.

T. H. Lewis, member of 505, will leave June 20 to attend the meeting of the supreme council at Columbus, Ohio. This is his first trip to Columbus as representative of the Georgia-Florida grand council.

TRUCK LOAD OF BIBLES DISTRIBUTED BY GIDEONS

One thousand Bibles, an auto truck load, were distributed in the rooms of the hotels of Atlanta yesterday afternoon by the Atlanta camp of Gideons. The distribution began when the big truck rolled up to the Kimball hotel at 2:30 o'clock and the party of Gideons with the Bibles in baskets made the round of the Kimball rooms. Following this the other hotels were visited and supplied with Bibles.

The distribution of Bibles is one of the regular activities of the Gideons whose slogan is, "A Bible in every room in every hotel in the United States."

The Bibles are placed in the rooms for the use of every one who occupies it, and especially for the use of traveling salesmen.

THIS SALESMAN CANNOT DENY HE USES BULL; TRAVELER HIRES UNIQUE TRANSFER OUTFIT

Dry Goods Man Utilizes Ox-Cart for Trip From Hotel to Depot

J. Sam Cheek is an example of how a real traveling salesman always "gets there," regardless of circumstances.

When this firing liner found himself at Loganeville, Ga., a few days ago, his consultations with the merchants finished, his trunks packed and everything ready to catch the train which was due very soon, but with apparently no method immediately available of getting his trunks transferred to the depot, he got busy and proved there was a way by finding and hiring an ox cart.

It was slow traveling, but he got there on time, even after stopping on the way to call out a photographer to prove to us when he got back to Atlanta, just how well he can use the "bull" when occasion demands.

Sam Cheek, of the Ridley-William son-Wyatt company, at Loganville, Ga.

Mr. Cheek travels north Georgia for the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, the Atlanta dry goods jobbing house, and is a good salesman as well as a good fellow.

WARREN CO. MAKING NEW "CUBIST" CRAVATS

Typical of the way such Atlanta industries keep pace with the latest styles, the Warren Manufacturing company are turning out "cubist design" ties at their factory on West Mitchell street.

The new cubist ties are only a few days old in Atlanta but already H. L. Minor, the company's city salesman, is confident they will be a big seller.

Another novelty the company has out, which has been selling in good quantities since put on the market several weeks ago, is the tie with the Bulgarian designs.

EVERY GROCERY STORE CLOSED, SAYS PRES. CAMP

O. T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers and Butchers' association, is delighted with the success of the movement for Wednesday half holidays for the grocery store employes.

He and W. A. Byers made a tour of the city in the latter's car Wednesday afternoon and were unable to find a single grocery store anywhere in the city that was not closed.

They later visited Piedmont Park, where there were three ball games going on between teams organized by the grocery clerks. There will be a series of games between the teams of the North Side and the South Side.

WITH SOUTHERN RETAILERS

H. M. Hughes, the fancy grocer of Newnan, Ga., is very busy these days. A fine new boy at his home is keeping him on the jump.

J. A. Jones, general merchant of Fairburn, R. F. D., is now traveling in his new automobile. He has taught it how to stop when he says "Whoa!"

J. E. Almand, of the E. L. Adams company, reports that J. S. Michael of Temple, Ga., grocery dealer, has repainted his store, given it a general overhauling, and has increased his stock, and now has one of the most jam-up places in the state.

Mrs. W. P. Zuber, wife of the Auburn, Ala., merchant, and Miss Nora Lee Wise, his buyer, were in Atlanta last week buying for the fall season at John Silvey & Co.'s.

The new branch store at West Point, Ga., of Hollingsworth & Norman, is one of the most attractive little stores of its kind to be found, says Morris Croft, who travels for the Ragan-Malone company. Both members of this firm are young men and are expected to be as successful with their branch store at West Point as they have been at their main place at Opelika.

O. E. Kenimer, the M. C. Kiser company salesman, is going to take a vacation in July that will be his first one in ten years.

Do you own an Automobile

If you are a retailer of shoes and think that for that reason you are unable to afford the luxury of an automobile, you are wrong.

You can do more than merely eke out an existence!

Your business should be—and can be—so conducted that it will pay all legitimate bills, pay you a good salary, and then leave you a substantial dividend each year—a dividend that will make possible, among other luxuries, the owning of an automobile.

How can this be done

Buying and selling are the two main factors of every retail business. The custom of your locality practically fixes the prices of the various grades of your shoes. There's but little latitude in selling. Well, then, how about the buying end?

How to buy properly

"The right goods PROPERLY BOUGHT are half sold."

Other things being equal, would you rather pay $1.00 for freight, or 50c? Other things being equal, would you rather wait six days or only six hours for a bill of goods?

The Atlanta Merchants & Manufacturers Association points out these differences in favor of Atlanta. By establishing one of our distributing houses in Atlanta, we have put it in your power to avail yourself of these advantages. At all times we offer you a complete assortment of our style merchandise, direct from the great factories of the present company.

Ask for catalogue or salesman; we will gladly send either or both.

To the Traveling Men of Georgia

We want to get in touch with a good many traveling men throughout Georgia, men that are now selling to the general store, in the smaller towns, and also making the country stores. We are trying to reach the men that travel their trade regularly. You can carry our sample in your vest pocket, and it will only take a minute or so, after you have finished with your customer. Our goods are advertised, and repeat wherever placed. What we will pay will help out nicely, and help you overcome that high cost of living. This is a traveling man talking to you, and he knows. You can make from $50.00 to $75.00 every month in the year without half trying. A sample to every traveling man that answers. Give me your permanent address.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

ON THE ROAD AND IN THE OFFICE WITH ATLANTA'S BUSY ARMY OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

W. A. Quarles, of Fain and Stamps, wishes to call the attention of the housewives of Atlanta to the very fine brands of pickle, preserves, and condiments now being made by Atlanta factories. He thinks that a trial of these products will make the housewives here steady patrons of home industries.

Olin Stamps, Jr., of Fain and Stamps, is some swell when he gets out in his car on Peachtree street.

The Atlanta delegation of credit men will leave Monday for Cincinnati to attend the meeting of the National association of Credit Men. On account of their absence there will be no regular Wednesday luncheon this week.

W. W. Thrasher, representative of Thomas, Roberts & Co. of Philadelphia, was perambulating among the Atlanta jobbers last week.

C. P. Taylor, representing J. K. Armsby company, of San Francisco, was in Atlanta last week in the interest of California dried and canned fruits.

W. O. Stamps, of Fain and Stamps, attended the meeting of the Georgia hotel men at Tybee last week.

Thomas Cain representing Burnham & Morrow, of Portland, Me., was selling his famous Paris Sugar corn with the Fain and Stamps salesmen last week.

Last week was pickle week at the H. L. Singer company. The firm has recently taken on the pickle products of Knadler & Lucas. Mr. Jasper, representative of the latter firm, was in the city working the trade with Joe Brown, one of the Singer city salesmen. They brought in a flood of orders. Harry Brown, another city salesman, had a killing on pickles and I. R. Banks, shipping clerk, says that he had to get a new file just to accommodate the pickle orders. And Donald McKie, of the office force, is running the adding machine overtime. Between preparations for moving to their new building at Hunter and Haynes streets and taking care of the pickle rush, the Singer company finds these very busy days.

G. B. McDowell, sales manager of the E. L. Adams company, who has been recuperating at Indian Springs, writes his firm that he will be back on the job Monday.

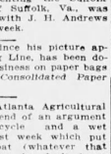
Mr. Delk, representing the Suffolk Peanut company of Suffolk, Va., was working the trade with J. H. Andrews and company last week.

F. H. Glasgow, since his picture appeared in the Firing Line, has been doing a tremendous business on paper bags for his firm, the Consolidated Paper company.

H. E. Dean, of Atlanta Agricultural works, got the hot end of an argument between his motorcycle and a wet street car track last week which put him hors de combat (whatever that means). Ewing says he don't know who came out on top but thinks that the motorcycle and car track were both on top when he tried to pick himself up. Yes, he's out again, thank you.

Edgar Shyer, of the Consolidated Paper company, was in yesterday. C. S. Harley, of this company, will spend Sunday at Anderson, S. C. E. Owens, city salesman, turned in some fine business last week.

F. B. Florence, of the J. D. Frazier company, is a versatile man. He knows how to put over big sales of Mo-Grain and Alfarina and he can also trace back the history and use of alfalfa to Biblical times. In addition, he finds time to be an active T. P. A. worker, but Mr. Frazier can get his goat when these two sit in at a card game. Be it known, however, immediately, that the game is merely a friendly contest of skill at bridge and not at poker.



Lawrence H. Moore, of Atlanta Agricultural works, put in a few days the past week working over his models and getting ready for his fall trip. Lawrence looks like a real mechanic with his overalls on.

Frank S. Dean, vice president of Atlanta Agricultural works, left Friday for a fishing trip. Look out for the record to be broken on fish yarns. Here's hoping he will catch a whale.

Jack W. Evans, of Atlanta Agricultural works, is about the best posted man in Atlanta on the Mexican war. Jack says that the nearer the time comes for him to make his Mexican trip the harder they get to fighting, so he is going to take a trip into Cuba until the Mexican hostilities at least get back to normal.

P. H. Jeter, of the John Silvey & Co. sales staff, was in Atlanta Saturday for the first time in about three weeks. The Silvey salesman, whose home is at Albany, was married recently and doesn't get up to Atlanta for the week-ends as he did in the old days.

R. H. Sewell, salesman for John Silvey & Co., came in from the road yesterday with a good lot of orders.

W. C. Beard, representing the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company, is another Atlanta traveler who is now on the lists of the vacationists. He stored his sample cases away last week and will spend his vacation, it is understood, at his home at Doerun, Ga.

If B. C. Fowler's target record on the real firing line of the Fifth regiment shoot shows up as well as his record on the city firing line selling goods for the Capital City Tobacco company, he "should NOT worry." The tobacco salesman is a first lieutenant and has been spending most of the week at the rifle range.

J. Lee Duncan, secretary-treasurer of the W. S. Duncan company, accompanied by his wife, left Atlanta yesterday for ten days at St. Simons Island.

"Our sales for May and so far for June show ahead of the same period last year," says H. S. Collinsworth, secretary of the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company. That sounds good.

W. E. Park, the Capital City Tobacco company salesman, is still on the sick list. He has been off several weeks now and is still too ill to tackle work very soon.

Fred S. Davis, the recent addition to the sales force of the Liquid Carbonic company, is doing well in his new line. H was connected with the bottling end of the soda water business before he went with the liquid. His territory is South Carolina.

T. B. Lewis, traveler for the Capital City Tobacco company, has been appointed special delegate to the U. C. T. national convention and will leave soon to attend the big gathering at Columbus, Ohio.

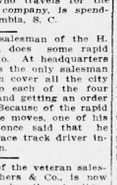
Things are happening to John Irvin Gossett, the southwest Georgia salesman for the Liquid Carbonic company. He has just piled up a sales record during the last month that is twice the size of that of the next two salesmen in his division combined and he is the proud father of a fine new boy.

R. L. Ezell, with the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company, is off for a ten-day vacation trip to New York via Savannah.

W. H. Rosenfeld, of the Rosenfeld company, returns to Atlanta today from the east, where he has been on his honeymoon.

Albert Levy, traveler for the Rosenfeld company, is expected in this week from Tennessee for a short stay in Atlanta.

H. L. Singer, of the H. L. Singer company, suggests that in view of the half holiday Saturday afternoon by the grocery jobbers and the half holiday Wednesday afternoon by the retail grocers and butchers, that the latter be a bit lenient with the jobbers in the matter of deliveries and that they speed up their orders to the city salesmen so that business may be handled satisfactorily during the shortened time that will now prevail during the summer weeks.



R. E. Dawson, of Jones Brothers & Co., is one happy man and there's a reason. Last week he put over a sale of five carloads of pickles, preserves and condiments to C. R. Witt & Co., of Tampa, Fla., one of the largest and most progressive jobbing firms in that state. The factory force were busy last week getting out the last of the cars to the Witt company. Mr. Dawson has been with the Jones company for fifteen years and has long been accounted one of their star men. He will spend the next two weeks working the trade in the Birmingham territory.

R. L. Duncan, who travels for the Clark Woodenware company, is spending Sunday at Columbia, S. C.

J. T. Cook, city salesman of the H. L. Singer company, does some rapid traveling in his auto. At headquarters it is said that he is the only salesman in the city that can cover all the city every day, going to each of the four corners of the city and getting an order from each corner. Because of the rapid speed with which he moves, one of his sales cards once said that he should be an auto race track driver instead of a salesman.

L. C. Miller, one of the veteran salesmen of Jones Brothers & Co., is now working the trade in the territory around Monroe, N. C.

Last week was called "Uno" week by G. W. Brownlee, of the McCord-Stewart company, because of the big sales which he enjoyed on his firm's own Uno brand of coffee. He also had good sales on pie peaches, grape juice and apple jelly.

"The Drummer" is the title of an interesting article by Jack McCutney, appearing in the Rome Tribune of June 8. He tells of traveling salesmen, their faults, good qualities, tribulations and successes. A copy of the article was sent the Firing Line by Salesman O. G. Ledbetter, of Rome.

Seven carloads of pickle products was the record at Jones Brothers & Co. last week. This constitutes the biggest shipment the company has had since the Atlanta branch was established.

H. L. Singer, of the H. L. Singer company, had planned an outing and fishing trip with W. H. Mann at the latter's country place at Malone, Ala., but a telegram from Mr. Mann stated that the river was so high and the weather so cold that the outing had best be postponed. Mr. Mann is representative of the Hopkinsville Milling company and lives at Roanoke, Ala. He likes Atlanta so well, however, that he is thinking of moving here with his family.

J. L. Shipp, with the Malsby company, is becoming quite a "regular traveler" for his concern. He is off now on a two weeks' trip.

Veteran of Road

T. S. MATHEWS.

Mr. Mathews travels for the Dinkins-Davidson Hardware company and lives at Albany, Ga. He is about sixty years old and has been on the road practically all his life. He has traveled for his present firm for twelve years. He is the father of five daughters and three sons. His two grown sons are both successful business men. One is T. W. Mathews, assistant comptroller of the Seaboard railway at Portsmouth, Va. The other is T. D. Mathews, a prominent insurance adjuster of Atlanta.

MERCHANTS FAVOR LAW FOR HOTEL INSPECTOR

Shirley Says Bum Hotel Hurts the Business of Any Town

Editor Firing Line:

Dear sir:

I've been so busy getting signatures to my petition that I haven't had much time for anything else. I've gotten about a thousand signatures, besides seeing legislators, whenever possible, and everybody I talk to regarding the position, which we hope to have created, is unanimously in favor of it.

The merchants in the towns of poor hotels, especially, are anxious to have a state hotel inspector. They know what a good hotel means to any town; a good hotel is a valuable asset to any town. The merchants in a town where there's a good clean hotel always have opportunities offered them that other merchants never get a chance at.

Traveling men cut out the town if the hotel accommodations are bum, and the merchants in that town are the losers. Show me a town with good hotels and I'll show you merchants who do a nice business. Take my home town for instance. I'll venture to say there are 50 per cent to 100 per cent more traveling men make Macon now than when we just had the three commercial hotels. Everybody said Macon was overdoing the thing, but they all keep well filled. The three old ones, and the four new ones. Traveling men today demand a nice clean place, and wherever it is this way, they generally spend as much time as possible there.

The hotels that have the traveling men spend Sunday with them are the clean ones. Take Albany, Griffin, Hawkinsville, etc., and of course, the larger cities like Atlanta, Macon, Savannah, Columbus and Augusta for instance, these towns enjoy a good Friday, Saturday and Sunday business, which days are practically dead ones with the insanitary hotels.

No, the traveling men don't necessarily go to the cities for Sunday. They get enough of the noise, hustle and bustle of cities during their business visits, and would really prefer spending a quiet, restful Sunday, if the hotel there is clean.

There are insanitary hotels in the larger places too, I know that. We have a few of this kind in Macon, a very few, however.

Let's all work to have a state hotel inspector appointed at the next general assembly, this month.

We've got the law compelling them to give us sanitary accommodation. Now let's get an inspector to see that that that law is enforced.

Very truly yours,

L. A. SHIRLEY.

Macon, Ga., June 12, 1913.

ROSENFELD CO. SELLS BIGGEST SINGLE ORDER

The biggest single order the firm has handled since it started ten years ago was received by the Rosenfeld company last week.

It was an order for house furnishings goods from a Birmingham furniture house, the buyer making a trip to Atlanta to select the goods.

The big bill of goods amounted to nearly $6,000 and was sold by A. W. Rosenfeld.

ATLANTA COMPANY STARTS SALES CAMPAIGN ON NEW PAPER TOWELS

Sends Specialty Salesmen Throughout South to Solicit Hotel Trade on Sanitary Crepe Towels and Individual Drinking Cups

Traveling salesmen will soon find the new sanitary paper towels in many hotels if the squad of specialty men being sent out by the Atlanta Paper company lands the business expected.

A test has been made of the demand for such an article with the result that the hotel keepers as a class were found favorable to the idea.

The new paper towel is claimed to be especially suitable to hotels and because of the reception it has already met from the hotel men, the Atlanta Paper company specialty salesmen are being sent out.

Hotel keepers in every town throughout the southern states will be visited by these specialty salesmen and it is not likely that travelers will soon see the results of the Atlanta Paper company campaign.

Already the paper towel has made its appearance in some hotels. It has not been satisfactory to some guests because they did not know the proper method of using it. It should be used in the manner of a blotter instead of as an ordinary towel.

Another novelty these specialty salesmen expect to put in southern hotels is the individual paper laundry bag. The regular trade will also be worked thoroughly on both these articles. The campaign also includes the paper drinking cup.

J. Schroeder and Gabe Sams have already started out and a third specialty man, E. W. Brown, will go out next week.

The salesmen will work in the same district but it is planned for them to cover several states pushing the paper company's new novelties for hotel use.

This is the first time that the salesmen of the concern have gone direct to the hotels with such articles.

S. P. Belsinger, traveler for the Atlanta Paper company, is shown illustrating the use of the new toweling.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

W. S. Jones, who has no particular headquarters but spends all his time beating up the business in south Georgia for the A. M. Robinson company, has been out about six weeks now, and is still not expected home for a visit before the first of August.

R. E. Sloan, Jr., Tennessee salesman for the M. C. Kiser company, is in from his territory for a very brief stay in Atlanta.

W. H. Eckford, Mississipi traveler for the M. C. Kiser company, who has been vacationing in Atlanta for the last ten days, will be back in his territory and after business in his usual successful way this week.
